Refreshments of coke, pretzels and crackers were served throughout the evening under the direction of Mildred Trachtenberg and Lee Feinberg.

The chaperones for the evening were Prof. and Mrs. Rowell and Prof. and Mrs. Riker.

previously uncollected essays of Leigh Hunt. In the preface of this work he states: "Much of Leigh Hunt's work has long remained uncollected in fragmentary sets of periodicals scattered throughout England and the United States. Consequently, students interested in British politics, journalism, the theater, the familiar essay, and English romanticism in general have found it difficult to estimate Hunt's contribution to these fields because the publications in which his work appeared are not easily accessible. The object of the present edition, therefore, is to make available to the research scholar a new body of Hunt selections that may throw additional light on the wide range of topics with which he dealt: parliamentary reform, unemployment, international relations, freedom of the press, the streets of London, fashions in dress, the drama, music, art, the British poets and prose writers."

When asked how big the book was to be Dr. Houtchens said he didn't know, but that the documentation was very full and his best guess is that the complete printing will run to two volumes, consisting of more than a thousand pages each. The faculty research board of the university has made four grants of funds to purchase photostats abroad and to pay the expenses of two summers of work at the Harvard library. He and his wife, whom he says is a wonderful help to him in research, have an article entitled "Contributions of Early American Periodicals to the Study of Charles Dickens" in the Modern Language Quarterly of June, 1945. This is his third article containing the new information on the subject of Dickens.

Dr. Houtchens is a man of varied interests and more than a little ambition. He comes as a welcome addition to the summer school.

The Sheldon Club officers as elected: President, Mrs. Ruth Ainsworth, Burlington; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Christine McCloskey, Orwell. The president appointed Mrs. Mary Herrick, Westboro, Mass., as program chairman; Miss Marjorie Worcester, South Barre, membership chairman; Miss Marion Moore, Arlington, N. J., publicity chairman.

Sports Enthusiasts Tackle Mt. Philo On First Hike

Seven Women Meds Break U.V.M. Record

In the freshman class of the Medical College there are 41 men and 7 women students. This number of women students is more than have ever been enrolled in the Medical College.

Many of these girls who are struggling over gross anatomy are from the University of Vermont. Jacky McCormick, a member of Pi Beta Phi, and one of last years Ski-U-Mah beauty queens, comes from St. Albans. Connie Brownell, a member of Alpha Chi Omega, was prominent on the campus in sports and on the Cynic. Eunice Simmons, Alpha Xi Delta from Montpelier transferred here from Vermont Junior College. Aglaia Ballas from Brattleboro, was treasurer of Student Union. Hannah Pendergast from the University of Maryland in Baltimore is a non-Vermonter among the new hen medics."

Writers Hear King And Van DeWater

some poor unsuspecting human and no autopsy could ever find the reason why the victim had died. King said "I wouldn't be caught dead without a corpse in a story of mine." He wrote his first story at the tender age of seven. It was a love story. King says that he cannot understand why he has never had a returned manuscript. "I must have been a good boy," he said.

Professor Dean said after the meeting he was very pleased and as these meetings were only established last year he hopes to make them an institution.

In questioning Van de Water and King on their tastes in pleasure reading it was found Van de Water likes, among the moderns, Hemingway. He enjoys Kipling but thinks Kipling is to be read in childhood, and then left alone. King said of his personal taste in literature, "I am an avid reader of detective stories."

The league continued its sessions in the Wilbur Library at the Fleming Museum Building, Wednesday, from ten to twelve o'clock. F. Orlin Tremaine, editor of Bartholomew House, author, critic, and publisher, led a discussion on post-war demands of editors and publishers. Louis Dejean had charge of the clinic on the writing of fiction. Dorcas Palmer led the discussion on the writing of poetry. Hildreth I. Wilson, author of numerous successful juveniles, conducted a clinic on writing for young people.

P.T.A. CONVENTION HELD AT U.V.M.

o'clock a dinner was served under the direction of the Safety Conference. Guests of honor were Prof. and Mrs. Bennett Douglass and Mrs. Hughes. Ending the day with a song, there was group singing at eight o'clock following by "Together We Build," a message by Mrs. L. W. Hughes and a reception in the faculty lounge. Other P. T. A. members from Burlington attended the reception.

Friday morning Miss Helen LeBaron, state supervisor of homemaking, told interested members about "Our School Lunch Plan." Another conference period followed, led again by Mrs. Hughes, aided this time by Mrs. Dean Jenkins, chairman of the recreation committee; Mrs. Harry Howard, chairman of juvenile protection committee, and Mrs. John Bowker, chairman of the visual education committee.

The recreation committee is trying to organize a tennis tournament but it isn't moving along too fast. The men have signed up pretty well but the girls are a bit backward. The whole tournament is only for fun and nothing improves your tennis like a good opponent, so sign up. Professor Carpenter and Miss Euler are giving instruction at the Centennial courts if that's what you think you need. The Weather Bureau courts are now ready for use for those who want to put all their effort into tennis rather than hiking to the best courts at Centennial.

The softball game sort of fizzled out last week, apparently because it was scheduled at a busy hour of the day. Next Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. enough of you ought to manage to get out to start a little competition such as the men vs. the women or just anybody against anybody.

The bowling alleys aren't being neglected by the sound coming up from there last Tuesday night. The league is under way but the girls haven't shown up in any overwhelming strength or numbers yet.

Did you know that we had some volleyball courts outside the men's gym all ready for use? And if you think that's a sissy game just go out and try it. Tuesday night is on the schedule for volley ball.

According to the University director of libraries, Prof. G. D. Smith, such gifts as Doctor Wheeler's are particularly appreciated by the University of Vermont libraries, which are anxious to add to their collections of historic documents.

Health Discussion

Prof. A. John Holden, department of education, Middlebury College, now at Grassy Ledge, his summer home in East Montpelier, led a discussion on "Health" in the afternoon session. The panel members were: Prof. Faye Crabbe, director of department of nursing; Miss Milla Newland, nutritionist with the Vermont State Board of Health; Mrs. E. W. Kirkness, director of Peter Pan Nursery School; Rev. Percy Chandler Ladd, College Street Church; and Sara M. Holbrook, department of education, University of Vermont.

The committee in charge of the institute is as follows: Dr. Bennett C. Douglass, advisor; Prof. Sara M. Holbrook; Prof. Nelle A. Adams; Mrs. Earnest S. Locke; and Mrs. Nettie B. Sheild Kidder, chairman.

Vermont Similar To South In Race Prejudice States Hercules

Eric E. L. Hercules

[illegible] Dr. E. L. Hercules [illegible] Vermont and U. V. M. For Mr. Hercules had visited in these places and with his sensitive eye had seen things would most of us who are a part of all these institutions fail to perceive. Or at least we like to attempt to admit that these things are not all right.

Prof. E. L. Hercules is resident of San Francisco. Educated in a distinguished school and possessed [illegible] Educated at Dartmouth, he studied [illegible] at Northwestern University and Montreal College in Quebec and at McGill University in Canada. He is the author of the book "Democracy Evolved" and has contributed to many publications.

Hypocrisy in Vermont

Last [illegible] was [illegible] accomplishments that ought interested the people whom Hercules saw as he visited in America and Vermont. He even found time to be [illegible] to come to participate in the writers conference here at U. V. M. There was a more important circumstance to be considered when his associates [illegible] part of the faculty of U. V. M. and other "more fortunate" authors came to judge Hercules the writer and man.

For you see Hercules is not a white man. He is a Trinidadian. And it was by his dark complexion that he was mainly judged. This was the predominating factor which governed his visit through this State which frowns with such utter scorn at the anti-Negro activities of the South. It was in view of this obvious hypocrisy that Hercules concluded "The situation in Vermont is made even more alarming by the fact that a person of color being rare in these parts is nevertheless subjected to the same whims here as in the case of society in Mississippi."

Intelligentsia

This was not what he had expected to find in Vermont. "I hoped to find a place where people are free to live as human beings," he said. He was disappointed because by "people" he meant "all people." I emphasize this because I do not want to give the impression that Hercules came to this country with any preconceived judgments. Or that he came to Vermont expecting to observe the same conditions that exist in Mississippi. If anything at all can be said, it is that he came here full of optimism seeking a country whose institutions were completely democratic—where freedom was not merely a word but a reality. But instead he found only prejudice and bigotry and hypocrisy. He found this everywhere. Sometimes it was out in the open and at other times it was carefully concealed.

The latter condition was especially prevalent in Vermont and at U. V. M. All around him Hercules told me he felt the distant look and the silent words which said "I do want very much to associate with you and accept you as my friend but after all there are certain things expected of me from society and I must be careful."

This was the view of those who considered themselves to be the intelligentsia of Vermont—the unprejudiced, however these were the real hypocrites according to Hercules, who continued, "They are merely attempting to appease their conscience with pretensions of lofty American ideals."

Youth Holds Promise

Such is the situation in America today. On the one hand, outright hatred and persecution which makes it impossible for the Negro to live a happy and decent life; on the other hand a silent, insidious attitude which warns the Negro to keep his distance and makes it equally impossible for him to lead a satisfactory life. And there is nowhere that the Negro can turn—in this land of liberty, as many as may be allowed to live. From his observations, Hercules can become so convinced of this that he stated, "If I were to live in America as a Negro for the rest of my life, I should be bitter until I died." These are strong words, but they are realistic. They can explain much of the attitude of the Negro in America. They can account for many of the Negro's actions which at times seem inexcusable.

Amidst this pessimism Hercules saw a ray of hope. "Boys and girls who are thrown together in classrooms have observed the fact that all persons regardless of race could assimilate good and bad. The teachings about the Negro being interesting are being looked upon by even the most youthful scholar as profound absurdity." And Hercules continued, "Much good may be accomplished by this acceptance of the individual, regardless of race, on a basis of mutual congenality."

American Intolerance

Should this hope prove to be without basis, then Hercules warned, "A fate similar to that of the barbarians in Germany will eventually fall upon the advocates of white supremacy in this country. Even now the peoples of other countries are losing faith in America. Russia and England are gradually beginning to gain the deciding voice in world affairs. The leaders of these two countries have been thoroughly trained in national and international affairs and have led their peoples away from the type of intolerance that we show here for citizens of our own country. For certainly Great Britain has shown exemplary leadership in the handling of problems dealing with black and white, particularly in the colonial empire where there is no Jim Crowism, except possibly in South Africa."

This is the view that Eric E. L. Hercules has perceived during his travels in America and Vermont. This is what he observed at the writers' conference here at U. V. M. He told me these things both as a British citizen and as a symbol of a race.

Sheldon Education Club

The Sheldon Education Club held its first meeting in connection with the summer session at the University of Vermont on Tuesday evening, July 10 in the Brick Barn.

The next meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening, July 17 at 7.30 in the Brick Barn. All elementary teachers and others interested in the program are cordially invited.

Works of Hilda Belcher Being Exhibited Here

An exhibit of Hilda Belcher's paintings are being shown in the art gallery of the Fleming Museum from July 12 to August 6. Miss Belcher is one of America's most famous women painters. She has a summer residence at Pittsford, Vt. She is most widely known for her portraits. Her work has won many prizes and medals. A sense of humor is displayed in the title of her self-portrait "Old Sour Puss" and in the caricatures of her "Cracker Pie Supper."

She was a student of the old school of painting which held the limelight in the early years. Chase, Henri, and Miller were some of her teachers. Francis Colburn artist in residence at the University of Vermont, has said that Miss Belcher is an excellent satirist and that it is an exhibit worth seeing.

gotten accustomed to playing as a team. It was a vastly improved combine over that which took a shaky win from the juniors in an early pre-season practice game last spring.

The medic line up and inning by inning score follow:

Meyers, p, 2b	Fieber, ss
Giardi, p	West, sf
Williams, c	Schoenberg, lf
Bayer, 1b	Whittier, cf, 2b
Kimball, 2b, cf	MacPherson, lf
Bundy, 3b	Horlick, rf, cf

Innings

Team	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	Total
Medics	0	0	3	0	0	4	5	0	0	12
Undergrads	0	2	0	1	0	0	0	1	3	7

In the abbreviated unofficial second game which was called short of the scheduled limit, Meyers chalked up his second win of the season, 9-2, allowing the undergrads but one earned run on Manjoney's well tagged triple to left in the second. The other undergrad runs were unearned as a result of a streak of wildness on the part of Meyers.

For the medics, Ed Bundy continued his sparkling play with a double in the first which scored Kimball and Bayer. Fieber singled to send Bundy to third and West doubled to score Fieber and Bundy. Schoenberg singled, stole second, and later scored on a passed ball. Horlick singled, took second on the throw-in, then tallied on MacPherson's single. This accounted for the first seven of the Medic's runs, two more coming in the second inning.

The undergrads, who looked good in spots and should improve with practice, may yet give the sophomores plenty of trouble in a return game to be played in the near future. Mentor Leo Giardi's charges are anxious to take on all comers, and hope especially to meet the juniors, who went through last season undefeated and are always dangerous on the diamond.

Seeking their fourth straight win, the sophs, with Leo Giardi expected to toe the mound, are scheduled to take the field this Saturday, July 21, 1945 at 2.00 p.m. against an untried but highly rated freshman medic combine.

Dorm Notes . . .

The main activity this summer is study as is evidenced by the flickering of the midnight oil. But to move from the limelight of this principal occupation to the shadow or shall we say the glow of activities in the dorms let's take a glimpse into what has been going on.

GRASSMOUNT

At Grassmount, Charlotte Ritts had everyone convinced that she was a gypsy fortune teller when she predicted that they would all meet wonderful wealthy men. The only question she omitted was the question "when."

There's been fun afloat here in the form of gala picnics, bike rides and week-end trips to nearby points.

DELTA PSI

Who is this weather prophet at Delta Psi who can predict the weather with her nose? Why not report the discovery to the weather bureau; you're one up on the corn sufferer.

The hospitality of the Delta Psi girls was exemplified Saturday night when Gloria and Marian rescued two half drowned and lost Norwich University students on their way to the dance.

If anyone was seen at the dance in an incongruous state of attire, just blame it on the electric company. When the lights went out during the storm, there was an epidemic of confusion when leg make up was mistaken for face lotion, lip stick for eye brow pencil, and perfume for hand lotion.

DEAN SIMPSON TO ATTEND MEETING OF CHURCH WOMEN

U. V. M.'s Dean Mary Jean Simpson is planning to travel to Cleveland, Ohio, for a meeting of the Executive Board of the U. C. C. W., July 25 and 26, whose national president, Mrs. Harper Sibley, will on that occasion report to the organization on the San Francisco Conference, which she attended.

The United Council of Church Women is an inter-denominational group of Protestant women who have combined their common aims and abilities on a national scale in order to make church women a more significant factor in our country's progress. In their support of the making of the world charter, they urged the addition of the Bill of Rights. Through their president's report to the executive board they hope to suggest to the representatives of various branches ways and means of implanting the charter through local groups, making it a living thing for the future.

Miss Simpson is a member of the National Executive Board by reason of her office of state president of the Vermont branch organization, which is the auxiliary of the Vermont Church Council.

Cynic to Conduct Military Conscription Poll

Coming Events

Hayride Planned for Next Week-end

The Social Committee has arranged an old-fashioned hayride for this Friday evening, August 3, at 4 p.m. All hay-enthusiasts will climb aboard and for a few hours will roll along the countryside outside the city of Burlington. A picnic supper will be waiting on Redstone campus at the end of the trip. Miss Ann Stead of the Social Committee will lead the campfire sing. All who are interested are asked to watch the bulletin board for further news.

Formal Dance in Two Weeks

On Saturday, August 11, the first formal dance of the summer will be held. Ann Pierce, who is acting as chairman of the committee, announces that there will be music by Max Ahrens' orchestra. It will be semi-formal for the convenience of the men and those women who don't have their formals here.

Summer Concert To Feature Local String Quartet

A string quartet composed of Edwin Kraft, Nellie Herrmann, Francis Colburn and Maury Bromsen will be a special feature of the annual Summer Session concert to be held in the Ira Allen Chapel on Monday evening at 8 P.M. The director of the concert will be Howard Bennett, assisted by Miss Natilee Marston, organist. Mr. Alexis Pappoutsakis will conduct the Summer Session Orchestra. Nellie Bromsen will be concertmaster of the orchestra and will also accompany the chorus at the piano in Henry Cowell's "Hymn and Fuguing Muse." Jean Vogler and Miss Colodny will play flute and violin obbligato with the chorus. The string quartet will play a movement from Haydn's "Husting" quartet. The orchestra will play works by Gluck, Handel and Tchaikovsky. The chorus will sing old and modern American settings of words by Dryden, Andrew Lang, Sir Walter Scott, W. S. Gilbert and Stephen Vincent Benét. Faculty members, alumni and residents of Burlington will take the solo and bass parts. The concert is free and open to everyone, and a large audience is hoped for.

Dykhuizen Stresses Peace Through World Charter

Speaker Reviews Methods of Warfare From Hebrew Prophets to Modern Times

"Throughout the strifes and conflicts which have characterized so much of human history, men have never ceased to dream of a better world in which men and nations could live peacefully with one another," said Professor Dykhuizen, at the Summer Session assembly.

The Hebrew prophets, Isaiah and Micah, wrote of beating swords into plowshares; many pagan Greeks and Romans had the same vision, the Romans stressing international law imposed by Nature and Nature's God on all nations, without regard to race, color, or creed.

In the Middle Ages the Christian Church was the dominant institution. Its aim was to bring all mankind within the folds of the church, with all men equal before God.

This religious idea was matched with a political idea for Christendom. The Emperor and the Pope were to be the "two Vicars of God" on earth—one for the material and the other for the spiritual needs of the people. In this way they hoped to abolish wars.

But social forces emerged which undermined the idea. Commerce sprang up. The Kings themselves wanted to be free from the Pope, so they sided with commerce. Also, religious upheavals led to disruption of the Church. The people became nationalistically minded. National States developed. They felt that the end justified the means, so war was an often recurring threat.

Modern nationalism turned to "total-ized" wars. After the first World War, men tried to break away from a world of irresponsible, sovereign, national states, with war constantly threatening. Therefore, they established a League of Nations. It failed for three main reasons: (1) because the United States did not join; (2) because there was no police force; and (3) because every act had to be ratified by every member.

Keeping the nations of the League of Nations in mind, the United Nations Charter is designed with the purpose of giving the world a suitable political and military organization.

Guidance Officer Presents Movies

A series of lectures and motion pictures under the auspices of the Army Orientation Program were presented to U. V. M. educational groups by Maj. F. A. Zehrer on July 23-25. The lectures dealt with pre-induction guidance work for seventeen and eighteen year old boys, and the motion pictures portrayed situations and solutions for soldiers in the post-war world.

Major Zehrer matriculated from Harvard in 1934 as a psychology major. After a period of teaching at the Avon School for Boys in Connecticut, he was offered a position in the Connecticut State Department. During his affiliation with the State Department, he also was the director of the Department of Child Guidance in the Greenwich Public Schools of Connecticut. As in civilian life, Major Zehrer has been doing guidance work in the army since 1942. He is now a liaison officer between the army and the Civilian Educational Centers of the six New England States.

Excerpts from a confidential army study of the soldiers post-war plans were discussed. One of the interesting points mentioned was the percentage of army personnel that have thought of particular types of post-war work. Out of the 75 percent of the men who have made definite plans 40 percent will be in business, 8 percent will return for further schooling, 6 percent will work on farms, and 3 percent will stay in the army. The rest of the men are undecided. One fact stands out above all others; the army personnel want private businesses.

To men who have come to replacement centers from fighting fronts, a series of investigation tests are given. A general aptitude test, mechanical ability test, and a radio code test are given to all, to determine the type of work for which the war veterans are best suited. From this information, the guidance centers have a starting point in helping the discharged veteran.

Millis Is Chairman Of Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Professional Relations Institute was held on July 31 in the Waterman Building Faculty Lounge at 2 o'clock. President Millis was the chairman of the meeting. The Institute is chiefly interested in the important educational problems of the present day. These problems are mainly those arising from the war.

The main problems discussed were as follows:

1. What changes, if any, will be needed in the curriculum during the change from war to peace?
2. By what means can [illegible] standing and adequate support be secured in schools?
3. How can the school contribute to personal and community health and safety?
4. How can emotional stability of school children be promoted?

The discussion following the meeting was led by the students of summer session.

The topic of this meeting was "Looking Forward in Education." The Professional Relations Institute hopes to promote a better schooling system in the immediate future.

A.A.F. Demonstrate Teaching Methods

The Army Air Forces returned to Burlington in the form of the [illegible] A. A. F. Educational Demonstration Unit. Demonstrations were held July 30-31 at the Fleming Museum the purpose of the unit being to show teaching methods of the Army for teachers to use in their classrooms and to give procedures for requisitioning available Air Force equipment. The Commanding General of the A. A. F. started this program because more equipment is being made available to public schools for teaching. The nation has been divided into nine areas for this purpose. A team of instructors is headed by Capt. Walter Johnson, Jr., who was in civilian life a teacher. He has applied his knowledge to the Army, and is Technical Chief of the Unit. The team also includes Lt. Henry Palmer, Lt. Everett McDonald, Sgt. James Simpson, Sgt. Eugene Haug and Sgt. Henry Iannone. The states covered by Unit 1 include Maine,

Eight Professors See Pros and Cons Of Vital Question

Indications of the wealth of discussion called forth by the military conscription bill now before Congress are seen on the U. V. M. campus as well as others throughout the country. From the furnace of debate come the following opinions from the faculty whose well defined arguments are apt to cause a flurry of pros and cons. The CYNIC is conducting a poll of opinion on this most vital question in order to sound the college reaction to conscription and to promote discussion. Cast your ballot in the Waterman hall box next Tuesday.

A bill proposing post war conscription is now in committee in Congress. Even so, many American people are either unaware of its existence or blissfully oblivious of what it may mean to their sons and to their country. Not so, the members of the U. V. M. faculty. Out of eight professors interviewed, two were definitely for it, four against it, one for a variation of the proposed system and one who said, "Let me think over it."

Professor Butterfield

Professor Butterfield favors the movement of peace time conscription, on the whole because he recognizes the necessity of maintaining a strong army and navy for a while after the war. But he would not accept it whole heartedly, without the following modification:

We should have a volunteer organization as it is at all possible to get the necessary number. If not that way, Pro-rata shall work to get knowledge should not be interrupted in this present fashion. Military theory should be a part of college work with interested hard work in general.

Professor Sargent

The following is the opinion of Professor Sargent who is opposed to this measure:

The only reason for peace-time conscription would be to maintain a large standing army and navy. In an international set up, you do not need this," he stated. Then he pointed out the argument that in the proposed set up the military government is likely to gain too much power over civil government. "For a while he remarked, "I see an advantage in the discipline to be had under this system. Now, I feel that it will not be of much use to the individual. The army does and have the reputation of developing citizens physically and tends to make them commendable to military conduct in wars. On the whole, I believe that the arguments against such a plan far outweigh arguments for it."

Are you in favor of the Postponed Adoption of Military Conscription? Yes..... No.....

President Millis To Address Final Meeting Of Graduates

With the completion of the six weeks' session, the graduate council will hold two meetings. These are sponsored by Doctor Douglass who is the director of the summer session.

Each week has been a special speaker at each meeting, each week concentrating on a subject of interest and value to teachers. It is the general procedure to follow each talk with discussion and questions by the group. The first talk in this series was given by Dr. Paul Moody on "Use of Record Examinations." Doctor Moody is the director of the graduate school and customarily speaks for the group. Prof. Andrew Nuquist spoke on "United Nations Charter" at the second meeting. The third meeting was led by Mrs. Donaldson and Miss McLam who are state helping teachers. They spoke about their duties and activities in this state. Dr. Paul Spenser led the meeting this week with the discussion of "Post-War Education." Doctor Spenser is the principal of the Central High School in Trenton, N. J. The final meeting will be next week and will be in the form of a banquet meeting. President Millis will speak at this time, and there will be an election of officers.

The officers for this year are as follows: Mr. John Freitas president; Mr. Alden Carr vice president; Miss Elizabeth Johnson, secretary-treasurer. The membership of the council is forty graduates.

Hikers Brave Mt. Philo

Vermont is where you find it, and twenty-six mountain climbers found it from the top of Mount Philo Saturday July 21. The group left Burlington in the early afternoon by bus. Leaving the beaten path in North Ferrisburg, the hikers climbed under the inspiration of good weather and a good view. At the top they found everything locked up and no caretaker around. After supper most of them returned by the back road, while a few adventurers "bush whacked" down the trail. The reward for all this activity was the privilege of standing up all the way to Burlington on the return bus.

The trip planned for Mt. Mansfield will take place on Saturday, August 4 if enough people sign up.

U.V.M. Excursionists Visit Ausable Chasm On Tour

A number of U. V. M. students toured the state to Lake Champlain on Saturday, July 28 and visited the renowned Ausable Chasm. At eight o'clock in the morning the group was taken to Platts burg and then to Port Kent. Upon arrival at Port Kent the party was driven to Ausable Chasm.

After climbing down one hundred thirty-six seemingly treacherous steps the party found itself along the Ausable Chasm River at the floor of the gorge. The first sight of interest was a rock formation unappropriately named "The Pulpit." The rock loomed over one hundred fifty feet in height was shaped like the front portion of an elephant. Numerous other beautiful spots along the Ausable Trail were seen and at times as above the "Devil's Hole" the trail path approached such sheer heights that it would remind one of an airplane view. Because the river boats have not been going since the war beginning "The Flume" and other formations could not be seen.

The sightseers left the Chasm at four o'clock and were again driven to the Port Kent ferry. Just before the 7:7 docked at Burlington an exhibition of fireworks was displayed when white hot coals were thrown into Lake Champlain.

Stylist Speaks on War-Time Control

"War Time Control" was the subject of the lecture given Tuesday July 31 in the Ira Allen Chapel. The speaker Mrs. Marion Taylor Lyndon spoke on the problems of the coming inflation and its control.

Mrs. Lyndon has had experience as a teacher parent and store executive. She was formerly stylist and buyer for the R. H. Stearns Company of Boston and for other well known Massachusetts stores and later taught retailing at the University of Tennessee. She has also held a position as Fashion Editor of the Boston Herald Traveler.

Mrs. Lyndon has been speaking in colleges and schools throughout the country and comes to the University of Vermont from the Workshop Institute of Economic Problems at Goddard College. Having had retailing as her educational specialty makes her uniquely fitted to give information on price control and rationing. Mrs. Lyndon holds degrees from Smith, Simmons and Harvard.

Sport Stuff . . .

By Dale Conley

The Sports Calendar for the month of August is filled with events that will furnish enjoyment and pleasure to all. No matter what your tastes in sports are, we can satisfy them with a program planned for softball, hiking, dancing, fishing, volleyball and others.

Don't forget that the tennis tournament opens on August 1 at the University Courts. If you intend to play leave your name and that of your opponent with Miss Euler at Room 11b, Waterman Building. Prizes will be given to the winners.

The softball league will continue its games on August 4 with a game scheduled between the undefeated sophomore medics and the undergrads. Anyone desiring to play for the undergrads should contact Howie Stern '46 or Julien Levine '48.

Attention all hikers! On the same day a trip is being planned to Bolton Mountain. Busses will leave at 9:30 and 11:15 A.M. For students having morning classes there will also be a bus leaving at 1:00 p.m. The transportation will take you to the foot of the Long Trail and from there you will hike a quarter mile to Bryant's Cabins. Accommodations can be provided for thirty, except for food, which should be carried in a knapsack. Contact Miss Euler and make final arrangements to go, as this will be one of the best trips of the season.

I don't know that you "anglers" are aware of the fact but Mr. Lawrence, an expert bait caster and fisherman, is giving lessons in this fine art three afternoons a week at the gymnasium. If you want to improve and develop your technique in handling your fly rod, take advantage of these lessons, for they are well worth the time spent. Fishing trips will be taken if enough members are interested.

Larry Gardner mentions the fact that we have some good volleyball courts that are not being used. Games between the girls' dorms or between faculty and students should stir up some interest and I look for some games to be played there in the near future.

From asking Miss Euler about the girls' softball tournament which I hadn't heard very much about this summer, and it seems that there are plenty of girls but no softball players, SOS to all girl softball players, to meet with Miss Euler and get the tournament started.

HEWITT ADDRESSES EDUCATION CLUB

Dr. Arthur Hewitt, former chairman of the Vermont State Board of Education, who has recently returned from an extensive tour of the South and West, spoke before the Sheldon Education Club on Tuesday evening. He traced the changes that have taken place in rural life and education, especially in Vermont, since childhood. Picturing for the audience the old rural school house with its community water pail, wood stove and other poorly arrangements, he contrasted the present more sanitary plants, well-balanced curriculum and higher standards in teacher preparation.

Doctor Hewitt stressed the need for guidance in both religious and secular education as expressed by our young people. He challenged the group to accept the problem and to strive to meet these needs as far as possible.

Concert in Chapel

A large audience attended the Middlebury College string quartet which played at the Ira Allen Chapel Monday, July 23. The quartet was composed of Israel Baker, first violin, Virginia de Blasses, second violin, Allan Carter, viola, and George Finckel, cello.

The opening number was the Quartet in C Major by Mozart. The remainder of the program was made up of modern compositions. The colorful music of the Turina La Oracion del Torero and Shostakovich's Quartet drew great applause. The quartet graciously received the applause although they did not play an encore.

Poll to Seek Conscription Views

Veterans Corner . . .

The veterans organization voted to start with eight members but several people said they were not taking the regular members. At the opening of this organization a constitution was drawn up, and any application for membership in the Veterans Collegiate Association with New York University was sent. The Veterans Collegiate Association has been formed to promote friendliness and the better feeling among the veterans and there is to be a liaison committee between the veterans and the officials who are responsible for their counseling.

At the beginning of the summer quarter a dinner for all the returning veterans was held. The dinner was to acquaint the potential members of the organization with the former members. Plans for a veterans' meeting once every month the date to be announced were decided upon.

The sport life of U. V. M. has been boosted by veteran attendance. They have formed a bowling team consisting of the following members: H. Babby '48, R. Audette '48, I. Tracy '48, and H. Stein '46. A volleyball team has been recently organized and several games with the faculty have been planned.

For the future, another dinner has been scheduled with Colonel Alexander Smith as guest speaker. His talk will be primarily on veterans' affairs at other American colleges. With the incoming fall quarter veterans there will be a smoker to discuss campus activities and other interests of veterans.

As the backbone of the entire veterans organization, the Veterans Office handles problems which the veterans find confronting them in the course of the school year. It is this office that is planning the math classes for veterans who have weak foundation in math. Full details of this class are available on the veterans bulletin board on the first floor of Waterman.

British Election

The game of economic exploitation (which had previously been played in the thirteen colonies, in India and China, in Africa and the Pacific Islands, in the West Indies and East Indies) had turned into a massacre and run amuck all over the British homeland. The people have seen what war is really like, and this for the first time, and so they have handed down their ultimatum that the British Government withdraw from the game—withdraw forever. No longer do the people want to go to war to safeguard the interests of those few financial wizards who have amassed tremendous fortunes by the exploitation of subjugated peoples in all corners of the earth. Never again will they expend their energies and resources in order to create a cordon sanitaire simply because the multimillionaires considered it necessary for the protection of their multimillions.

This can only mean that eventually, regardless of short-run fluctuations, the wealth of the nation will be taken out of the few hands in which it has concentrated. The result will ultimately be a socialistic government in England—and in all European countries—but this will be the effect of the election and not the cause of the outcome. The cause was in the idea.

Anatomy of An M. D.

The result of this is apparent at once—a hugely inflated chest. The consequences of this type of chest are visible to anyone who has carefully observed the doctor as soon as he loses his stereotyped bib. University Celebrates End of War with Japan

U.V.M. Answers Question of Peace, Votes for Military Conscription Bill

Students and Veterans Are Chief Supporters Of Post-War Draft With Total of 42 for and 24 Against the Present Bill Before Congress

U. V. M. answered a decisive "yes" to the question posed by the CYNIC Poll last Tuesday, "Are you in favor of Post-War Military Conscription as described in the bill at present before Congress?" The opinions of Pro-Conscriptioners tallied to a vote of 42, almost double the 24 votes cast against the bill.

Faculty opinion registered approval of conscription but the great majority of approvers were from the student body and the veterans.

Six voters okayed the bill at present before Congress and also the postponed adoption of conscription. Those in favor of the bill and against postponement added up to 17 while those of the opposite opinion, against the bill and for postponement of conscription, were 15 in number.

The wide variety of opinions offered indicated that many people knew nothing of the proposed bill. The common answer of those who answered in the affirmative was "I prefer some sort of conscription but of a modified type." Opinions ranged from proposals for educational conscription "with an intensified military program. Seventeen-year-olds need great vocational guidance and both problems could be met under educational conscription" to a demand for the increased use of the National Guard and a refusal to let women be conscripted. (The bill does not attempt to deal with this problem.) "If this means drafting womanpower I am against it" or "I think women should be conscripted" show the opposite poles of thought. Some would like to see the money go to the education of those qualified to enter college while others think conscription is necessary for the maintenance of a world police force.

Those against conscription of any sort numbered 24 and the basis for their beliefs starts with the fundamental idea of personal freedom in democracy. "Gives government too much control over individual—waste of money in producing equipment for training which will soon be outdated and destroyed—health and physical fitness should be seen to in other youth—armament does not guard against war—raises suspicion and armament of enemies. Large standing armies were partly responsible for World War I." Further: "Any move to cut armaments and armies must be international in scope—not confined to the U. S." A proposal to end war by other ways than military usually suggested a world police force not conscripted but formed from the world's might. The believer of democratic principles stated "conscription would show that we mistrusted our own ideals" or "If we are seeking for peace we maintain the appurtenances of war." One up-to-date opinion asserted "As long as military forces were otherwise abolished the atomic bomb outmodes it."

Plans of the University of Vermont for the observing of the formal surrender of the Japanese were announced a week ago by President John S. Millis. The plans included, first, an all-university convocation, to be followed by the closing of classes and university offices.

The announcement arriving at 7 p.m., Tuesday, there was a convocation at 9 o'clock the following morning, Wednesday, August 15, followed by dismissal of the University students and personnel for the remainder of that day and the next.

Fairmont Position Summons Dr. Hand

Economics Dept. Head Is College President

The head of the Economics Department of U. V. M., Dr. George Henry Hand, is bidding farewell to his year's post here to take up the presidency of Fairmont State College, Fairmont, West Va.

In going to West Virginia, Doctor Hand will be returning to his native state. He was born in Wheeling and received his B.A. from West Virginia University. His first teaching was done in the Morgantown, W. Va., high school.

He received his M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton University and before coming to Vermont was a member of the economics faculties at Denison University, Granville, O., and at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Doctor Hand has been at Vermont only one year, having arrived in September, 1944, to take the place of Dr. George G. Groat, retired, as head of the department.

Banquet Held for Graduates' Club

The annual banquet of the Graduates' Club was held at the Waterman on Monday evening, August 6, 1945. The banquet terminated the summer session activities of this club.

Principal guests of the evening were Doctor and Mrs. Douglass and President and Mrs. Millis. "Forces and Counterforces in American Life and Education" was the subject of President Millis's speech. In this speech, the forces that tend to pull life and education apart and the forces that pull them together were made analogous to the physical problem of the rotating flywheel. As the speed of a flywheel increases, the centrifugal force tends to cause great differences; in present day life, the increase in rapidity and the pressures brought to bear cause specializing and a need for working apart. However, certain counterforces such as common culture and the total of human experiences still remain in American life and lead to closer connected lives. The role that education plays in these counterforces is that it presents a strong force

Annual Hayriders Occupy Redstone

Enthusiastic Sportsmen Invade Upper Campus

Hay, mosquitoes, and a rollicking good time constituted the hayride held Friday, August 3. At exactly 4.30 p.m., 30 fun-loving U. V. M. students garbed in dresses and dungarees loaded into a hay-filled wagon and were off.

The wagon made the rounds of Spear St. and back campus, finally ending up at Redstone Campus, with its 30 riders worn out from hayfights, songs, and various entertainments provided by members of the party.

Upon arrival at their destination all piled out and joined in a softball game which turned out to be a very exciting event. (We still haven't found out who won.) The softball game broke up when the food arrived and everyone sat around the fire, munching contentedly on sandwiches, salad, and cake. Entertainment during the meal was provided by Miss Dolly Lou Platka, Maury Bromsen, and several others of the summer session students. Square dancing and jitter-bugging was enjoyed by all- also a conga line.

During the course of the entertainment, the party was honored by a visit from Professor Houtchens, who, having been out on a walk was attracted by the loud screams of delight and laughter of the party. Straggler by straggler, the group eventually expanded and gathered more party-lovers.

At 9.15 taps was called and the party broke up due to a siege by mosquitoes and the lack of any more marshmallows to toast.

Summer Session Chorus, Orchestra Give Program

On Monday evening, August 6, a large crowd assembled in the Ira Allen Chapel to hear the annual concert by the summer session chorus and orchestra.

The chorus under the direction of Howard Bennett, was of exceptionally high quality. The music was well rendered, both in rhythmic certainty and theatric modulations.

Ippocrates Papantsakis conductor of the orchestra showed his skill in conception and interpretation. The orchestra's chief contribution was skilled remarkable instrumentation.

Special mention may be given to the string quartet which consisted of Edwin Colgrove, first violin, Sadie Herrmann, second violin, Francis Colgrove, viola, and Oscar Thomsen, cello. Their selection

Convocation Held; Millis Proclaims Two-Day Recess

The announcement of the unconditional surrender of Japan at 7 p.m., August 14, 1945, was welcomed by U. V. M. students with unrestrained joy. In the ultimatum delivered to the Japanese government, President Truman decreed that they:

1. Direct prompt cessation of hostilities by Japanese forces.

2. Notify MacArthur of the effective date and hour of cessation and send emissaries to the general to arrange formal surrender.

He stated that inductions will be decreased from 80,000 to 50,000 a month and he forecast the return of 5,000,000 soldiers to civilian life within 12 or 18 months.

In accordance with the University's plans concerning V-J day, President Millis declared a two-day holiday for the administration, faculty and students. A convocation was held Wednesday morning, August 15, at 9 a.m. The program was opened by the singing of the "Star-spangled Banner." Reverend Hall read excerpts from the Old Testament, the New Testament, and the Modern Testament.

A prayer followed the Bible readings. The 60 gold stars representing the U. V. M. students who gave their lives in the war were read by President Millis and the hymn "A Mighty Fortress is Our God" was sung.

President Millis in his address stated that we felt three things when the news of surrender was received. First, joy; second, thankfulness; and third, the cost of war. He said that the atomic bomb was the most significant event of the past two weeks and will probably change the world in the next decade.

U. V. M. students celebrated both here and at home. Many joined the festivities in progress on Church Street while others merely stood on street corners waving to passing cars and shouting, "Isn't it wonderful!"

Cromwell Analyzes Vital Problem of Veterans Guidance

War-Delayed Education Of Teen Age Discussed By Maryland Educator

The Guidance Council of the University of Vermont held its annual meeting August 6 in the Faculty Lounge of the Waterman Building. Dr. Floyd Cromwell of Baltimore, Md., was the speaker.

Doctor Cromwell is the state supervisor of guidance. His talk had to do with the furthering of guidance given to returning veterans. He pointed out that the existing counselors for this job are few and are usually well-meaning civilians who, because they have not been in the army, a World War II, do not understand the problems of today's returning veterans.

Another problem Cromwell pointed out is that of boys and girls of high school age who left school before they had finished their education to take war jobs because they felt that by contributing them to the fight were at education they were being paid to. Doctor Cromwell felt that many of these boys and girls now [illegible] school did not for what

Atomic Bomb Shocks the World, is Equal to 20,000 Tons of TNT

By Marion Parker

To a shocked and incomprehensive world, President Truman's announcement of the epoch-making discovery of the atomic bomb has invoked mingled feelings of awe, confusion, and hope. This announcement is the most important one of the war. In fact, it may likely prove to be more important in shaping human destiny than the war itself.

Certainly the accounts of the first two atomic bombings in Japan, if we can comprehend them, should lead us to realize the full significance of this discovery. The first bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, Japanese military base, causing it to disappear in a cloud of smoke 40,000 feet high. The impact of this blow was equal to the power of 20,000 tons of TNT. After 16 hours Japan had not yet discovered the full extent of the damage. Now we know that 60 percent of the city was wiped out.

"Hiroshima was blotted out by a flash as brilliant as the sun," said pilot Paul W. Tibbets and Navy Capt. William Parsons, both "weaponeer repairers." The crew with the exception of Tibbets, Parsons and Bombardier Maj. Thomas W. Ferebee, did not realize the significance of their mission. They could only exclaim, "My God," at the sight they saw.

Gen. Carl A. Spaatz seemed pleased with the results of the bombing and said that other planes were in readiness. Spaatz also expressed the fear of military experts that Germany would develop the weapon first.

Needless to say the Japanese reaction to the bomb was violent. In a broadcast they referred to the use of the bomb as "inhuman, barbaric, diabolic, and a massacre of innocent civilians." In turn, Americans and their allies may become confused and afraid at the implications of such a colossal discovery. First in the thoughts of most of us is the fact that another war may likely mean the stamping out of the masses which make up the human race. From this reasoning we conclude "There Can Be No More War." The atomic bomb must be kept by peace-loving nations as a means of keeping peace. It must be kept out of enemy hands. Secretary Stimson has made the statement [illegible] United States holder of world's records in production and power is in the position to keep the secret of the atomic bomb. How long it will remain a secret is a matter of conjecture. The role of America is not to resort to keep overwhelmingly superior in the battle for power but to insure the economic prosperity and intellectual growth of all nations. Freedom is not a word spelling our own United States." No Anglo-American and Soviet combination can afford to miss out on advantageous position with the result of crushing lesser powers. Complete awareness of the needs and activities of our neighbors is a duty. In 1936 with a hostile Japan at our doorstep we chose to disregard danger even supplying our potential enemy in the war against China. It took a war to impress upon us the potentialities of South America and of the necessity of exchange of our two cultures, supplies, and ideas.

In theaters at Hawaii 30 miles from Pearl Harbor Japan's plan for world domination appeared nightly on the screen in caricature. Scenes of Japanese puppets tearing down Old Glory were witnessed by army personnel at the largest peacetime post in the country. While they were laughing at evidences of Japanese hate on the screens, army officers were feeling a vague discontent and wonder at the hostile attitude of Japanese civilians. Yet with such open and flagrant exhibition of Japanese intentions the army and navy were trapped completely at Pearl Harbor.

We haven't yet learned that in one world we live with a certain amount of dependence upon our neighbors. We can't live with Japanese or German hate as we can get amicable relations as we have in South America. A re-education of the world in the principles of freedom was never more needed than now, with America—[illegible] watchword vigilance.

Analysis of A Teacher

By Betsey Durkin

[illegible] She was an unconcerned girl who sought to excel in school work because she [illegible] She made the big mistake of supposing she could teach, because she did well in school subjects.

When she walked into her first class room there was panic in her soul. She had always been afraid of people, and the effect of so many scrutinizing eyes reduced her to impotence. The children, being young and hence cruel, were quick to notice her discomfort, and to find therein a source of amusement. It was much more fun to play "Bait the Teacher" than to learn the definition of a conjunction. Various "plays" were used with great success. These included asking embarrassing questions touching upon topics which poor Miss X had always made it her business to avoid.

The months went by. The years went by. The haggard look and the stooping shoulders you now see testify to a broken spirit. This creature is only half-alive. The numbness into which she has trained her nerves has spread to her brain. She has not now even the consolation of mental superiority.

Let those going into the profession now profit by the pitiful example of their forebears. Fortunately the academic world has finally seen the light. Personality is rated over scholarship. Sure, personality is a vague term, and let me define it as applied to a teacher. A teacher is a salesman trying to sell a product sadly lacking in sales appeal. How important for her to possess salesmanship! Do you possess it, prospective teacher? You'll be all right. Listening to you will be more fun than baiting you. You will be able to maintain your self-respect. You may even live to see the day when a generation of the right kind of teachers has produced a new, glowing picture in the minds of a new generation of students, then when you say you are a schoolteacher the response will be all respect and no pity.

50 Couples at Formal

Over 100 people danced to Max Ahrens and his orchestra at the U. V. M. Formal held last Saturday evening, August 11, in the Student Lounge. Softly colored lights set the atmosphere for the dance.

The Social Committee which sponsored the Formal arranged dates with the Norwich men who had been invited. A "get-together" was held in the gym in the afternoon and the boys were shown a map of the city and places of interests to be seen. Arrangements were made for them to stay at the Burlington Armory.

Professor and Mrs. Carpenter, Professor and Mrs. Pooley and Mr. and Mrs. Colburn were chaperones for the evening. Mary Lou Pierce was in charge of tickets and Barbar Snetsinger and Betty Ann Scott were in charge of refreshments. Ann Bayley, Lindy Lauter, Rose Sullivan and Mildred Trachtenberg handled the publicity.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

A lot has been published in the CYNIC in the past about the U. V. M. bowling alleys but a recent development there has brought forth this "gripe." It seems that now the customers are expected to leave a tip for the pin boys. Personally this seems out of general policy of the University, and I think rightly so. I have nothing against the pin boys and I do appreciate the hard work that they put in for our recreation but I feel that their pay should be considered as part of the overhead of the alleys and not shoved off on the public—or rather on the student.

This whole matter of "tipping" has come in for a lot of discussion both pro and con. After coming in close contact with the system for three summers I say "it stinks." The management of any business which expects its clientele to tip would hardly expect a customer to make a payment on the rent bill or show a great interest in other operating expenses but he openly expects this customer to leave a "little something" for the waitress, pin boy, or what have you. In fact he not only expects it he acts accordingly and pays the employee only very low wages. In some cases these wages are absurdly low in comparison with the "little something" picked up from the customer.

In one very popular and expensive Vermont resort this summer waitresses complained to the management that they weren't earning as much as girls usually did. Did he raise their pay? Hardly. He put notices in rooms that it was customary to leave 15 percent in his hotel.

Certainly there are points in the system and true that many students earn expenses by it and make up a handful of small change. The idea of getting paid, and it is pleasant to pay my bowling fee and leave a "little something" for the boy who is hanging just close enough I couldn't possibly forget him, is how he feels because I know. The point is not to get paid for the work expected of you.

There must be a better way to care of this matter. The customer must take its own responsibility for its overhead and charge it accordingly. Can't we do away with this disgusting system of tipping?

Sincerely,
M[illegible]

Teachers Plan Health Program

The workshop in health education is a course designed to help teachers, principals, superintendents and school nurses to plan and execute an integrated program of health education in their schools. The course is divided into units to cover the areas of (1) Sciences Underlying Health, (2) Nutrition As a Factor in Health Education and (3) Appraisal of Health. In each of these units, students receive formal instruction and have individual conferences and seminar groups with specialists. Opportunity is given for students to work on programs and problems pertinent to their own school needs and to study source materials and methods which have proved successful in other similar situations.

Those participating in the workshop course this summer include two superintendents of schools, two school nurses, two dental hygienists, a physical education teacher, a school principal, three Nuns who will instruct others in health education and teachers from the first to the eighth grades.

Miss Nell Jefferson Is New Dorm Supervisor

A new idea has come to the University of Vermont!

Miss Nell Jefferson will be general supervisor of some 15 dorms on the campus this winter. Already she has inspected many of these dorms that will be under her supervision. She is going to have charge of the cleaning, furnishing and the decorating of these houses. One of her particular duties will be that of handling the food situation at Robinson Hall. She has also made plans for redecorating the Sigma Nu house. In addition to her supervising duties she will help Miss Godfrey in the cafeteria and will help wtih the co-op homes.

The first use of electric power in American homes is believed to have been in 1886 when motors, powered by six-volt batteries, were developed to operate sewing machines.

Medical Corner As Seen By Rocco Feroni

An overconfident Sophomore Medic softball squad suffered its first defeat of the season Saturday afternoon Aug. 4, 1945, on the back campus at the hands of an inspired and smooth-working Undergraduate outfit by a score of 9-8 in 10 innings before a large crowd of undergraduate rooters.

The Undergrads scored five runs in the first two innings of play before the Sophs were able to settle down to a steady brand of ball. It was not until the ninth inning after two were out that it looked as if the Medics were going to get back into the game. "Kim" Kimball again came through with his timely hitting to score Meyers from first on a long liner down the right field line, and came in himself when the throw to the plate got away from the Undergrad catcher. This knotted the game up at 8 all, and sent it into "sudden death."

In the tenth inning, Constantino, the outstanding player of the day, robbed the Medics of the decision when he smared Ed Purdy's ... triple with a beautiful back-hander deep in left field. Elated by this the Undergrads came back in their half of the canto to edge Eddy Boyarsky who reached base safely each of his five trips to the plate, to second and then Constantino lined a single to center to score Boyarsky and the Sophs had met their first defeat of the '45 season.

It was by far the best game played in the summer league to date. The Undergrads, having bolstered their team with several veterans, appear to be the darkhorses in the race for top honors.

The Sophomores, with a record of four victories against one defeat are anxious to meet all comers and are expected to take the field this Saturday afternoon at 1:15 p.m. to retrieve their lost laurels against the same Undergrad combine.

Rumor has it that Mike Spyhos '45 is in the army.

The engagement of Christine Hughes '45 to "Ernie" Stockwell ex-'44 was announced Monday. Lieutenant Stockwell is at Fort Benning and "Chris" is employed by the Dartmouth Dining Association in Hanover, N. H.

Also announced Monday was the engagement of Jane Ann Rutter '48 to Dr. William H. ... U. V. M. Medical College '45.

Sheldon Club Business

At the picnic it was decided that the Sheldon Library, which the club sponsors, would be sent to Montpelier for the winter months and then brought back to Burlington for the summer. This library, which is in memory of the late Kenneth Sheldon, former professor at U. V. M., consists of 125 books, some professional and some for children.

31 U.V.M. Hikers Brave Perils of Rainy Mansfield

Saturday, August 4, 31 people started out at 9 a.m. for Mt. Mansfield. The weather was gorgeous here, but just out of Stowe it started to rain. At the foot of the mountain about 14 people got into taxis and rode up to the hotel. The hardier remainder went to the Barnes Camp at the foot of the Long Trail. Mr. Barnes was cooking steak so two of the women decided to stay, have some steak and go through Smuggler's Notch.

The rest, divided into three groups of five and started the climb up the mountain. The sky was overcast and the mist made the rocks slippery. At the Taft Lodge, under the chin of the mountain, the three groups stopped to rest. Then they proceeded up the climb. The sheer cliff with bare wet rocks, the mist and a light wind made the trip very treacherous. Finally two of the groups reached the hotel. They were all quite cold and stopped to have coffee. Anita Smith '47 of U. V. M. served them. The third group joined them later.

After resting the groups started down the hill. Some rode and the others walked down the hill road which they thought would be safer. A few of the group got a ride down on a truck.

Although many of the people who climbed the mountain were a little afraid of slipping because of the weather conditions, they said later that they would not have missed it for anything.

Colburn Students Exhibit Abstractions

Francis Colburn, artist-in-residence at U. V. M., gave initiates an artistic shot in the arm with last week's exhibition of student paintings. True to the preferences of other students who have had Colburn's guidance summer session painters presented a galaxy of abstractions and, no doubt prompted by Vermont scenery, imaginative landscapes.

The abstractions ranged from experiments with forms and shapes of no meaning, as in complete abstract designs to simple representations of actual objects as in Irene Fahey's painting of life setting with a many interesting backgr dunes inspired several Schimmelpfennig's repres ings of a winter scene, satire on the glutton Dolly Lou Platka's land esting experiment with and red-brown.

Dormitory X --- The Bastille

Mystery Cleared; Converse Hall Is Co-eds' Dormitory

Nursing Ed Students And Undergraduates To Use Two Sections

Dormitory X, the house that haunted ...the homeless women on campus, has been exposed to an expectant student body as Converse Hall. Coeds who were accepted to an unnamed dormitory last spring, were now told by the "Bastille" of ...ent corps that the title of the most populated dorm at U. V. M. The Dean's Office has assigned rooms in Converse to ...ty-six undergraduates and forty students of nursing education, occupying the middle section and the south wing of the edifice.

Converse, an imposing gray stone building, is located on back of College Row near the Mary Fletcher Hospital. In previous days it was a men's dormitory, housing a large portion of the undergrads in its four stories. The building consists of study rooms fifteen feet square, each adjoined by two bedrooms of dimensions seven and a half by twelve feet. The middle section first floor, has the janitor's suite and house director's quarters. The three top floors of this section will be for the Dorm X-ers and added freshmen. The south wing will be turned over to fifty students of the nursing curriculum.

Other dormitories for women are Allen House, Alpha Tau Omega, Converse, Delta Psi, Grassmount, Kappa Sigma, Phi Sigma Delta, Redstone, Roberts, Robinson, Sanders, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Phi, Slade, Sigma Nu. Privately owned dormitories: Elmwood, Claggett, McCormicks, Warner's. Self-boarding and private homes: Carlson's, Coughlin's, Doane's, Lawrence's, Rooney's. Adiel Morneault To Teach Nurses

Cadet Nurses To Take Pre-clinical Sciences

Miss Crabbe, head of the Nursing Department at U. V. M., has announced that a new faculty member will arrive on September 1. The new nursing instructor is Miss Adiel Morneault who will teach anatomy and physiology to a new group of Cadet Nurses.

Miss Morneault is a graduate of the Hartford Hospital of Nursing and received her B.S. at Columbia. She has had teaching experience in Hartford Hospital and Keuka College. She comes here directly from Keuka College, where she has been teaching the same subjects that she will teach here.

On September 5, sixty Cadet Nurses will be admitted to the department. Here they will be given four months in pre-clinical sciences. These students come from four schools of nursing—Bishop DeGoesbriand, St. Albans, Barre City, and Heaton Hospital. This will be the third class that has been at U. V. M. in the past year. Bishop DeGoesbriand is contributing students for the first time, St. Albans, for the second time; and Montpelier and Barre, for the third time.

Anything warm and serviceable can be used. Also, blankets, buffalo robes, and similar articles have been turned in and many more could be used.

The name of the organization which was Russian War Relief, has been changed to Russian Relief.

G. I. Bill to Aid Two Million Vets

Veterans, School Meet Halfway In Adjustment

Under the G.I. Bill of Rights unprecedented educational opportunities are open to our returning war veterans—schooling at government expense in an approved college or university of the veteran's own choosing if he meets the rather flexible qualifications. "Education"—something that a good many have dreamed about but would never have been able to realize had it not been for the bill.

The most conservative estimates indicate that a million veterans, both men and women, will return to full time school and an additional million and a half will go part time. The majority of these would continue in business followed in preference by journalism, law, engineering and liberal arts. The other professions are not so significantly represented but all phases of education are inquired about. This potent interest by so many of our men and women of the armed forces is a challenge to our intellectual resources.

What College Offers

What has college to offer these people? The answer, of course, is that college offers a great deal and the value cannot be taken lightly. Going back to a campus after long, vigorous military experience can be the best method by which a veteran can be reindoctrinated to civilian society. It will not be easy for the returning veteran to return to quiet campuses after many stressful experiences abroad. Some will present serious problems, embarrassing at times. Some will have to be an understanding on the part of the lecturers themselves and to the rest of the students. The veterans will have to make every effort to adjust themselves to the college routine of examinations, assignments and lectures.

A good many of these men and women will have had experiences that will make education less pale and they will be able to apply it more to the needs of tomorrow.

The college and university staff will have to go halfway to meet the veterans and attempt to meet the problems fairly to prevent disturbances by veterans. If the veterans provide the college harmony and the readiness of the veterans to get back to work by the colleges and universities together they can develop in our youth those qualities of greatness that are so vital to our well being as a great nation.

Dr. Douglass Has New Secretary

Helen Eaton of Rutland arrived here on August 20 to begin her work as secretary to Doctor Douglass. Helen is a graduate of Rutland High School, 1943. Since then she has been employed as secretary at the Central Vermont Public Service Corporation. When all her friends had left Rutland Helen also wanted to get out on her own. She applied for a position at the University and after several interviews, was offered the position. She expects to stay at least a year, and right now is living at 74 Buell Street.

Communists, Chiang Kai Shek Focus Attention on Far East

By Dave Hackett

As the reconstruction of Europe proceeds in a confused, cloaked, yet definite manner, the issues in Asia has become an immediate problem to be dealt with. The sudden capitulation of Japan must have cut short many a long-winded discussion of our policy in the Far East. The period of discussion has now been succeeded by the period of action.

The major problem which confronted the Allies with the defeat of Germany was the administration and control of the Nazi power. The conclusion of the war in Asia calls forth a firm policy toward a defeated Japan but even more important it points up the innumerable struggles stirring throughout the Orient, and having a principle focus in China. The peace of Asia and of the world may hinge more crucially on our dealings with China than on our treatment of Japan. Regardless of the specific policy pursued in Japan there is little question but that the Empire will be reduced to impotent home islands. Though aggression by Japanese militarists is not likely to shatter Asiatic peace in the near future, the impact of other forces may well lead to conflict.

Awakening in Asia

The peoples of Asia are stirring. That idea has been expressed in many ways, but has as its crux the same meaning: the billion people of Asia are awaking to the possibilities of freedom and the potentialities of human existence. There is a new awareness of what undeveloped lands and uneducated people might become. This tendency is not wholly peculiar to the Orient as even a superficial knowledge of recent European developments would indicate. Nevertheless, the sheer numbers of people, the extent of territory and the lack of any pervasive development make the Asiatic struggles of greater importance. These facts must underly any appraisal of the future of the Far East. The colored races will no longer tolerate white superiority, the rights of freedom and equality are surely as inalienable for them as for ourselves. One might remark that all the Allied statements of policy have taken these facts into consideration, that the Chinese are our brothers in arms, that exploitation was never our practice. But statements must be translated into action, the fighting has ceased and history does not reveal a person's clean record.

Imperialism Must Go

If we are to have peace, imperialism must go. And imperial domination by western powers still plays an important role in the life of the Asiatic nations. Recent developments indicate that some steps may be taken shortly to speed Indian independence, though the effects of such measures are [illegible] realization. On the [illegible] ington, Defaulife has [illegible] the future of the Dutch [illegible] China. In China itself [illegible] the various treaty ports [illegible] Hong Kong remains [illegible] in addition to these [illegible] open forms of discrimination [illegible] privilege, there are [illegible] political and economic [illegible]. Though the various [illegible] clear-cut, it is seldom [illegible] which course of action [illegible] great masses of people [illegible] continue to support the [illegible] and imperialism, we will [illegible] rise of the peoples, we [illegible] look for peaceful times.

Rival Factors in China

Notable among the [illegible] and crises which have [illegible] political vacuum created [illegible] feat is China's internal [illegible] conflict between rival [illegible] has reached a climax, with [illegible] the Central Government [illegible] munist forces moving [illegible] cities. The struggle between [illegible] and the Communists [illegible] first importance, unsuccessful [illegible] lead to civil war.

The support of the [illegible] accorded wholly to [illegible] regime; the recent Soviet [illegible] indicates that Russia [illegible] the Yenan faction. Promises [illegible] were made in the interests of [illegible] unity. But such agreements [illegible] the fact that there is a [illegible] movement, opposed to [illegible] nature of that movement [illegible] subject, especially since [illegible] been virtually cut off from [illegible] for years. However, [illegible] the Reds have instituted [illegible] agrarian reform, and [illegible] steps towards democracy [illegible]. An impartial survey of the [illegible] available would seem to indicate [illegible] interests of the Chinese [illegible] furthered more [illegible] than under Kuomintang [illegible]. At any rate, unity in China [illegible] attained. The goal of the [illegible] two-fold: first, to [illegible] to avoid civil war [illegible] support to the liberal [illegible] forces in China.

At the moment, the [illegible] Asia is China. Until [illegible] will be able to assume [illegible] nation; she could become the central core of the Asiatic [illegible]. But if China fails [illegible] internal weaknesses [illegible] pressure—Asia will [illegible] vacuum, into which the [illegible] world forces will [illegible].

As peace once more reigns around the [illegible] our thoughts and ideas turn towards the post-war era that is to follow. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that this has been the bloodiest and costliest conflict that the world has ever known. The grave of those as the number of young men and women who have given their lives fighting for our America and our ways of life. America and her gallant allies have once more triumphed. We have won the war, yes, but what about the peace that is to follow? What is to happen now to our 12,000,000 young men and women who did not hesitate to risk everything including their lives? Post War Plans of U. V. M. Involve Expansion Program

"Core Plan" May Affect Education System Here

By Marion Parker

Right now much emphasis is being placed upon post-war cars, post-war homes, and post-war air travel. Harvard University is asking whether or not education will keep step with the changing world and plan for post-war revolution. Along with this thought-provoking query, Harvard has presented a feasible plan for our consideration.

American education has always been dominated by one of two theories—the Harvardian and the Jeffersonian. The former has as its aim the raising of the intellectual level of the masses, whereas, the latter seeks to provide special training for gifted students. Harvard experts feel that too much emphasis has been placed on special education in accordance with the Jeffersonian school. They feel that specialized thinking in terms of special interests should be eliminated in favor of broad thinking directed toward the basic needs of free men.

With this goal in view, Harvard has spent two years and $60,000 in research on educational needs. The culmination is a "core plan," approved unanimously by the twelve committee members and backed by Harvard personnel. The committee report points out, first of all, that three-fourths of high-school students never go on to college. That large percentage, they say, must receive some idea of the basic roots of democracy, rather than purely specialized training. Toward this end they propose a core curriculum of three courses in English three courses and math and two in social studies. For college preparatory students another three courses in general education would be added. Their general aim in secondary training then would seem to be the strengthening of general education. They point out, however, that they have no desire to segregate general from specialized work. Rather they hope to integrate the two in one system with a philosophy to give it proper direction. "The aim of education," they state, "should be to prepare an individual to become an expert in some particular art or vocation and to the general art of the free man and the citizen." Previously, by treating these aims separately, they observe, separate institutions have arisen for special classes—a phenomena foreign to a democracy.

Concerning Harvard itself, they have a parallel proposal. They would have six of the courses for a B.A. degree chosen in the field of general education. One of these must be from the humanities, one from social sciences, and one from natural sciences. Aside from that, they would require certain new survey courses. One of these, "Great Texts of Literature," would be loudly approved by Hutchins and St. Johns. It would include study of Homer, Greek tragedy, Plato, the Bible, Virgil, Dante, Shakespeare, Milton, and Tolstoy. Other courses would be "American Democracy," "Human Relations" and "Western Thought and Institutions."

Interestingly enough, the Harvard committee placed no importance on foreign languages, feeling that English, current history, and geography are more important. They would prescribe a more thorough study of American History and would cut tutoring 50 percent by means of a new abilities system, coupled with smaller classes.

With the report at least one step has been taken toward bringing education up on a par with other aspects of the world-to-be. Furthermore, a successful attempt has been made to relate education to human welfare. Were some such plan as this to be adopted, it might easily change the entire character of American society (for such a plan is not aimed at Harvard alone). Reform in education seems inevitable and to be successful it must be uniform and nation-wide. It must come to Harvard, to the University of Vermont, and to Tulane. Yes, this Harvard report can contribute much to Vermont's post-war educational set-up.

At present U. V. M. requires that all students take two courses in English, two courses in a language or mathematics, one laboratory science, and one course in school or constitution. The remaining requirements are determined by the major field of concentration. In other words, other than the "basic" two-year liberal education of the curriculum of Harvard, emphasis is placed on the major field of concentration. The point here at U. V. M. would have to be considerably altered. Of course, there is the possibility that future adjustments will follow this line of thought, but, at any rate, it seems that Harvard has started a movement which is bound to affect U. V. M.

[illegible] the town [illegible] of the Navy [illegible] was Mary Bradley [illegible] and beautiful [illegible] Lt. [illegible] Navy [illegible] was [illegible]

Mary Lou Higgins, Dottie spent a couple days and evening down at her [illegible] Lyme and then back to Burlington for a busy but exciting week-end. All [illegible]

Most recent and greatest was the Alpha Chi picnic and barbecue on Allen House Annex Tuesday after spending a short but memorable time with them all.

Home seems to have a certain attraction for everyone and the girls of Alpha Chi are no exception. Whether it be on the parents of "just overnight" visit or a full week, there's no place like home" as proved around by Olga Morris and Bar bara Kolesnik.

Engaged to the Navy's gay go get 'em ball is the name of Space Thurston. Mr. and Mrs. Guy Cyrus, relative of new graduate Lucille, are from Arabia City, Kansas.

Lucky we had some [illegible] house mother Mrs. Pratt is leaving to-day with a celebration in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Emerson, house mother at Allen House. Miss Frances then all the "house mothers and friends out to Happy Acre in order to celebrate the occasion.

ALLEN HOUSE

Midst a deluge of parents, telephone calls and lodge playing, we find Allen House to be a typical girl's dorm, not in the least resembling the atmosphere of the "Lab."

Steaks and more steaks dratted before our eyes when the parents of Millie Trachtenberg and Renee Finberg entertained the girls and treated them to a grand feast at Marietta's and the Black Cat.

Navy Blue at Allen House? Oh! that was Marion Brigg's twin brother visiting Vermont. Marion herself spent a week-end at home visiting with another brother who has just returned from three years overseas.

Home seems to hold as much as a fascination for the girls of Allen House as it does for the girls of the other dorms. Enjoying home and a wonderful time was Barbara Tucker who returned to Melrose, Mass., for the week-end (and a few days more). Home also, to the scenes of her childhood, went Pat Sheffert.

Dressed in Sunday best and intent on enjoying a wonderful, wonderful meal, we saw Mary Hard, Lois Linn, Yolande Lepard and Irene Urie munching contentedly away at Howard Johnson's.

"Bunny" Wolf, all smiles and giggles proudly informed us that Jack (Yes! he's a rocket) returned home for a visit this week-end.

We can't quite figure out whether Bill Williams is going to school or not. Every time we turn around she seems to be at Allen House. Well let's just say hers is one long continuous visit.

Getting back to long distance phone calls, Allen House has really one that'll beat any joke you have to tell. It seems Marion Parker's O. A. O. called her long distance to let her know it was "Goodbye Mama, I'm Off to Yokohama." Marion at the time was in the midst of pleasant dreams in the land of Nod and dreamily rolled from the top of her double decker bunk, slipping none too gently to the floor. It seems even this wasn't enough to arouse her from her dreamy sleep for it wasn't 'til the kids had carried her from her room and dumped her not too steadily to the ground that she realized where she was and what was happening.

With the end of organized recreation a few people still get exercise. Charlie Parmalee '46 and Doctor Walbridge of the partment play tennis every day. By the way the stork just Parmalees a little girl.

Every week-end continues the tennis tournament between the Brays. Mrs. Noa and Mrs. Bray are Dot Loughery and of medical technology fame. As far as can be discerned pretty much tied.

Prof. Adams Quoted In Sat. Evening Post

(Saturday Evening Post, Jan.)

Captain Adams is speaking as an instructor at U. V. M. and is not expressing college policy. His observations were made in the 38000 patient who are cared annually in the hospital.

"Short courses are valuable in the rural districts, but the curriculum will never appeal to the G.I. nor make it work. Instead, I would like eight entire years, starting in the fifth grade, to be combined in a single course for boys who have completed the eighth grade in the rural schools. Many of the G.I.'s would welcome such an opportunity. By the time he is through the eighth grade, he is old enough to know what he wants and usually has a definite job in mind. Many of the G.I.'s are getting their high schooling in night schools and correspondence courses. Many of them are extremely ambitious and

Misses Jefferson, Knowles Are New Directors at UVM

Hi mortar the town (or is it a city?) of St. Albans, Vt., was Miss Ann Bayley, Alpha Chi's own red headed beauty. From all reports, Ann's visit was most enjoyable.

Mary Lou "Squeezi" Pierce spent a hectic week-end racing first to her ole home town and then back to Dartmouth for a busy, but exciting week-end. Ah! fun!

'Mid moans and groans will the Alpha Chi girls bid farewell to Alice Rowe. Alice leaves Tuesday after spending a short, but enjoyable time with them all.

Home seems to have a certain attraction for everyone and the girls of Alpha Chi are no exception. Whether it be to see the parents or "that certain someone" you'll find "there's no place like home" or so it seemed to Olive Morris, and Barbara Kilborn.

Found in the tourist's log in the front hall is the name of Spike Thornton. Ah yes! Our CYNIC editor is now gracing the famed portals and halls of Alpha Chi.

Lastly we find even our house-mother, Mrs. France busying herself with a celebration in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Johnson, house-mother at Allen House. Mrs. Frances, took all the house-mothers and friends out to Happy Acre in order to celebrate the occasion.

60 Cadet Nurses Arrive on Campus

3rd Largest Group to Arrive At University

On September 5, sixty Cadet Nurses arrived at the University. They have come from four schools of nursing Bishop DeGoesbriand, St. Albans, Barre City and Heaton Hospital. This is the largest number of hospitals represented in the course at any one time. These Nursing students will live in one wing of Converse Hall, which has been prepared for a girl's dormitory.

The group of sixty students entering the cadet nursing program are enrolled for a four months course of basic training in the sciences underlying nursing. Prof. Faye Crabbe, director of the nursing education department, states that this is the third and largest group of such students to be enrolled. To accommodate them a new instructor, Miss Odile Morneault, has been added to the teaching staff.

In addition to instructors from the department of nursing education, the students will also receive instruction from members of the medical and home economics faculties.

Fifteen graduate nurses will arrive on October 2 and will be enrolled in the advance program of Nursing Education. These students will live on the campus and take some courses from the Educational Department although the majority of their courses will be in the professional field.

The faculty of the Department of Nursing had a picnic September 6 for the students who have just completed the first year of the five year program. The picnic was held at the newly purchased home of Miss Dittig and sponsored by Miss Crabbe, head of the department, Miss Brown and Miss Dittig.

Peacetime Enrollment Hits 800, New High At U.V.M.

WOMEN'S ENROLLMENT SETS RECORD; 100 NEW MEN EXPECTED ON CAMPUS

Following the long awaited victory of the war, colleges all over the country are once again finding a trend back to normal conditions and college life.

Pre-registration figures at the University for the coming school year as announced by Heath K. Riggs, director of admissions in the registrar's office, show that the limit of 225 freshman women has already been reached. The total enrollment of undergraduate women is expected to reach 675 or 50 more than it has ever before reached.

Along with this announcement came the report that the enrollment of men is daily increasing. Two weeks ago there were twenty new men students and to date the figures had jumped to fifty five. Including the twenty freshmen enrolled in June, Director Riggs expects that the total registration of freshmen men will reach 100 by October 1. There is no indication that any limitations will be placed upon the number of men students this year in the undergraduate classes inasmuch as so many potential students are still in the armed forces.

The University of Vermont will officially open on October 5, but freshmen students will report October 2 for preliminary registration. Of the total number of freshmen women enrolled in the University the majority, 170, are from Vermont. There are 38 from New York, 25 from New Jersey and 18 from Massachusetts. Among the remainder of the students are some from West Virginia, Michigan, and Pennsylvania.

KAPPA PHI KAPPA MEETING HELD

A meeting of the National Council of Kappa Phi Kappa, Educational Fraternity, was held at Philadelphia August 30 and 31. Several of the chapters which have been inactive during the war period will become active during the college year.

Members of the council are: Prof. Ralph Strebel of Syracuse University, Dean E. J. Ashbaugh of Miami University (Ohio); Dr. Charles A. Fisher, Temple University; Dr. F. G. Henke, Charles City, Ia.; Mrs. Arthur D. Wright, secretary, Washington, D. C.; Dr. E. L. Cole, Normal University (Ill.), Dr. B. C. Doctor Lohman who was born in 1906 received his B.A. from George Washington University, Washington D. C. and his M.A. from the University of Southern California where he did other graduate work. He was granted a fellowship at the Brookings Institute, Washington, and then returned to the University of Southern California to receive his Ph.D. in Economics.

He left his first teaching position at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, to accept a position as economic advisor to Time Magazine.

In addition Doctor Lohman has held a number of summer teaching and lecturing positions in various institutions and has made a number of economic studies for the War Department Military Intelligence. He has traveled extensively, studying conditions in Europe, Japan, China, Malay and India as well as in many parts of the United States. In this traveling he was aided by his knowledge of French, German, Spanish, Italian, and Russian.

Dr. Lohman is the co-author of "Money and Banking" and has contributed articles to many foreign and domestic economic publications. He is a member of the American Arbitration Association Panel, the American Economics Association, Phi Beta Kappa, and the Midwestern Political Science Association.

Mrs. Lohman and two children will accompany Doctor Lohman to Burlington.

Prof. Adams Quoted In Sat. Evening Post

G.I.'s Reject Education Title of Timely Story

"There is not enough in the lower grades to make school interesting and attractive," said Capt. William Adams, former Professor of Forestry and Botany at Vermont, now in charge of educational reconditioning at the England General Hospital. Captain Adams was speaking of the "G.I.'s Rejection of Education" in the Saturday Evening Post.

Captain Adams is speaking as a former professor at U. V. M. and is not expressing Army policy. His observations were gained from the 38,000 patients who are received annually by the hospital.

"Until decent salaries are paid, especially in the rural districts, teaching as a profession will never appeal to the people who can make it work. Incompetent teachers stifle, rather than stimulate a child's curiosity in the world around him."

The Army cannot be expected to develop a sudden interest in education among the men. It's too late by the time we get them," Captain Adams declared.

Captain Adams is expressing views held by many educators who are disturbed over the opposition of the soldiers to further study. Most of the G.I.'s want vocational training only, so that they can get industrial jobs, which have an incentive of high salaries to men who have been getting Army pay.

Perhaps it is unchanging human nature rather than our educational system which is at fault. We may be expecting too much of the tired soldier who would in normal times be content to have modest wants and to drift with the tide.

CLUB CELEBRATES FIRST ANNIVERSARY

Friday, August 31, sixteen girls of the Nursing Education Club went to Happy Acres for their final banquet with their directors. This dinner was in honor of the second year girls who are leaving the University to go to Mary Fletcher.

After the banquet Evie Olsen, president of the club, presented flowers to Miss Crabbe and Miss Brown, and handkerchiefs to Mrs. Yasinski, Mrs. Tobin, and Miss Dittig. This was the first anniversary of the club. It was decided that the banquet, as well as the Silver Tea for the Scholarship Fund, would be traditional.

Barbara Kilborn, vice-president of the club, extended an invitation to the first year girls to visit the second year students at the Mary Fletcher. Barbara thanked Miss Crabbe and the other instructors for their help during the two years.

The highlight of the after-dinner entertainment was the solo by Miss Crabbe, who sang two songs of her training days. Everyone joined in the singing.

Mary Staikos Recalled From Beauty Contest

Mary Staikos, U. V. M. Kake Walk Queen of 1945 and one of the junior class beauties was called home on the eve of the 1945 "Miss America" bathing beauty contest at Atlantic City, N. J. where she was entered as "Miss Vermont."

Mary, the Cynic's candidate for "Miss Vermont," went to Atlantic City on September 4 and had to return to Brooklyn September 5, upon receiving word of her father's illness. She had recently spent a brief vacation with relatives and friends in Burlington.

ARMY DR. NEW DEAN

Brown Replaces Beecher

Dr. William Eustis Brown, formerly professor of preventive medicine at the University of Cincinnati, took his new post as Dean of the College of Medicine on September 1. The new Dean who is 58 years of age, received his bachelor's degree from Lafayette College. He did graduate study at Columbia University, received his professional degree in public health from Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology and his M.D. from Harvard Medical School. While a student at Harvard, he met his future wife who was doing research work at the time. They were married in December 1919.

From 1915-1919 he was instructor and acting dean at the Harvard-M.I.T. school of public health and from 1919-1921 resident in surgery at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston. From that time until 1924, when he went to the University of Cincinnati, he was surgeon in chief of the Franklin Hospital in New Jersey. At Vermont in addition to his deanship he will also be professor of public health and preventive medicine.

Hospitals in Greece

From 1943 until April, 1945, Doctor Brown held a commission as lieutenant colonel in the army medical corps, serving in the near east and more recently as head of all hospitals in Greece. His son is also in service. The genial white haired dean stated that he really enjoyed his army experience but would not like it as a steady diet. He spoke of his many interesting experiences and observations during this time.

Dr. William E. Brown

At his station in the Middle East he was associated with the British army. He went through the harrowing times of the revolution in Athens when he was one of the medical officers who took

School Spirit

Webster's Dictionary has it as "the soul; the intelligent part of man, enthusiasm, courage, vital essential part of anything; real meaning; to animate with vigor." U. V. M. students have defined it variously---"College Row at night, the lights shining on snow, the indefinable thrill of Kake Walk." Adding to the variety at the poles of thought on this enigma, colleges everywhere since the first evidences of school spirit have been deploring the absence of same! How is it possible to measure the lack or presence of an intangible, a term which is different in meaning to every member of the intricate organization that is college?

The many definitions indicate that spirit is an unique personal disposition added to the accumulation of interests, ideas, people and traditions in the institution of a university. It's what everyone has to give to the group feeling of interested people banded together by a common purpose. This unity of fellow students extends to respect and friendship with a faculty, and a link with the countless minds that have contributed to the funds of knowledge which suddenly seem to the student to be centered in a new-found world.

Spirits betrays itself in our natural reactions in activities and contests. Rivalry prompts loyalty, often as a forced decision between conflicting issues. On the football field, or in matters of intellectual honesty we decide our principles and pursue certain goals. We also react to fun and the inspiration of the moment, as necessary to "getting something out of college" as mental labor.

Aside from response to the exciting activities offered at college the student exhibits a natural curiosity and serious endeavour in discovering a way of life for himself. Individuals vary in Purpose but a seeking of knowledge in order to live intelligently and directions in which to exert out talents, curiosity about people, what they thought and felt, and just a plain love of learning which draws students to Sci Hall in the dead of night and keep a group on a mathematical puzzle for hours, these are common to a college citizen.

Tradition implies that all we have learned about the qualities of students that go to make up the "esprit de corps" are permanent and reliable. The foundations of honesty, democracy, friendliness and open-mindedness, we have exalted as virtues since U. V. M. was founded. In the more obvious displays of student spirit, Kake Walk, football games, etc., while the mode has changed the fundamental loyalty, rivalry, and interest have remained. Tradition is the development of past events into present day, meaningful symbols. It delights us to find old values so impressive and indispensable for the feeling called spirit.

Finally spirit is something we seniors will carry with us from Vermont which we know will be imparted to Freshmen before we leave.

"Dream"

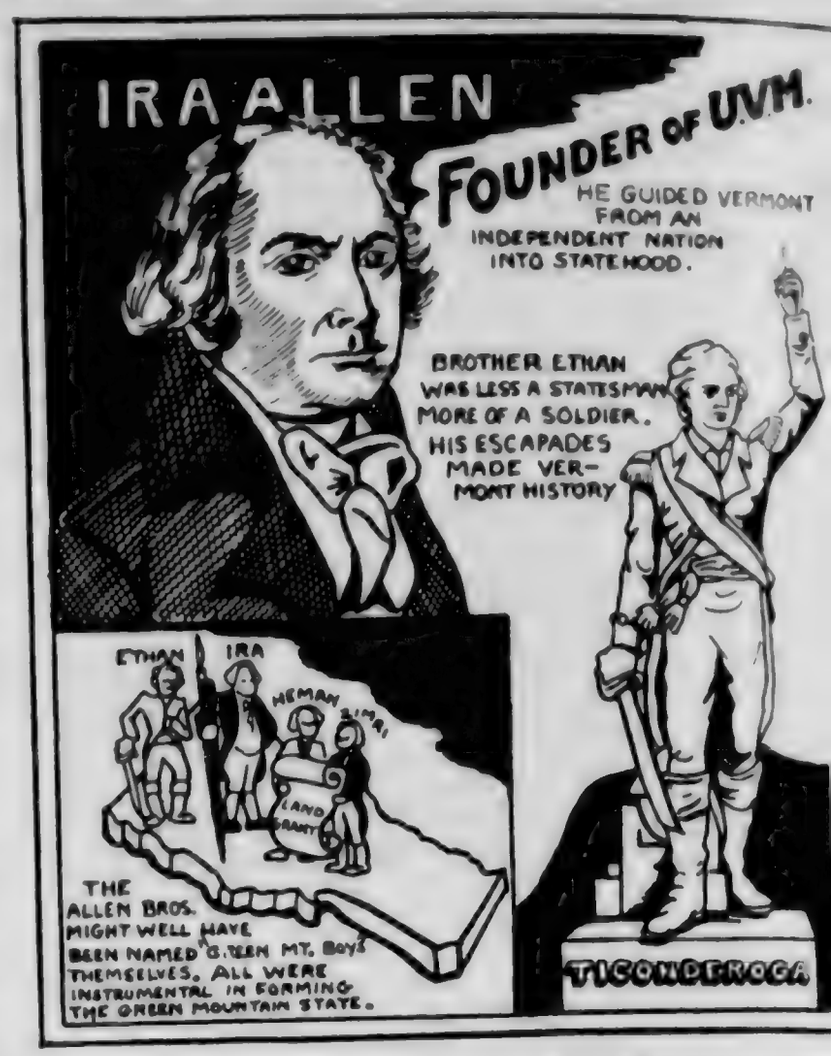
Someone once said (I believe it was Teddy Roosevelt but I will not swear by it) "walk with your head in the clouds and your feet on the ground." I would like to make a slight alteration. "Walk with your head above the clouds, so that you may envision the world Utopia toward which you wish to guide your earth bound feet." I am a selfish fellow and my dream is a long way off—a million years or maybe just a thousand—but certainly too far for me to walk in my lifetime. The road is hard and bumpy, but the further along the road you travel, the more beautiful is the view; the more numerous are the birds of peace and flowers of happiness. I am determined to advance as far upon that path of glory as one lifetime can carry me. Here is the golden goal I seek and the earthly steps I must take to walk in the right direction.

Freedom From Want

DEMOCRACY, DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE. Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, the Constitution—all these have but one meaning—political freedom. This from the world today, purified, is an inseparable part of my vision, but it has a constant partner—economic freedom—the meaning of which we know little today. If communism could combine our democratic political freedom and this other freedom I desire, I would be a communist. I am not. If Bolshevism is not the way to Henry Wallace's "Quart of Milk" where then is the first step?

In front of Congress. The Full Employment Bill. It is short. Obtain a copy and read it. It proposes that free enterprise be allowed to furnish all the jobs it possibly can. The gap between the number of jobs needed and those furnished are to be filled by useful public works (roads, bridges, schools etc.) through contracts placed with private business, thus encouraging private enterprise as it ends unemployment. Spend your way to prosperity and run up the national debt? Yes and no. Yes, it will cost money. No, we will increase our assets not our debts. Should we consider the money spent in building the grand Coulee, our federal highways, T.V.A. etc., a debt, or should we consider them as great national assets? The billions we spent on this war brought about prosperity, but went up in the smoke of battle. When unemployment threatens why could not we spend it on peaceful things which will show us a return?

At the present time Congress is faced with another problem which should be considered along with the Full Employment Bill—taxation. For some peculiar reason, now when big business is experiencing its greatest boom, it proclaims the "necessity of lowering taxes to provide initiative for expansion" . . . taxes are driving poor big business (now making many times as much profit after taxes as normal) into bankruptcy.



Until now we have been burdening industry with taxes during lean years to pay for public works which provide employment. It seems to me, that we should tax as much as possible now, while times are good, and lower taxes later when depression threatens, thus giving industry the push it will then need; we would already have enough resources for the public works from the high boom-time levies.

Flower of Racial Equality

These steps are well on the way to my dream, but there is more to my vision. The most beautiful flower of all, racial equality, is growing there from the powerful roots of free, liberal education open to all. There in the land above the clouds all—white, black, and yellow; Catholic, Protestant and Jew—are living happily together; the world has been greatly advanced because persecuted groups have been given the opportunity to use their mental potentialities—an opportunity denied them today. The seeds we must sow today to grow this magnificent rose are the end of discriminating quotas in our college and universities, the encouragement of free institutes of high learning, and the establishment by Congress of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee to fight discrimination in industry. 'The Route to the Free Press' Or—'Cynic History Repeated'

Marion Parker

Perhaps you've wondered why the CYNIC finally arrives on the Bookstore counter. (So have I) Well, you can tell who's responsible by looking down in the left-hand corner, second page. There you will find the CYNIC's Who's Who (alias The Mystery of the Missing Links).

There are, of course, the editor (give-me-an-inch Thornton), the campus editor, the feature editor, and the sports editor, all chiefs in their line and given the title of "editor" partly as an indication of the prestige they have gained and partly as an incentive. Getting along on the list we find the rewrite editor. She's the one who crosses out "We were," substituting "We was" and otherwise corrects grammatical blunders. The news editors are the ones who make the heads and proofread copy. Writing heads, they say, is the sure way to go nuts, if you can get to be a news editor and still find yourself sane. These news editors are told how many letters they may have in each head and they try to get something to grace the top of each story which in no way refers to the printed material beneath.

The Elite—Reporters and Scrubs

And then, too, there are the reporters. In the winter they're quite numerous and can be recognized by a lack of nose (for news). But they change with the seasons as to charcateristics. In the summer they become predominantly scarce and must be handled like broken glass. (What a cutting remark.) Regardless of the time of year, they're the ones who frequent offices and drawl, "I represent the CYNIC. I don't suppose you have any news for this week, have you?" Next in line come the Scrubs but I'm told not to mention either characteristics or functions. (They're the spinal column of the paper.)

How many times have you heard Bob Rosenberg say in growling tones, "This week's money is gone." And have you wondered if he were a private financial advisor? Well, just by way of an explanation, he's the Business Manager, efficient, business-like, and usually overridden when he says, "No money for a CYNIC next week."

Why the Editors Get Gray

This heterogeneous personnel works together (we hope) to put out the issue at hand. Scrubs hand in little carefully written stories beginning . . . "A meeting was held . . . ," and the reporters get the big stories with streamer heads. In the past few years when the CYNIC has been coming out in the summer, the class line between reporters and scrubs has been broken down a bit, but with frost comes a "Mending of the F and scrubs are once more situated in lowly position. UVM Has Survived Many Crises; Seven Wars, Economic Upsets

By David Hackett

The Cynic herewith presents a summary of U. V. M. history and tradition for the [illegible]. Although not complete the [illegible] information presents the highest [illegible] and a hall at the University. — Editor's Note.)

The word "tradition" has a bad reputation. More often than not it is associated with forces of reaction and conservatism. "It was that way so it's good, or it still should be that way"—such arguments are feeble, to say the least. But in the often justified aversion to the mention of tradition, we tend to overlook the values of historical perspective. Life itself is shallow without some knowledge of what men through the centuries have been striving for, and the names they utilized. It is the same with people. A person begins to mean something to you when you hear of his past experiences, his family, his ambitions. And similarly with an institution. Why was it started? Who founded it? Who's been here and what have they done? The answers to such questions can transform a cold impersonal object into a warm and familiar friend; they are the stage-setting before which we act. Yes, such knowledge is a part of the tradition in which we live.

You're coming to the University of Vermont this fall. Colleges have a peculiar way of "belonging" to its members; and you will "belong" to U. V. M. A complete history of the University would have to tell of all the students that ever went here—their hopes, accomplishments, and disappointments. It would include descriptions of a snow-covered campus, early classes in the near-dark, tough examinations, and dances. You see, the University is not just buildings and dates; it is made up of all of us. Its history is a human story, too widespread for any complete retelling. But some of it is within our reach.

Founding of U. V. M.

The University of Vermont was chartered in November of 1791. General Ira Allen, brother of Ethan, the leader of the famous Green Mountain Boys, was the executive man in the original corporation, and is now honored in the annual Founder's Day ceremonies. The University itself was not organized until 1800 under Pres. Daniel Sanders, and the original college building was erected the next year. The original faculty was composed of the President and a single tutor; later, professors of mathematics, anatomy, Latin and Greek, and jurisprudence were added. (Educational changes have been considerable!) Doctor Sanders was a rather remarkable teacher, business man, organizer, author, and preacher.

During the war of 1812, the college buildings were seized for an arsenal, and then for soldiers' barracks. The war over, instruction was resumed under a faculty of three professors. A difficult financial period followed, and closing of the school only narrowly averted. Reorganization followed, with new presidents, and the student body growing to a total of 70.

The Struggling Years

Calamity then befell the institution when the college building was destroyed by fire in 1824. Again the challenge of fire was met, and the necessary funds for new buildings raised. The corner stone of South College was laid the next year by General Lafayette. Until this time 156 had attained the bachelor's degree. The development of the college had been marked by disaster, lack of funds, and repeated administrative changes. So far it had been struggling through the experimental stage.

The selection of the Rev. James Marsh to the vacant presidency marked an important development. He was a man of "profound learning and broad views." Dissatisfied with the prevailing educational system, he bemoaned the failure to attain the desired intellectual and moral results. (Here, one is reminded of the contemporary President Hutchins of the University of Chicago, who is sounding the same note today.) He reorganized the curriculum completely, "aiming at a more natural and more philosophical selection and grouping of studies;" his plan in many ways anticipated modern methods. The rigid four year scheme was modified, and more emphasis placed on examinations and individual aptitudes and likings (that is electives). Four departments were organized: English Literature, Language, Mathematics, including the physical sciences, and Philosophy. Both English and foreign languages were prominent and individual thought encouraged in all classes.

Pres. Marsh's Work

Of greatest importance was the Department of Philosophy, which attempted to unify the work in other fields, in addition to introducing problems in morals, religion, and social and political life. Doctor Marsh, himself a noted philosopher, taught and stressed the importance of these subjects. He opposed the prevalent utilitarian and materialistic systems of thought, advocating "a philosophy which bases morality on something higher than personal or general advantage." He made philosophy religious, and theology philosophical, and did away with the oppositions and jealousies between science and religion.

In conjunction with academic changes, college government was put on a less restricted basis. The sentiment of honor rather than rule was appealed to for administration. The undergraduate was expected to govern himself, and the list of statutes and prohibitions was reduced to a minimum.

Doctor Marsh resigned the presidency in 1833, and was succeeded by a number of competent administrators. A period of general expansion followed: funds raised, buildings repaired, finances reorganized, apparatus secured, and faculty members added. At this time a library of about 7,000 volumes was purchased in Europe.

In 1837, in the midst of a fund-raising campaign, general bankruptcy came throughout the country. Debts could not be collected. Few students could meet tuition fees, and professors' salaries went unpaid. The University was sued, and as a result was in severe financial straits. With considerable effort and sacrifice, the college managed to continue, without dishonoring its credit. And another period of growth followed.

Meanwhile a strenuous effort was being made to consolidate Middlebury College and the University. Only 33 miles apart, and both hampered by lack of funds, it was thought that a union of the two would result in one strong institution. But the plans and negotiations came to naught.

New Courses Added

From this time until the Civil War, no special changes in policy were made, and no noticeable gains. The war interfered seriously with the work of the college. Civilians eagerly answered the call for volunteers in the Union Army, with a resultant drop in the enrollment to 40. Out of a total of 65 academic students 28 or 42 per cent were in the field. In those days, as now, college boys held positions of responsibility, for many received commissions as officers. The close of the war found the University struggling to recover. The number of men entering college had been greatly reduced, and funds were still inadequate.

For a good many years, the Literary Societies played an important role in college life. They were devoted to debates, discussions, criticisms, and literary pursuits. There is every indication that they contributed much to the making of thinkers, writers, and speakers. In these clubs were trained such men as Henry T. Rayard, founder of the New York Times, and James R. Spalding, founder of the New York World. (then a staunch supporter of civic and social virtues.) Interest in these languished with the use of secret societies, and their extinction, in 1855, was deplored by all who knew the part they played in the development of individuals. (This fact may well contain an important moral for the University today. Perhaps secret fraternities are taking the place of open societies which might be of genuine value.)

The important milestone which helped to put the University back on its feet after the Civil War was the incorporation of the agricultural college by act of the General Assembly, in 1865. The act under which the new college was organized prescribed that its "leading object shall be, without excluding classical and other scientific studies, to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts." In accordance, courses in engineering, chemistry, and agriculture were established. The old classical studies were continued under the same 5 faculty professors.! Also, the literary—scientific course was added for the benefit of those who desired the advantages of a regular academic course without Greek. Many of the University alumni looked with disfavor on the recent union, while the practical men aided it as a progressive step. The two points of view were harmonized by the able President Angell, who after supervising years of steady improvement, resigned to accept the Presidency of the University of Michigan.

The University Grows

The elevation of Prof. Matthew H. Buckham—to the presidency in 1871 marked the beginning of a new era of growth which lasted for 40 years under his leadership. Coincident with his appointment, the trustees voted to admit women to the academic and scientific departments. Though co-education was not entirely new, Vassar was at the time the only college east of the Hudson which offered a collegiate course to women. Two were admitted the next year, and their number gradually increased so that 53 women enrolled in 1900. Vermont boasts the first two women in the country to become members in the Phi Beta Kappa honorary society.

During the first ten years of Doctor Buckham's presidency, the progress was steady, but not rapid. Additional courses were offered, new teaching methods tried, collections expanded, and an art gallery provided.

After this, the "building era" of the University was inaugurated. The next 25 years witnessed the construction of the Billings Library, the Engineering building, Williams Science Hall, Converse Hall Dormitory, the gymnasium, Morrill Hall, and the Medical building. Grassemount was acquired and a number of other houses which were used as homes for professors. Thus the University began to acquire the land and buildings which enabled it to take a more significant role in the life of the State and New England.

20th Century Progress

The above changes bring us well into the 20th century, during which the University has made its greatest forward strides. President Buckham was succeeded by Doctor Benton. During the World War he went to Europe and was educational director of the American Army of Occupation in Germany, he did not return to the University. His successor was Guy W. Bailey. During the early years of his administration the nation was unusually prosperous. Foreseeing years of even greater prosperity a program of sending endowments and enlarging the physical plant was undertaken. Some of the buildings, like the Ira Allen Chapel, were outright gifts, but others, like the Robert Hull Fleming Museum and Southwick Memorial, depended on outside funds for completion.

The increasing enrollment necessitated acquiring more dormitories, particularly for the women. Consequently, Redstone campus was purchased. Formerly an estate, the main house is now Redstone Hall, and the stables were converted into Robinson Hall, while the gate keeper now houses the professor of philosophy. (All of their names will be familiar to you before too long.) Slade Hall was built and other small houses were acquired. The most recent addition was the Waterman Building which now serves as the center of most college activities.

But with the death of President Bailey in 1940 it was found that the expansion program had left the financial affairs of the University in a terrible tangle with a deficit of nearly $1,000,000. We were really in the hole. The job of putting the University back on its feet has been a long and difficult job. Financial affairs have of necessity dictated University policies, a fact which must be remembered in criticizing the administration. Our present chief is John S. Millis, a native of California, a graduate of the University of Chicago, and previously the Dean of Lawrence College. Comment on his regime may seem premature. But there is little doubt he advocates changes in our present educational system and an increased amount of student responsibility.

Though specific facts do not stay with us for long, this survey may indicate some facts which may be of lasting value. Foremost is the continual growth evidenced throughout the history of the University; growth not only in physical equipment but also towards better educational systems and methods. Also there is the recurring example of problems eventually solved. A university must be dynamic and it must have the courage to surmount difficulties.

In what way must we now grow, one might ask? We must strive to produce better-educated graduates: thinking men and women who cherish wisdom and goodness. These aren't merely words to describe hypothetical characters. They are intended for all of us. The present day mastery of science and its destructive possibilities points out more than ever the need for moral and intellectual ideals. How accomplish this? The need for a change in curriculum is being recognized in colleges throughout the country. We cannot stand still, we must not be satisfied with the educational "status Quo."

In our individual lives we must not shirk responsibility. This year the Honor System in academic work will be discussed by the students. Here is a chance to adopt such responsibility. It is in the tradition of President Marsh to appeal to the sentiment of honor rather than to rigidly imposed regulations.

Vermont's most illustrious graduate is the great educator and philosopher John Dewey. Surely he would bid us to be more socially conscious, conscious of the more interests of all around us—and to think.

This is the tradition in which we live.

New Curriculum Is Announced for Vt. Jr. High Teachers

Increased Need For Qualified Teachers Necessitates Change

At recent meetings of the University Senate and the Board of Trustees a new curriculum, designed to prepare teachers for the junior high school grades was formally approved. This curriculum is the outgrowth of numerous conferences held by members of the state Department of Education and University of Vermont officials. It is offered because of an increasing need for especially qualified teachers in junior high school grades.

Students who may take this curriculum will be required to pursue prescribed courses in English, mathematics, science, and American history. To a limited degree they will be given opportunities to specialize more fully in the subjects in which their interest is greatest.

Curriculum's Aims

The curriculum emphasizes (1) the providing of an adequate scholastic background for teachers, (2) a thorough knowledge of subject matter to be taught, with an understanding of its proper placement upon the various grade levels, (3) a thorough knowledge of the psychological principles upon which all education should be based with particular emphasis upon adolescent development, (4) a careful study of procedures to be followed in presenting various subjects efficiently to junior high school students, (5) a thorough acquaintance with the organization and management of the junior high school, (6) much direct contact with junior high school students to be gained through observation participation, and supervised student teaching in junior high school grades in both smaller and larger schools.

Typical Enrollment

It is planned that this curriculum shall be open to students who are especially qualified and whose principal professional interest is in the teaching of junior high school students. It will be sponsored by the State Department of Education and the University of Vermont and will be under the immediate direction of the Department of Education at the University.

It is proposed that the pattern arrangement will be the same as that for the curriculum in Secondary Education. Students who are accepted will have tuition provided by the state Department of Education and the University upon declaring in writing, on boards provided by the State Department of Education, that it is their intention to complete the course and to teach in the schools of Vermont for as long a time as tuition is provided.

A typical enrollment in the junior high school curriculum has been presented as follows:

Now that the mystery of Dormitory X is solved a big bouquet is due to Miss Jefferson, Dean of Dormitories.

Taking over one of Miss Simpson's biggest headaches Miss Jefferson already has made Converse livable for the cadet nurses in record time and will certainly do the same for all the new dorms.

Dot Thornton '44, is vacationing here with her family prior to returning to her graduate work at Wellesley College.

Writers' Corner . .
Gangster's End

By Herman Babbie

Butch O'Rourke appeared in the doorway of the bedroom. He was in his shirt sleeves, his shirt was open at the neck, and he kept one hand in his pocket. He stared at the Shadow blankly, and then his homely face broke into a slow gold-and-ivory grin. "Well, for—! Where the hell did you come from?"

The Shadow chuckled. Butch took his right hand out of his pocket for the first time and the Shadow grasped it. "I wouldn't have believed you could get any uglier, Butch, but you made it."

The gunman hauled him towards a chair and sat him down. He looked a little less plump than he had been when the Shadow saw him last, and there seemed to be a trace of hollowness in his unshaven cheeks; but the weak twinkle in his faded eyes was the same as that by which the Shadow had first been beguiled from his hate for the ordinary run of hoodlums.

"I sure am glad to see you here again, Shadow. It's a long time since we had a drink together." O'Rourke dusted the table with his handkerchief and sat on it. He turned around. "Nora! See if you got any of that gin left we had the other night—Say!" He looked at the Shadow again, beaming with a simple pleasure that had temporarily wiped away the furtive defensiveness with which he had emerged from the bedroom. "Where you been all this time?"

"Here and there," said the Shadow vaguely. "I've covered a good deal of ground. Have you been looking after yourself?"

"Not so badly."

The girl came back into the room, bearing a garishly labelled bottle and three cheap glasses. "It's okey, Butch," she said. "I told him."

The gunman scratched his head. For a moment his heavy face sank back into its mask of dour suspicion. And then he grinned rather ruefully, like an unrepentant urchin. "Well, ya know how it is, Shadow," he said apologetically.

Yes. The moment I saw the worm in the lettuce I knew it was murder. It was one of those that Ernie had in his collection. The formaldehyde killed him. Who did it?"

"Fate."

"Thanks," said the Shadow rising.

The door closed. Butch knew that his last word meant dreaded retribution for the murder of Shadow's friend.

Campus Cleaners Convene at Cynic

Last Tuesday the usually placid CYNIC office was invaded by campus housecleaners. A zealous staff had started to work on one of the paper's most crying needs (and one of the university's)—a file system of photographs, plates, snapshots, and what-have-you. The ambitious group hopes to have every photo in the college at their disposal if the piles of Ariel shots in the basement of Waterman can be arranged in order. Over a thousand wood blocks were handled in one day by the regular semester office staff who have secured a CYNIC filing cabinet. The pictures date back to the 1900's and there are approximately two thousand of them altogether, representing a half century's growth at U. V. M.

Nursing Dept. Has Three Programs

The Department of Nursing was organized September 1, 1943 for a five year program of Nursing education. There are also three other programs being carried on by this department. They are giving Cadet Nurses pre-clinical education in scientific instruction. There is a program for graduate nurses who are preparing for teaching or reposition in hospitals and the third program is given for graduate nurses who want extension courses in professional subjects.

The enrollment for the nursing courses is as follows:

21—Five year program.
60—Cadet program.
15—Graduate Nurse program.
165 Graduate nurses in the extension courses.
27 Graduate nurses have taken extension courses in 6 weeks course.
12 Graduate nurses in the extension courses in academic year.

It is the hope of Miss Crabbe, Director of the Department, that the basic five year program will increase enrollment very considerably now that the end of the cadet program is in sight.

Workshop Meets To Plan Program

Helen Le Baron Heads Experimental Program

Prof B. C. Douglass spoke Tuesday at the Teacher's Workshop in Bradford, Vt. His subject was "Ways and Means of Identifying Practical Problems of Living." This workshop is being held throughout the entire week to make plans for the coming year. Plans are being made for the carrying out of part of the Sloan Foundation experimental program. The program was planned by Miss Helen LeBaron, Chairman of the State Planning Committee for the Experimental Program of the Sloan Foundation, and Supt. Arthur Elliot of Bradford. The program includes conferences scheduled throughout the week and participated in by teachers and speakers.

Aside from Professor Douglass, the principal speakers were: Arthur Elliot, Helen LeBaron; Dr. Paul Collier, Director of Youth Service; Miss Jennie Donaldson, State Helping Teacher; Mr. Howard Martin, State Superintendent of Agricultural Education; and Miss Addie Maynard, President of the Keene Teacher's College, New Hampshire.

After returning from the conference, Professor Douglass remarked that he feels it is very significant that these teachers are meeting for the entire week in preparation for the coming school year.

Brooklyn Comes To Vt., Collects Common Quips

Vermont colloquialism is to be paid tribute in the form of a book of proverbial Vermont sayings. A state committee has been appointed by the American Dialect Society for the purpose of preserving such sayings, which will be printed from time to time. The state committee consists of Prof. W. F. Aiken, chairman, and Prof. L. W. Dean of U. V. M.; Charles Crane of Montpelier, author of "Let Me Show You Vermont", and Prof. A. W. Peach of Norwich. Miss Margaret M. Local Theatres Feature Ham And Yeggs in Three Thrillers

Reviewer Puts G. I. Joe At Top of Recent Films

By Lee Trach

"The Story of G. I. Joe"—was the "topo" in entertainment this past week. Burgess Meredith as Ernie Pyle did a magnificent job in portraying the grand old reporter who lived the filth, pain and misery of our soldiers who fought this war. The story was realistic but made its point well. "War IS Hell." Robert Mitchum as Captain Walker did a fine job in the supporting cast. Try and see this when it comes to town again.

"The Great John L. Sullivan." This was another one of those wine, women and fisticuffs themes set in the Gay Nineties Period, except that someone got the idea of adding a moral to the story. It's a good picture for Sunday School children to show them the pitfalls of Man. The acting was of the amateur dramatic type, strictly another slice off the old ham. Greg McClure, as the wonder man from Boston, would make a fine advertisement for "How to Build Muscles and Still Not Have Hair on Your Chest."

"Incendiary Blonde"—Betty Hutton goes dramatic in a colorful story of "Texas" Guinan, the queen of night club life. The story starts with "Tex" as a Lone Star rodeo performer and brings her up-to-date as a chanteuse of shady songs, with her heart broken about five times by the same man. Seeing as Arturo deCordova was the heartbreaker we couldn't blame her, or could we? Betty is O.K. as a dramatic actress but only during respites between her explosive moods.

"A Thousand and One Nights"—or "Two Hours of lantern, lantern, who's got the lantern?" The same old story of Aladdin's attempt to win the beautiful Princess' hand with a new twist; the Genie changed sex! Cornel Wilde looked and acted insipid as the love-sick Lothario. Phil Silvers was fairly amusing and Evelyn Keyes as the Genie did a competent job in giving the picture some humorous moments. If Scheherazade could see what Hollywood did to her story!

What Will Become Of the Navy Meds?

What is going to become of U. V. M.'s Navy Medics? On September 4 President Mills received a telegram from the Navy Department in Washington stating that the Navy would not renew its contract with the College of Medicine at U. V. M. after November 10. Consequently Navy Medics are wondering what they will do next.

A short time ago the New York Times quoted the Navy as saying they plan to give temporary commissions and place men on inactive status as probationary ensigns.

Many Navy Medics will be able to apply for the G. I. Bill of Rights. The others will have to pay their own tuition and maintenance. In either situation, U. V. M.'s Navy Medics are in a quandary.

Mary Jean Simpson Back From Denver

Miss Simpson, Dean of Women, returned September 4, from the annual executive meeting of Delta Kappa Gamma in Denver, Colo. Representing the president of the Vermont unit, Miss Simpson with representatives from 44 states and the District of Columbia, celebrated the sixteenth Anniversary of the founding of Delta Kappa Gamma by Dr. Annie Webb Blanton, former English professor at the University of Texas.

New England was represented at the meeting by Miss Simpson of Vermont, the presidents of the units of New Hampshire, Connecticut, and Rhode Island.

In honor of the retirement of Doctor Blanton, each representative read and presented her with a leather bound copy of the history of their respective states. Also present at the meeting were Dr. Margaret Stroh, formerly head of the English Department at Wilson's Teachers College in the District of Columbia, retiring national president and newly appointed executive secretary and Doctor Nutterville, newly elected national president, formerly of the University of Montana.

The purpose of Delta Kappa Gamma is to raise the level of professional standing of women teachers, bring about better teaching conditions and enable women teachers to attain equal standing and salary with men teachers through the nation, especially in the south. The organization maintains a fund for scholarships and fellowships for teachers and does continuous research in the field of education. Delta Kappa Gamma also proposes and records legislation on education.

Miss Simpson was president of the Vermont unit of Delta Kappa Gamma for the first five years after its founding in 1939.

ANNE SQUIRE HAYER, MARGARET HALVERSON WERE U.V.M. LEADERS

A Labor Day week-end sailing trip ended disastrously for the three passengers on a dory which were outstanding U. V. M. graduates. Anne Squire Hayer '41 Margaret Fake Halverson '44 and her husband, Ray Halverson '43 Woods Hole Mass. Sapper '45 in a dark red single masted dory for Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard Island where they were to enjoy Labor Day week-end. Some time shortly after passing Woods Hole Mass. it is believed that the 16 foot sail boat ran into a squall which proved fatal to the three occupants. When the boat did not appear at their destination search parties were organized and a three day search by planes, three coast guard boats and a rubber raft ensued.

The body of Ray Halverson was found floating in a life jacket near the Island. Anne Squire Hayer's body was recovered Wednesday AM on the east end of L. Homer Nelson's Island, Cape Cod, and arrived at Watertown on Friday. Mrs. A. J. MacNab is a sister of Anne Hayer has been in Waterbury staying with Mrs. Squire. Mrs. MacNab is a Sophomore at U. V. M.

charge of the Civil Hospital headquarters. The officers were forced to travel back and forth through the firing lines twice a day but since they were neutral they were not molested.

In the Civil Hospital they gave medical attention to countless refugees from Greece the surrounding Islands and Yugoslavia. Doctor Brown stated that there were many deaths because of the terrible shortage of medical supplies and personnel. The nutrition of the children was a great problem and because of their bodies becoming dehydrated in the hot deserts such diseases as measles and the respiratory disease following measles were very often fatal.

Americans Did "Bang-up" Job

The small number of American and British nurses did a marvelous job. Most of the American nurses were from the U. S. Public Health Service but there were some Army nurses also.

Most of the time the American food supply was very good. In fact Doctor Brown said that he was proud of the "bang-up" job that the Americans did everywhere even if they do spend a lot of money. Their accomplishments and efficiency in everything from building airports to hospitals were remarkable.

Dean Brown returned to the United States on the first of April. He flew here directly from Athens by way of the Azores and Bermuda, 7,000 miles, in two days. After his 30-day leave he returned to his former position in Cincinnati.

For the last ten years he has had a summer home on Caspian Lake near Greensboro. He and his wife have always loved Vermont and especially Burlington and they both planned to live here some day. Mrs. Brown will arrive here between the first and middle of October. At present she is in Cincinnati completing her work in the Bio-Mathematics Department of the Children's Hospital Research Foundation of which she has charge. Doctor Brown stated that she will probably still be associated with her work in Cincinnati.

He said that he enjoys life in general. He is a tinkerer by hobby, working mostly with old mirrors. He would like to work with all types of antiques.

Succeeds Dean Beecher

Doctor Brown has done administrative work before especially while overseas and he is sure he will like his new position very much. He is living at Waterman right now, and is looking hopefully for a home.

He succeeds Dean Clarence H. Beecher who has been part-time Dean since 1941. Doctor Beecher resigned the post in December, when Dr. A. Bradley Soule, assistant dean and dean elect in service with the armed forces, also resigned.

A World of Peace

The hardest bird in the heaven to keep alive is the dove of world peace. Education once more must play a leading role in maintaining the work that started in San Francisco. We must educate our enemies to democracy and peace and then take them into the world family. We must educate ourselves so that we realize that as neither Hitler's Aryans nor Mikado's Militarists were a superior race neither are we. A world of equality is my hope. It is a dream but what a dream!"

Office hours of the University's offices, during the summer months from June 4 until September 4, were from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and from 8:00 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Saturdays.

Millis Announces Plans to Enlarge University Campus

Infirmary Now in Use, New Faculty Fraternity Council in Operation

During the summer the University Council completed plans for the expansion of the University campus, the opening of the infirmary, and the returning of fraternity houses to their owners. Plans for the expansion of the U. V. M. campus are now formulated. Long winding paths leading to large, well-constructed buildings will lend an air of prosperity to Vermont's campus.

With the blueprints completed, the first steps toward expansion can be taken. This spring, ground will be broken for the new Agricultural Science building. This building will house many related departments. The planned site is to the direct south of Converse, facing west on the hill.

The Committee on Buildings and Grounds, with three additional members of the Board of Trustees, are in charge. Their plans include the eventual erection of eleven additional buildings. The blueprints show that the expansion will take place between the University Farm and College Row.

Fraternity Council

Room choosing will soon not be the customary problem for girls. "Normalcy" is on the way back via the announcement of President Millis that all fraternity houses will be turned back to their rightful owners probably by October, 1946. Because of the lack of most fraternity organizations, a faculty fraternity council made up of alumni has been established in order to speed this movement. In their two meetings, emergency rushing rules were set up, providing for rushing during the second month of every new quarter. This should rapidly increase the membership in all fraternities.

Wasson Infirmary Open

After months of repair, the Infirmary is now ready for use.

Open house at the new Pearl Randall Wasson Infirmary will be held on Oct. 20. Townspeople are especially welcome in order that they may see the renovation of a house which has been a familiar landmark for years to the people of Burlington.

This beautiful old home, whose basic architecture has been scrupulously preserved, was the residence of President Wheeler, the sixth President of the University. It was in the study of this home in 1848 that the local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa was founded. Equipment for the infirmary was supplied by a fund raised over sixteen years ago in memory of Mrs. Pearl Randall Wasson, first dean of women at Vermont.

Students raised funds last year by personal contributions and benefit dances.

FIRST RECEPTION HELD IN MUSEUM

The annual President's Reception was held in the main hall of the Fleming Museum on Wednesday evening. Standing in the receiving line with President and Mrs. Millis were Dean Simpson, Dean Swift, Dean and Mrs. Carrigan, Doctor and Mrs. Brown, and Professor and Mrs. McKee. After the freshmen were taken through the line by members of Mortar Board and Boulder they were conducted through the museum by Staff and Sandal members.

Millis Warns of Modern Paradox

"The Paradox" was the title of the speech delivered by President Millis at the opening convocation on October 4, in the Ira Allen Chapel. A special welcome was extended to the "49ers" and the returned service men. The main point of the paradox was that despite the defeat of the Totalitarian nations to preserve democracy the world is gradually drifting toward the Fascist evils. The speaker stated that there have been many good results from these governments and now it is the people's responsibility to work out their own problems, to profit from Collectivism, and at the same time to safeguard their individualities with responsibilities.

There is sufficient evidence that some things can be accomplished by Totalitarianism that can't be done under Democracies and that the ensuing problem of the victorious nations is to preserve democracy and at the same time to benefit from Collectivism.

Students were urged to rid themselves of hysteria that usually precedes finals and President Millis also mentioned the fact that any course that can be passed with a few hours of cramming is not much of a course. The President then gave a prescription that should be followed before all exams—that of going to the movies and relaxing the night before.

The convocation was closed by the singing of "Champlain" and a benediction by Rev. Hall.

The entire CYNIC staff is invited to the meeting tonight at 7:30 in the second floor lecture room, 239 Waterman. Anyone who wishes to start on CYNIC is urged to be at this first meeting.

Boulder Men Hold Camp for Freshmen

A college tradition of pre-war days came to life on U. V. M.'s campus this fall when the Boulder men undertook to introduce the freshmen to the University and each other Monday, October 1, in an all day program. After breakfast Dave Hackett '46, and Wendell Earle '46, Boulder, with volunteer assistants, Bob Rosenberg '46, Julian Levine '48, Dick Audette, '47, and Dale Conley '48, started out to show some fifty of the men of the class of '49 through the University buildings.

After lunch the fellows divided up for sports, some playing football in the cage while others preferred bowling, pool, or swimming at the "Y." They reassembled at 6.00 for a chicken pie dinner in the third floor dining room, Waterman. Master of Ceremonies Wendell Earle introduced the guests, Dean Elijah Swift, College of Arts and Sciences, Dean J. E. Carrigan, College of Agriculture, and Professor E. R. McKee, College of Engineering, and the speaker of the evening, Prof. L. S. Rowell, of the Zoology Department. Professor Rowell discussed the distinction between making a life and making a living. He brought his speech into the present by indicating that men should place less importance on getting into college organizations than on what they contribute once accepted.

After dinner the men settled down for a "smoker" in the Faculty Lounge. Dave Hackett explained Student Government and the evening closed with a lively discussion of the honor system.

There will be a V. C. A. meeting on Thursday night in Waterman.

Debaters Plan New Contest Schedule

Intercollegiate Debate Starts For U. V. M.

For those who are interested, the Debating Club is holding its first meeting on Thursday, the fourth at 7.30 in 165 Waterman. During the war, the Debating Club was the only intercollegiate activity. In order to gain poise and practice, the new member will participate in intramural debates. After two or three of those, he is ready for interscholastic debates. The members travel all over the northeast, and have loads of free dinners.

Last year's program consisted of contests with Bates College, both here and in Lewiston, in which two boys from U. V. M. took part, and one with Syracuse here, during their New England trip; during Christmas vacation, the club debated with Skidmore, Columbia, and Vassar. There were several battles with Middlebury. One of these was the prize debate, an old tradition between the schools, at which time a prize is presented to the winning side. Last year we had the great honor of winning that prize. At the same time, one of our students, Eileen Pickett won a special prize speaking prize.

All the members declare that there's nothing like it to build up poise and self confidence. It isn't at all hard or boring, and there's a big dinner with each debate. At the banquet at the end of the year, three members, Pearl Weissbard, Eileen Pickett, and Shirley Harris were initiated into Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary forensic society.

UNLUCKY 13 TO BE MOTIF OF DANCE

Black cats, witches, goblins and cracked mirrors will hold forth in the Student Lounge this Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. The jinx is on when the Staff and Sandal give their dance using the unlucky "13" motif as a theme.

The stag line will be stacked with men invited from St. Michael's College and Norwich University. Admission to the dance will be thirty cents, stag, and fifty cents per couple. This includes the cost of refreshments. Music will be supplied

First Quarter Enrollment Hits UVM Pre-War Stride

Entering Freshmen, Including 92 Veterans, Bring Total Enrollment Figures Above 900 Mark

The peacetime enrollment figures indicate that U. V. M. is once again attracting pre-war numbers, adding up to a total enrollment that surpasses every year since 1940. A very large Freshman class boasts a large enrollment of men students, among them many veterans. The total number of returning servicemen is 92 and the number of men students is expected to be above the 200 mark by second quarter.

The Freshman class once again far exceeds the enrollment of upperclasses with 357 members, the Sophomores follow with 228, Juniors 137, and Seniors 123. Approximately 200 Freshmen women attended the Freshman Camp activities on the hill prior to registration. The 49'ers here showed their propensity for fun, tackling the welcoming bad weather and blizzard that greeted them. They demonstrated their spirit also in the hazards of line waiting and the numerous activities of last week. A large group of men attended men's orientation also prior to the opening date, on the Third Floor Waterman.

In addition to the enrollment in the Arts and Sciences, Agricultural, and Engineering Colleges, 151 students comprise the Medical School total. Approximately 20 unclassified special students add to the final figures.

Because of late enrollments the above figures are approximate and not yet complete.

The following students are enrolled as freshmen in the Arts and Science College. Freshmen in the Agriculture and Engineering Colleges will be printed later.

UVM Spirit Rings In Waterman Hall At Campus Sing

The first Campus Sing of the college year was held Tuesday evening, October 2, when most of the freshmen and a great many of the upperclassmen, who had returned to college early, met in the main entrance to the Waterman Bulding, and sang many of the college songs, as well as other songs of a more general nature. The sing was led by Harriet Bristol '46, and included not only group singing, but also solos, trios and quartets.

One of the highlights of the evening was the reappearance of a fairly large group of men at a college function. The freshman boys had arrived on campus and turned out in a group for the sing. They were stationed on the landing between the two floors of the building and contributed, "She'll be Comin' Round the Mountain," as a group. Several of them offered extemporaneous piano solos, including Chopin's "Polonaise," and boogie-woogie.

Concetta Vergona started the solo performances by playing a number of piano numbers, including George Gershwin's, "Rhapsody in Blue."

The University's gift to Mexico, Ginny Campbell, Peg Donnelly, and Spike Thornton were joined by Ruth Schoppe for a group of Mexican songs. Their Pepsi-Cola commercial was followed by "Allá En Rancho Grande."

Barb Powers, Elsie Bruce and Elizabeth Naess harmonized on, "I See the Moon," and, "Vive La Converse Hall." Their appearance called forth a shower of pennies from the balcony, but these were intercepted before they reached the trio.

The freshman girls had a chance to try out the songs they had learned during Freshman Camp, and their contribution swelled the volume of the Sing to its usual pitch.

Student Union Memo

Women's Governing Setup Explained

The women of the class of 1949 were given their first introduction to Student Union by its president, Fran Witham, who opened the meeting which was held in the Fleming Museum on Thursday, October 4. In her opening address, Fran welcomed the freshman girls and explained the purpose of the meeting which was to thoroughly acquaint every girl with Student Union. She spoke on the scope of authority, the function, and the connection Student Union had with the Administration and the Student Body. Using a large chart, Fran outlined the entire organization after which she introduced the members of the Council. Barbara Anderson, Marjorie Nelson, and Carolyn Aronson spoke briefly on a few

Brown Replaces Beecher as Dean

Americans Did Bang-up Job

Doctor Brown has done administrative work before especially while overseas and he is sure he will like his new position very much. He is living at Waterman right now and is looking hopefully for a home.

He succeeds Dean Clarence H. Beecher who has been part-time Dean since 1941. Doctor Beecher resigned the post in December, when Dr. A. Bradley Soule, assistant dean and dean elect in service with the armed forces, also resigned.

Millis Announces Plans to Enlarge University Campus

Infirmary Now in Use, New Faculty Fraternity Council in Operation

During the summer the University Council completed plans for the expansion of the University campus, the opening of the infirmary, and the returning of fraternity houses to their owners. Plans for the expansion of the U. V. M. campus are now formulated. Long winding paths leading to large, well-constructed buildings will lend an air of prosperity to Vermont's campus.

With the blueprints completed, the first steps toward expansion can be taken this spring, ground will be broken for the new Agricultural Science building. This building will house many related departments. The planned site is to the direct south of Converse, facing west on the hill.

The Committee on Buildings and Grounds, with three additional members of the Board of Trustees, are in charge. Their plans include the eventual erection of seven additional buildings. The blueprints show that the expansion will take place between the University Farm and College Row.

Fraternity Council

Room choosing will soon not be the customary problem for girls. "Normalcy" is on the way back via the announcement of President Millis that all fraternity houses will be turned back to their rightful owners probably by October, 1946. Because of the lack of most fraternity organizations, a faculty fraternity council made up of alumni has been established in order to speed this movement. In their two meetings, emergency rushing rules were set up, providing for rushing during the second month of every new quarter. This should rapidly increase the membership in all fraternities.

Wasson Infirmary Open

After months of repair, the Infirmary is now ready for use.

Open house at the new Pearl Randall Wasson Infirmary will be held on Oct. 2. Townspeople are especially welcome in order that they may see the renovation of a house which has been a familiar landmark for years to the people of Burlington.

This beautiful old home, whose basic architecture has been scrupulously preserved, was the residence of President Wheeler, the sixth President of the University. It was in the study of this home in 1848 that the local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa was founded. Equipment for the infirmary was supplied by a fund raised over sixteen years ago in memory of Mrs. Pearl Randall Wasson, first dean of women at Vermont.

Students raised funds last year by personal contributions and benefit dances.

FIRST RECEPTION HELD IN MUSEUM

The annual President's Reception was held in the main hall of the Fleming Museum on Wednesday evening. Standing in the receiving line with President and Mrs. Millis were Dean Simpson, Miss Swift, Dean and Mrs. Carrigan, Professor and Mrs. Brown, and Professor and Mrs. McKee. After the freshmen were taken through the line by members of Mortar Board and Boulder they were conducted through the museum by Staff and Sandal members.

Millis Warns of Modern Paradox

"The Paradox" was the title of the speech delivered by President Millis at the opening convocation on October 4, in the Ira Allen Chapel. A special welcome was extended to the "49ers" and the returned service men. The main point of the paradox was that despite the defeat of the Totalitarian nations to preserve democracy the world is gradually drifting toward the Fascist evils. The speaker stated that there have been many good results from these governments and now it is the people's responsibility to work out their own problems, to profit from Collectivism, and at the same time to safeguard their individualities with responsibilities.

There is sufficient evidence that some things can be accomplished by Totalitarianism that can't be done under Democracies and that the ensuing problem of the victorious nations is to preserve democracy and at the same time to benefit from Collectivism.

Students were urged to rid themselves of hysteria that usually precedes finals and President Millis also mentioned the fact that any course that can be passed with a few hours of cramming is not much of a course. The President then gave a prescription that should be followed before all exams—that of going to the movies and relaxing the night before.

The convocation was closed by the singing of "Champlain" and a benediction by Rev. Hall.

The entire CYNIC staff is invited to the meeting tonight at 7:30 in the second floor lecture room, 239 Waterman. Anyone who wishes to start on CYNIC is urged to be at this first meeting.

Boulder Men Hold Camp for Freshmen

A college tradition of pre-war days came to life on U. V. M.'s campus this fall when the Boulder men undertook to introduce the freshmen to the University and each other Monday, October 1, in an all day program. After breakfast Dave Hackett '46, and Wendell Earle '46, Boulder, with volunteer assistants, Bob Rosenberg '46, Julian Levine '48, Dick Audette, '47, and Dale Conley '48, started out to show some fifty of the men of the class of '49 through the University buildings.

After lunch the fellows divided up for sports, some playing football in the cage while others preferred bowling, pool, or swimming at the "Y." They reassembled at 6:00 for a chicken pie dinner in the third floor dining room, Waterman. Master of Ceremonies Wendell Earle introduced the guests, Dean Elijah Swift, College of Arts and Sciences, Dean J. E. Carrigan, College of Agriculture, and Professor E. R. McKee, College of Engineering, and the speaker of the evening, Prof. L. S. Rowell, of the Zoology Department. Professor Rowell discussed the distinction between making a life and making a living. He brought his speech into the present by indicating that men should place less importance on getting into college organizations than on what they contribute once accepted.

After dinner the men settled down for a "smoker" in the Faculty Lounge. Dave Hackett explained Student Government and the evening closed with a lively discussion of the honor system.

There will be a V. C. A. meeting on Thursday night in Waterman.

Debaters Plan New Contest Schedule

Intercollegiate Debate Starts For U. V. M.

For those who are interested, the Debating Club is holding its first meeting on Thursday, the fourth at 7:30 in 165 Waterman. During the war, the Debating Club was the only intercollegiate activity. In order to gain poise and practice, the new member will participate in intramural debates. After two or three of those, he is ready for interscholastic debates. The members travel all over the northeast, and have loads of free dinners.

Last year's program consisted of contests with Bates College, both here and in Lewiston, in which two boys from U. V. M. took part, and one with Syracuse here, during their New England trip; during Christmas vacation, the club debated with Skidmore, Columbia, and Vassar. There were several battles with Middlebury. One of these was the prize debate, an old tradition between the schools, at which time a prize is presented to the winning side. Last year we had the great honor of winning that prize. At the same time, one of our students, Eileen Pickett won a special prize speaking prize.

All the members declare that there's nothing like it to build up poise and self confidence. It isn't at all hard or boring, and there's a big dinner with each debate. At the banquet at the end of the year, three members, Pearl Weissbard, Eileen Pickett, and Shirley Harris were initiated into Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary forensic society.

UNLUCKY 13 TO BE MOTIF OF DANCE

Black cats, witches, goblins and cracked mirrors will hold forth in the Student Lounge this Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. The jinx is on when the Staff and Sandal give their dance using the unlucky "13" motif as a theme.

The stag line will be stacked with men invited from St. Michael's College and Norwich University. Admission to the dance will be thirty cents, stag, and fifty cents per couple. This includes the cost of refreshments. Music will be supplied

To the 49'ers

The Freshman class has entered college at a time when postwar living [illegible] problem. The 49'ers will not face the upheaval, [illegible] at wartime living. They will, however, go through the most significant changes in the college system within their four years, and its establishing themselves here after the University's greatest crisis, are subject to experiment. The maze of courses presented at registration, the changes in Freshman English, the Evaluation Committee's ideas for developing the Quarter System, and the problem of newly formed activities all form a landmark upon which an evolving university in a world of new significances, must build an education for a new era and a new type of student.

It is our hope that with the planning of trained minds for well needed changes at U. V. M. this new type student does appear. Through four years denial of the normal way of life we must have deepened our sense of value. It is certain that the men returning from war have shamed our prejudices and narrowness. We will now have to learn a new set of values, placing worth upon activity that demands something better than the narrow view that asks for easy courses, ivory tower studying, and the "holier than thou" attitude of the less-aware members of fraternities towards the non-belongers.

We ask the class of '49 to examine this institution, its purposes and needs. You may supply U. V. M. with an honor system that works, a great step for student preparation for world citizenship, for an integrity we should adapt to all our activities. In a world of such gigantic proportions as ours we hope you receive the blessing of honest and progressive criticism lest you become like the man who knew "the cost of everything and the value of nothing."

Orchids

An orchid should go to the Freshman Orientation Committee and Boobler for last week's introductions. They did a splendid job of getting the Freshmen acquainted with each other, with upperclassmen and Vermont tradition. A bouquet of orchids also to the frosh for their spirit and good sportsmanship. In addition to weathering snow, rain, and confusion their first few days on the hill without complaint they have made camp a lot of fun.

A special thanks is due also to Nancy McNamara and staff for the 1946 Ariel, a very attractive yearbook and a complete and accurate representation of U. V. M.

A Challenge to the Post War Student

We have been told more than once of our tremendous responsibilities as students. [illegible] that when the war and the next year the hope for the success of the world to make a working plan of world cooperation and understanding. And so, the greatest challenge to the student of today is to become a world citizen. This is an especially great challenge to the student who, through service to his country, has seen a greater part of the world to promote the idea of world citizenship. Now those who have only had spokesmen to present their views heretofore are in a position to contribute in person their feelings and convictions toward a new world.

The self-seeking attitude of peoples has continually brought war and destruction. Cooperation must be the keynote though it involves much self-sacrifice. A thoughtful and genuine understanding of racial groups and the people of the whole world can save us. There is a choice to make. Shall we live a fearful life always suspicious of another country's motives or shall we practice international cooperation? We can make friends or make enemies.

Seeds of Nazism have been left in many spots on the earth. Will we be wide awake enough to observe these and crush them or will we fertilize them by our actions and deeds? As students of this post war era it behooves us to ferret out all remaining bits of Nazism and Fascism and bring them to light.

We who are fortunate enough to be attending school in the first post war college year can help to lay the groundwork for a better university. It is our duty to see that we receive a true picture of our world and then become a citizen of it.

Yah Ta Ta . . .

Mary Greene

Lieut. and Mrs. "Ernie" St. Mary were around campus last week. "Ernie" just received his promotion to first lieutenant, and hopes to be back here to ski before the winter is over. Mrs. St. Mary, of course, is Laura Martin of the class of '44.

Another Vermont man visiting around was "Bob" Ward, an ex-'46 chemistry major. "Bob" is now studying Japanese at Minnesota and expects to go overseas soon.

Charles "Chuck" Kempter, ex-'46 was home in Burlington recently after "traveling through" Europe with the army.

"Marge" Alexander, ex-'46, ex-Cynic staff member keeps popping up in Burlington foot loose and fancy free while away from her duties in Waterbury High School.

"Clem" Holden '45 spent the week-end back from Bridgeport, Conn., where he is in personnel work. The best experience yet was sitting in on employer-employee labor disputes (shades of Professor Nuquist's class).

Kay Marcotte, ex-'45, is now back as both student and staff member—liberal arts student and staff member of the museum. Bouquets to her for doing so much for the President's reception.

Doctor Braun, absent on military leave from the chemistry department, was here last Friday conferring with the professors. He plans to return to U. V. M. next January. During the war he did research in Chemical Warfare at M. I. T.

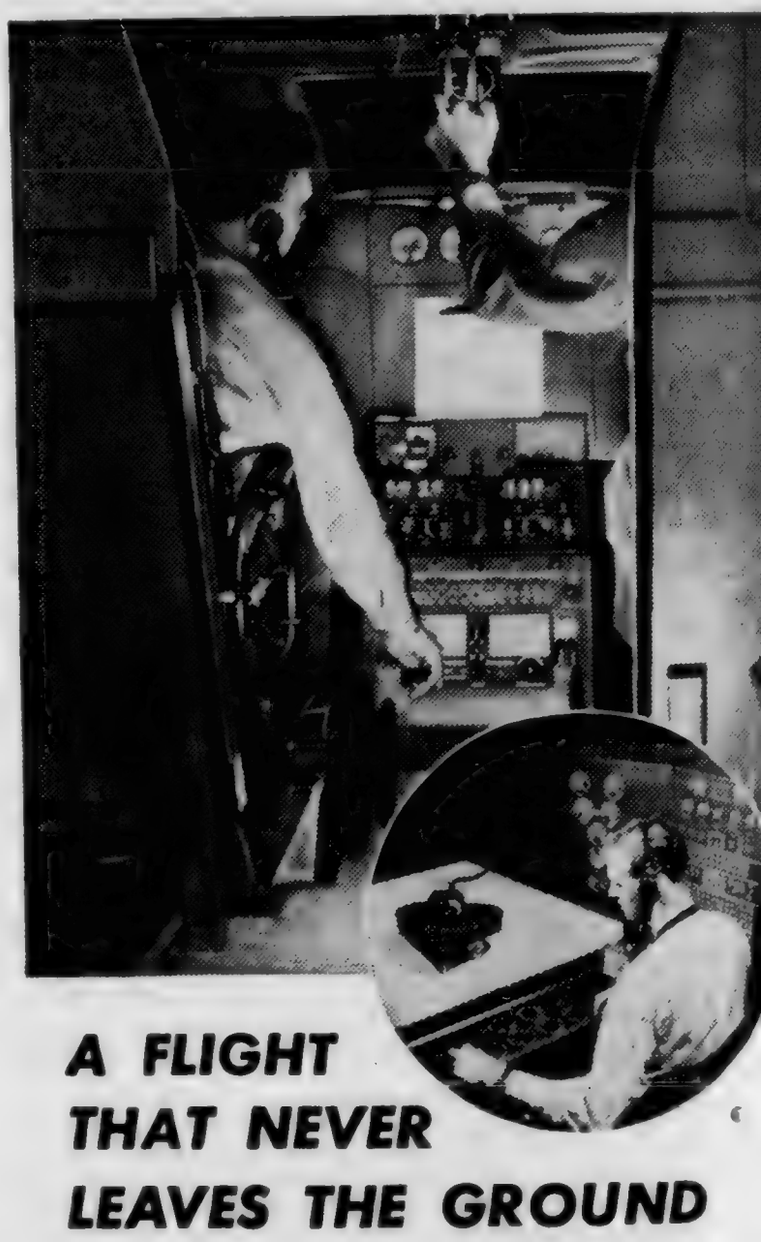
Lt. (j.g.) Robert "Daddy" Long spent the week-end with his family here. He is a former member of the Political Science Department and popular leader of campus sings.

Dave Wright '44, was home and at U. V. M. last week. Result?—He and Alice Miller '46 are engaged.

"Bart" Barry, ex-'44, holder of the Sunderland Trophy has returned to U. V. M. to complete his senior year.

Veterans returning to the University of Toledo, not only do better work than before they entered service, but their grades average above those of civilian students.

Introducing the Faculty . . .



Professor Daggett

Since the end of the war some fascinating tales dealing with the part which secret departments in Washington played in the war effort have been released to the public. On our campus there is one man who reads these articles closely and with special interest. He is Prof. Malcolm Daggett, who comes to head Vermont's department of French from the Office of Strategic Services in Washington, D. C., where he used his language abilities for nearly two years in work directly concerned with French.

Professor Daggett fills the position left vacant by the retirement of Prof. Arthur Myrick, head of the department forty years. Mr. Daggett is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and Phi Sigma Iota, romance language honorary fraternity.

New England is native to the new department chairman, although his studies and travels have carried him to Europe several times. Mr. Daggett was born in Brunswick, Me., and received his bachelor's degree from Bowdoin College in 1929. The summer after his graduation found him far from Maine, however, continuing his studies at the University of Grenoble and traveling extensively in Spain and France. After a year at his alma mater as instructor in French, Professor Daggett began graduate study at Harvard, from which he received his Master's degree in 1932.

The next four years were spent away from New England—at the University of Rochester, N. Y., where he was instructor in French. A FLIGHT THAT NEVER LEAVES THE GROUND

A bomber crew needs training as a team. And now those hazards which are too dangerous for air-borne drill can be duplicated on the ground. This is made possible by an electronic flight trainer perfected by Bell Telephone Laboratories' scientists for the Navy.

At remote controls the instructor follows the "flight," sets up various dangerous conditions, coordinates the crew's reactions.

Tubes glow, switches click much as they do in a telephone exchange, to duplicate such flight perils as icing, fouled fuel lines, "conked" motors. It is the science behind the telephone that here performs another new service to the Nation.

49'ers Introduced to Campus at Sing, Mixer

The first peacetime Freshman Mixer in three and a half years, complete with a full quota of men became a reality last Saturday night, October 6, when U. V. M.'s student body gathered en masse at 8 o'clock in the student Lounge of Waterman Building.

Midst a deluge of University banners, flowers, musical notes, and bobby sox, four hundred students gathered together, warmed to the occasion by Paul Jones, shoe dances, and Sadie Hawkins dances. Max Ahrens orchestra provided the music.

Other entertainment for the evening was provided by University students. Jeanette Soulis and Dick Haigis sang popular songs, Anita Smith gave out with piano solos, and Crystal Malone danced.

Jeanette Soulis and Dick Haigis

At ten o'clock upperclassmen were admitted to the dance, and noise and gaiety became more abundant. Sweeping up the dance floor in typical jitterbug style, Bill Birnbaum and Crystal Malone put on an exhibition.

Refreshments consisting of Boston Coolers and cookies were served throughout the evening.

The committee for the dance consisted of Barbara Powers, chairman, Pearl Weissbard, Phyllis Edgerton, Joan Howard, Lynn Derrick, Sally Merwin, Lenore Eichel, Penny Mandell, Nancy McNamara, Frances Witham, Louise Jordan, and Mickey Mills.

Chaperones for the evening were Professor and Mrs. Hall, and Miss Hughes.

Among the many interesting novelties of the evening were the small green tags, worn by all students containing their names and classes.

The dance finally came to an end at twelve o'clock when students, coupled off by two's and three's, sauntered out.

Receiving Line

UNIVERSITY WOMEN ATTEND DEAN'S TEA

On Saturday afternoon U. V. M.'s freshman women attended the Dean's tea on the third floor of Waterman. Escorted by their big sisters, the freshmen were ushered by members of Staff and Sandal and Mortar Board through a receiving line consisting of Dean Simpson, Mrs. J. Mills, Miss Faye Crabbe, Miss Bayley, Frances Witham '46, and Nancy McNamara '46.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Tenny, Mrs. Towne, Mrs. France, Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Pope, Miss Gutchell, Miss Hughes, Dr. King, Mrs. Marvin, Miss Everett, Mrs. Carrigan, Mrs. McKee, Miss Morneault, Mrs. Page, Miss Brown and Miss Polly Groves. Girls from Staff and Sandal and Sophomore Aides served the other refreshments.

Arrangements for the tea were made by Mortar Board, Staff and Sandal, and the Sophomore Aides.

Redstone Campus Serves As Center Of '45 Frosh Camp

Freshman Camp started off with a bang on Saturday, September 29, with the arrival of nearly two hundred new girls for the orientation program known as Freshman Camp. The first step was registration at Waterman, where the girls obtained name-tags and dormitory assignments for the week-end. About thirty upperclass girls also bearing name-tags were around on the campus to help the Freshman to register and unpack, and to lend a helping hand wherever possible.

After an afternoon of getting settled everybody gathered for a picnic supper in Southwick ballroom. Marilyn Mills and Leanne Howard were in charge of the supper, which included hot dogs, baked beans, cole slaw, rolls, fudgsicles, milk and coffee. Group singing followed, introducing the freshmen to the traditional Vermont songs. A highlight of the evening was the showing of movies taken here at U. V. M. "A Letter from Betty" consisted of shots of Home Ecers engaged in their various classes. "Campus Life" showed brief scenes of many University customs and activities.

After the singing of "Champlain," the freshmen went back to their dorms to rest up after their first taste of college life.

The entire Freshman Camp program was under the direction of Betty Dole. She was assisted by Nancy McNamara, Peggy Donnelly and Louise Jordan.

Skits

Another of the events involving food and fun during the girls' freshman camp was the buffet supper and skit evening which was held Sunday night, September 30 in the Cafeteria and rotunda.

The buffet supper consisted of cold cuts and salad, relishes and rolls.

The skits, of which there were nine in number were put on by S.A.E., Delta Psi, Kappa Sig, Sigma Phi and Grassmount, Slade, Redstone, Robinson and Allen House. The skit by Slade Hall was a take off on the Freshman Camp Committee in which Betty Dole, Spike Thornton, and Mary Greene were excellently portrayed. S.A.E. acted out song titles for the audience to guess and another did a parody of a typical movie audience. A modern melodrama was presented by Sigma Phi and Grassmount, and we must pause in order to give special bows to the marvelous mirror in the skit. An imitation of John J. Anthony's Family Relations Court was done and Robinson did a barnyard scene with each girl imitating a different animal. Delta Psi did a dramatization of a poem about a dunce called "There's a Place for Him" which was culled from the New York Times.

Then the upperclass councillors not to be outdone did a parody on the outstanding social events of last year at U. V. M.

After the skits, the upperclassmen taught the eager little freshmen college songs including the alma mater "Champlain."

The party ended with everyone going back to their temporary dorms for informal bull sessions.

Veterans On Campus Swell First Peacetime Enrollment

"When are the girls moving out of the frat houses?" This is the query of Bart Barry from Lawrence, Mass. Bart is one of the 92 veterans already enrolled at Vermont. He, along with many others, was here before the war but left for the 15th Air Force. He has served in Italy six months, wears the Silver Star, and is now back to finish his course in Civil Engineering. He is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity and received the Sunderland trophy.

Also from the Air Force comes Charles Carver, Jr., a former U. V. M.'er and a native Burlingtonian. He is remembered as a cheerleader back in '41, a member of Phi Delta Theta, and one who went in for all Glee Clubs in a big way. For the past three years he has been with the 13th Air Force in the Southwest Pacific. Now he is to take Civil Engineering. He thinks U. V. M. is about the same as before the war but has too many women. (Wartime can even change man's characteristic attitudes.)

From Brattleboro, Vt., and the 95th Division of the U. S. Army comes Clarence Barber. At U. V. M. he is a Delta Psi and is to be an electrical engineer. Now he says "this is a wonderful place for unmarried men," and he suggests that veterans be exempt from Convocation. While in the service, he has been in Ireland, England, Belgium, Normandy, Northern France, Holland, Luxembourg, Germany and Newport News, Va., "the toughest battle of them all."

Former Half-back

Clarence isn't the only here who's been around in Europe. Hal Mayforth, formerly in the 4th Armored Division, has seemed to follow him all around with the exception of Holland which somehow he missed. Hal is well-known on campus as a Phi Delt, a mechanical engineer, and a football half-back. Both his parents are graduates of U. V. M. and his father was graduate manager of athletics.

From Barre, comes Frosh Jim Dever, who has been serving in the 9th Air Force. He is to be an electrical engineer and his chief interest, he says, is to graduate.

Varsity Track Man

And then there's another former football star, Robert Pulleyn from the 79th Infantry Division. He is a Phi Delta Theta, wears the Purple Heart, and will continue in the business course. Pulleyn was a varsity track man and played end his junior year at U. V. M.

Richard Harper, once a student at Hamilton College, registered here after five years in the service. There he was commissioned 1st lieutenant in the 5th Infantry. As he puts it, he has been a victim of circumstances—in other words, the Army. Dick is from Albany but has been in Vermont before when, "at the tender age of 10 to 13, I went to Boys' Camp here." He has socialistic ideas at heart, is interested in music and art, and expects someday to own a gift shop and do interior decorating on the side. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Also on campus, U. V. M. boasts an ex-M.P.E.G., (The E. G. makes a lot of difference, he says) Harold Brank from Bellows Falls. He has been in the service five years and is now enrolled in business. His great interest lies in Journalism. He thinks U. V. M. is "a beautiful place" but adds, "I hope to get into the bookstore some day."

Vespers Speaker's Speech Summarized

In his sermon, Doctor Park told of a book written in 1492, which he had purchased during a trip abroad in a small bookstore in England. In the back of the book, History of the World, the editor had written, "— And so we come to the year, 1492, and it is clear that everything has been discovered that can be discovered. Every truth has been unfolded which can be unfolded. Everything points to the fact that we are at the end of the world for man has discovered everything. However, there may be a few things happen before the end of the world comes and for this reason I am leaving four pages blank in order that the reader can note on them anything which may happen." This was published before news of the discovery by Columbus of the New World.

Doctor Park went on to say that "we always think that everything has been discovered only to find we are only beginning." When there was no longer anything on the surface of the world to discover scientists uncovered new mysteries beneath the surface of the earth. His illustrations of this were atomic energy, cosmic rays, and disease control.

He continued by saying, "We are on the brink of a discovery of another new world. Through all those events which have happened has run a thin thread of religion which lies not inside the earth but inside man.

Freshmen Lectured By Upperclassmen

Monday morning, October 1, the freshmen got together in the Waterman Building to hear brief talks given by several upperclasswomen. These talks contained advice and information that would be useful to the freshman women throughout the year.

Fran Witham told the freshmen about all the functioning honoraries at U. V. M. Nancy McNamara briefly outlined the picture of sorority life with its advantages and disadvantages. "Spike" Thornton explained the Honor System on which Student Government is working. Mary Greene emphasized the need for sports on campus. Ruth Schoppe spoke to the freshmen about Student Union rules. Peg Donnelly spoke briefly on the student publications, the CYNIC and the Ariel. Barbara Powers of Y. W. C. A., Pearl Weissbard of Hillel, and Mary Mitiguy of Newman Club, spoke of the religious life on campus.

Paper Fights for Name

While the controversy is continuing on the Ohio State University campus over changing the name of the Lantern, a quick glance at the titles of other college papers proves enlightening. Nameplates represent localities, university names and colors.

School name incorporations are The Emory Wheel of Emory University, Stute of Stevens Institute of Technology and Mis-A-Sip of Mississippi State College. The Tar Heel of the University of North Carolina and the VERMONT CYNIC suggest local characteristics.

Women Overrun Converse Hall, Former Center of Male Activity

On a terrace east of College Row and west of the Fine Center stands a building which commands an excellent view of Lake Champlain, the Adirondacks and the Green Mountains. This building, the main dormitory for girls, was named Converse in memory of its benefactor Lyon B. Converse. Mr. Converse received his education at U. V. M. earning his doctorate degree in 1874. He also left some contributions for the use of the professors in the University and started a fund for the present gym.

Collegiate-Gothic Architecture

The building's style of architecture known as "Collegiate Gothic" was built in the Elizabethan period but was used more frequently in Holland and Germany. Its chief characteristic is the installation and grouping of pointed arches with a unique and attractive gargoyle. The building, same in Ireland each hand like exterior, endeavors some style of a three-pinnacled knoll appears to the east. The tall trees across at the Converse Lawn was placed over the pebble entrance and over the north and south entrances are the crests of U. V. M. and the State of Vermont. There are two-eight suites of rooms, each suite consisting of two bedrooms and a study. All of the suites have a fireplace with a marble piece and tiled hearth.

Back in the good old days Converse and the Old Mill, part of which was used as a men's dormitory, were the center of all male activities.

In the south wing is a large common room which was used as a meeting place for all men. For several years the R. O. T. C. Band made the basement of Converse their headquarters. It was there that they held rehearsals and ate their coveted Kake Walk cake.

Used as Co-op Dorm

In 1938 the south wing was remodeled for a co-op dorm, the first of its kind for U. V. M. men. About twenty students were employed under the NYA project and when it was completed about forty males worked for their board.

The Bastile, as it is often referred to, housed about 300 Air Corps Cadets who swarmed our campus in '43 and '44. When they left the place was closed and not opened until this fall. The south wing is now used to accommodate the Cadet Nurses and the middle section for U. V. M. girls while the north wing is still vacant. This is not the first time that the building has been inhabited by girls since it has been used several times during summer sessions.

In a few years (we hope) when the new men's dorms are constructed along the avenue to Converse, the old spirit will be renewed and this campus will mean as much to the boys as Redstone does to the girls.

I. R. C. Club To Hold Meeting Oct. 16th

The first meeting of the International Relations Club will be held on October 16 Tuesday night at the Delta Kappa at 7:45. A number of the faculty will speak on the topic "Our Country's Role in the International Situation." This is a club open to all students and all are welcome. Refreshments will be served.

Economics Head Is Former Journalist

Prior to his [illegible] to the newspaper world, about the same time as Walter Lippmann began [illegible] to cover some of the going events of the day, and what happened when the Lion roared, the bullet and began taking pictures at the mad who recently went possible to be the editorial staff of The Magazine for Philip H. Lehman, new head of the Economics department.

Soldier-Student

Professor Lehman received his bachelor's degree and was Phi Beta Kappa from George Washington University in Washington, D. C. through a unique program which combined the lines of a military and a student. Spending his days as a member of the regular army, Mr. Lehman managed to spend twelve hours a week in evening classes. After he had received his bachelor's, Vermont's new economics professor decided that graduate study was for him, and headed west. At the University of Southern California and later Brookings Institute he delved deep into problems of economic research — but not so deep that he wasn't able to make the world his home during the summer vacations.

Widely Traveled

Aboard one of the merchant ships in the Dollar Line, Mr. Lehman journeyed west from Los Angeles to the mysterious and fascinating Orient, stopping at Honolulu, Tokyo, Singapore, Hong Kong, Port Said and many ports along the Mediterranean. The trip home was made via the Atlantic and the Panama Canal, bringing him back to Los Angeles about the time that classes were forming for the new academic year. Seven globe-circling trips have given him a wealth of practical knowledge to substantiate his economic theories and have introduced him to the language and customs of many lands. The trips also have given him his hobby, India, a land which interests him keenly. Mr. Lehman hopes to return to the Asiatic enigma some day and visit the many friends which he found there. It is a tendency of ours, he says, to overestimate the abilities of China while we decidedly underestimate India.

For eight years previous to his connection with Time magazine Dr. Lehman was a member of the faculty of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. While in New York as economic advisor to Time's editorial staff he covered the Bretton Woods conference and in his spare time taught courses at New York University and New York City College.

Wants to Ski

A somewhat ruddy skier, Dr. Lehman hopes the Vermont winters will give him a chance to pursue his sport. He is also fond of tennis and badminton and is on the lookout for earnest chess players to challenge him to a match. A war interrupted revision of his co-authored book, "Money and Banking," used by Professor Haig in the Economics Department last year, is another project for the immediate future.

Mr. and Mrs. Lehman and two small daughters reside at the little house on Maeenfeld Ave., which holds so much promise for Vermont. Recently vacated by Professor Haig and his family, the house at 49 Maeenfeld is the former home of the late Prof. Frank Dresser of the Engineering College, and was for several years known as Dresser Cottage, one of the favorite cooperative dormitories for girls.

Wasson Infirmary Staff Announced

Appointments to the staff of the Wasson Memorial Infirmary at the University of Vermont, located in the historic Wheeler house at the corner of Main and South Prospect Streets, was announced today by Pres. John S. Millis. The infirmary is expected to be ready for operation at the beginning of the new quarter.

Miss Margaret L. Murray, R.N., of Burlington will be the Resident Director, and Miss Margaret Parchman, of Fort Worth, Texas has been appointed Resident Housekeeper. Miss Parchman is a practical nurse.

Dr. Theodore H. Harwood, director of the University's Health Service, will transfer his offices from the Waterman Building to the infirmary building. Assisting him as consultant to women students will be Dr. Marguerite Kruger Ivers, last year a resident at the Mary Fletcher Hospital, who this year holds a fellowship at the College of Medicine.

U.V.M. Students Attend Conference

Five of our students left U. V. M last Friday morning to attend the first religious conference of the college year, at Yale University. Lois Stevens, Laurel Hansen, and Joanne Goulart, of the YW and Pete Mallett and Dale Conley of the VCA were those from U. V. M. to attend the two-day conference for Conn. Valley Student leaders. Betty Reid, Danforth Graduate Fellow, and assistant to Rev Raymond Hall, accompanied the group.

The conference was designed for the leaders of campus Christian associations. The six seminars into which the group was divided, were worship, Bible study, campus program, community responsibility, world relatedness, and relation of campus to the church. Some of the leaders of the conference were Liston Pope, social ethics professor at Yale, who spoke here at U. V. M. vesper services last year; Richard Niebur, author of religious articles; and "Bill" Easton, professor at Mass. State.

A planning committee of the group was elected with a U. V. M. representative, Joanne Goulart. The committee will meet later on in the month to discuss the next conference, to be on November 9-11.

UVM Bowling League Starts Fall Season

Eight Teams of Both Sexes Will Compete

With eight entries, four women and four men teams, the University Bowling League started the ball rolling last night with two tilts being knocked off the schedule. The Owls, captained by Roger Baker, met the combined efforts of Kappa Alpha Theta and Pi Beta Phi. In the driver's seat for the women were Irene Fahey and M. J. Little. The second game of the evening matched Olga Schoelle's Independent women against the Independent men who sported co-captains Paul Carey and Dave Wetherby.

Tomorrow night the remaining four teams clash, bringing together Alvena Cady's Alpha Chi Omega team and Bob Rosenberg's Phi Sigs in one tilt while the Vets, with Chuck Plumley at the helm, meet the Tri Delta Sigma Gamma combination. Piloting the women will be Ruth Schepps.

Matches this year are to be held Tuesday and Thursday nights at 7:30 and the latest reports from "the people who know" say that the scoring system will be the same as last year; three points for high team total, two for high triple and one for high single. The league play will run over a period of three quarters with seven matches per team a quarter.

Possible Repeat Performance

Last year the Owls took the honors after a nip and tuck battle with both the men and women Independents. Again this year the boys from Lambda Iota are coming up with power and are expecting most of the old team back on the alleys. Talk around the basement empire also puts the Phi Sigs up in the fight. Reports of several additions give expectations of a strong team. The Independents—both sexes please—seem to be next in line and ought to be in the spotlight even though some of the stars are missing.

Bets are running either way when it comes to the Vets. With plenty of power available they should go places if all the boys have their "on" nights at once and can get together when the blue chips are down. Watch for the Vets to be the dark horse.

Plans for Other Leagues

As we go to press, plans are being formed for a freshman bowling league which will operate every Wednesday night. Some action may be seen along these lines tonight if the right people can get together. Also heard at the soda fountain were plans for a mixed couple jamboree to be held on Friday nights but this one is still in the rumor stage.

W. A. A. Notes

W. A. A. promises a varied Fall sports program to suit tastes all the way from the radiator club to the vim, vigor and vitality girls. The freshmen have been divided into green and gold teams and [illegible] the upperclassmen in this year's battle of the colors. Margie Watts captains the green team and Mary Thornton heads the gold. Fall sports clubs are slated to begin functioning on October 29. However twenty enthusiasts have already begun to play field hockey. If you're interested see Joanne Stevens. Sergeant Parker and Sergeant Landa, just released from the Army Air Forces, are expecting a big enrollment in the women's rifle club.

Those people who are interested in working on the 1947 Ariel should contact Elizabeth C. Conklin as soon as possible at 369 South Prospect Street—phone 3093.

Ariels* will be given out Thursday and Friday noons, from 11 a.m. till 2 p.m., in the Main Hall, Waterman.

Four New Members on Senior Staff

Fahey," '46, personnel editor, is known on campus as the "Summertime" and Kake Walker. "Fahey" has always been active in sports, W. A. A. Council, and is an All Sports member. For three years she has been an untiring worker—writing last minute stories and even on occasion bicycling to the Free Press with late copy. "Fahey" fills Connie Brownell's position.

Irene Fahey

Bob Morris

Bob Morris '46, takes Walt Stern's as sports editor. Bob wrote on sports staff of the CYNIC last year.

Barbara Morgan

Barb Morgan, '46, new rewrite editor on the staff fills the vacancy left by Marge Alexander. Barb has always been interested in journalism, and is an active member of Bluestockings and Mortar Board. Interested in writing for the CYNIC since her freshman days, Barb will now spend her time going over reporters stories with a fine tooth comb.

Mary Greene '46, has been added to the staff as a photographic editor. "Greenie," a camera bug from way back, is always on hand to take pictures. President of W. A. A., Mortar Board, and an All Sports member, "Greenie" has been working on the CYNIC for two years.

Mary Greene

ALL WOMEN TRANSFER STUDENTS entering this year, are to meet with Miss Simpson in Room 115, Waterman Building, at 4:30 P.M. on Thursday, October 11, 1945.

Student Court Ready For Completion

This week Student Court, Student Government's protest of a year's standing will be formed. A part of U. V. M. Student Government and an important step towards student control, once lost, the Court now sees hope of effective administration for 1945-46. The executive committee is nominating the Court consisting of three seniors and two juniors composed of two members from each undergraduate college, to be presented as a slate to the student body. Announcements will be made in the CYNIC of the nominees after which students may petition for other candidates if they deem it necessary. Student Court is to be the judiciary body of U. V. M. students.

Responsible for the future of this project is the Student Court Planning Committee pictured above. The Committee appointed by Student Government, drew up the constitution and is now awaiting the formation of the Court to put the constitution into effect.

Prof. Little, Chemist, Likes Opera, Hot Jive and Sports

A new era is here! The days of the long bearded, white haired scientist are over. Those who are skeptical about that statement need only go as far as Morrill Hall and meet Prof. John B. Little. Professor Little, new agricultural chemist at U. V. M. is not only good looking but also tastefully dressed; perfect—right down to his Dunhill cigarettes.

Looking at this pleasant man reclining in his swivel-chair and noting the order'ly arrangement of things in the office, the skeptic will ask, "Is this man really a scientist?" The facts, however, speak for themselves. B.S. in biology from Rutgers in 1937 (his father is a chemist there); Ph.D. in chemistry from Columbia in 1941; subsequent teaching at Columbia and doing research at the Merck Laboratories in New Jersey—All this, and three societies, too. Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society, Phi Lambda Epsilon chemical research society, and The American Chemical Society.

Whereupon our skeptic will open his mouth in amazement. Professor Little has also written articles for scientific journals. Besides teaching at Vermont, he is doing research in antibiotics (a long word meaning plant derived drugs).

Our skeptic fully convinced that he has run into a stuffy scientist will now close his mouth. This impression (and demonstration) can be remedied by information about the other side of Professor Little's life. "Chemistry is a pretty full time job" he says. "In research you don't put in the exact hours—say 8 to 5 or nine to five." He does admit that he has some spare time, however. He likes to read "Generation of Vipers" by Philip Wylie and he delves into poetry when I have the time.

When our skeptic hears that Professor Little likes opera ("It's hard to surpass Tristan") he envisions a "long hair" (by the contrary, however, Professor Little can prove that he's "hep" by dishing out hot licks on the clarinet and the tenor sax. In fact, while at Rutgers he had a dance band and his summer jobs were with the band in the capacity of ship's entertainers on trans-Atlantic liners. As for modern popular music—"Some of the songs have beautiful melodies, for example, 'Long Ago and Far Away.'"

In the field of sports, Professor Little plays tennis and wants to ski. He experimented at Stowe last year and, he modestly adds, "I was not too successful."

Professor Little thinks that Vermont is a beautiful state (quite different from his native New Jersey). However, he was slightly disappointed with New England in general. Our skeptic (obviously from New England) frowns at this, but Professor Little saves himself by hastily adding that the disappointment resulted from the shortages here (especially rooms). He had hoped that all of that was left behind in New York and New Jersey.

Professor Little sticks to the "middle" path in politics. He thinks that the atomic bomb should be turned over to an international board. "The U. S. is missing a wonderful opportunity to contribute to international trust and good-will." He says that our delay in revealing the secret is cushioning the warmth which other nations will show upon receiving it.

At this point, our ex-skeptic will be fully convinced that in Professor Little there is proof of the "new era" scientist's being a "regular guy." And our new convert will be glad to hear that Professor Little hopes to be at U. V. M. for quite some time.

The food "South of the Border" was wonderful. Here my friend liked the chile con carne and other hot foods very much, but I was content with the rich soups and steaks.

Whenever the Mexicans believe that a depression is in the offing, they start building. As a consequence many depressions have been avoided, and many new buildings have been constructed. Mexico is a mixture of old and new thought; followers of the old school keep their women inside the house, have few modern conveniences and little education; the modern Mexicans permit their women to go into the streets alone, are educated, and have modern homes.

I believe that within half a century, Mexico City will be one of the most beautiful cities in the world, with intelligent people more eager than ever to help the Indians get the education which they so badly need.

I.R.C. Lecturer Views World Peace

Evarts Scudder, author and lecturer, will speak on Anglo-American relations and cooperation in the future peace of the world before the International Relations Club on October 25 in the Student Lounge.

In the past decade Evarts Scudder has been noted as a good-will ambassador to England, and during the war, he was the official representative of the United States to the British troops. His close connection to Britain and its people make him not only an authority on this subject but he is known to sound more like an Englishman than an American from [his] close contact with that nation.

Mr. Scudder undoubtedly will touch upon such questions as the attitude of England and the United States towards each other, the place of England in Europe today and the effect of new leaders and new political thought on future world peace.

Vermont Symphony Presents Concert

Stell Andersen, Guest, Plays Grieg's Concerto

On Friday, October 12, 1945, at the Memorial Auditorium, a concert under the auspices of Vermont Education Association was presented by the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra led by Alan Carter, conductor from Middlebury College. The program included the following selections:

Saraband ..... Osborne
Symphony No. 8 in B Minor.. Schubert
Concerto, Opus 16 ..... Grieg
Hungarian Dance No. 5..... Brahms
Wine, Women and Song ..... Strauss

The guest artist of the evening was Stell Andersen, concert pianist. Her selection was Grieg's piano concerto, an arrangement with orchestral accompaniment which is growing in popularity. The last time Miss Andersen played the Grieg concerto before this appearance was on Norway's freedom day.

Y.W.C.A. PLANS FOR BIG MASS MEETING THURSDAY, OCT. 18

There will be a mass meeting of all members and prospective members of Y. W. C. A. Thursday, October 18, at 7.45 p.m. The meeting will be opened with an explanation of the role Y. W plays on the Vermont campus and then the members will be divided into three rotating groups which will be led by the heads of the three commissions of Y. W.

The Christian Faith Commission with Blanche Parker as leader, will plan deputations to rural churches to provide church services and community recreation. This commission includes the committee for worship which will plan special services in the little chapel.

Lois Stevens will lead the Community Projects Commission. This group includes the Elizabeth Lund Home, the Rock Point School, and Mary Fletcher Hospital work projects. Along with its practical applications, the Commission plans to hold a study club on rural health and education. The study clubs will be led by Betty Reid, the Danforth fellow.

This year the Social Action Commission with Nancy Hall as Chairman will devote much of its time to the housing project in Burlington. It will also hold parleys and study clubs dealing with labor problems and racial and religious minorities. As part of its activities the Social Action Commission will sponsor the annual drive for the World Student Service Fund.

Investigation Uncovers Good And Bad Points of Cafeteria

By Pete Mallett and Rita McGarry

Long lines seem to be the major topic this fall at school. The Cafeteria is one of these that Student Government considered important enough to investigate along with a multitude of other complaints and misunderstandings concerning the Cafeteria.

With the help of Miss Godfrey, Food Service Supervisor and President Millis, the following conclusions became apparent:

The Long Line

The Cafeteria puts through an estimated five hundred people at one meal, which is an average of about six persons per minute. This could be increased if the students followed an efficient system of acquiring their food. There is a menu board at the entrance of the cafeteria. Read it. Know what you want. Do not question obvious food dishes. Save your petty discussions for the dining room, and do not debate with your fellow students as to whether you will have lettuce or lettuce and mayonnaise.

Yes, it is admitted by the Food Service Department that the present layout is not desirable. The steam table is not set up properly. The salads are offered in the wrong place. When the Cafeteria was first started no place was made for the salads. This change would require a great deal of expense.

Back tracking results in slowing up the line. Do not leave trays deserted on the tray rack. Accidents have already resulted.

Another detrimental feature of the Cafeteria is its lack of help. They need young men. Remember, the people who serve you are not professional cafeteria workers. They are not yet used to the whims and fancies of the students. The first week of school automatically resulted in a shortage of help because places were being saved by the Food Service Department for college students who desired jobs. People have been coming in all week. The shortage of help has kept Miss Miller working twelve and thirteen hours a day.

After a consultation with President Millis, the following proposals were considered to ease the line situation. President Millis will contact Miss Godfrey, and if it is found that a large number of townspeople do use our cafeteria, a rule excluding them will be established.

The Redstone campus girls are entitled to eat all meals at Redstone. Many of them fill the Cafeteria line at noon in the Waterman. At some mass meeting of the girls, it should be decided whether the Redstone Campus girls shall be allowed to eat at Waterman or not.

(Ed. Note. Lunch is not served at Redstone and the Redstone girls have to add to the line sometimes.)

A special dining room for the faculty and staff members is being proposed now for the third floor dining room. This,

Only Juniors and Seniors Can Qualify For Offices

Each College Represented In Slate Presented By Student Government Executive Committee

By Art Gillman

Student Government at Vermont has come of age with the announcement of the names of the nominees for membership in the Student Court. Article 5, Section III of the Constitution specifically outlines the court, its organization, duties and procedure; but up until Monday it has been only an outline. October 11, at its regular meeting, the Executive Committee of Student Government prepared a list of nominees. From these 18 nominees justices will be elected by the Committee.

Now we the students at U. V. M. are organizing and putting into operation one of those responsibilities that President Millis spoke of at convocation. The Student Court will be an actual functioning organism in our daily lives. It shall be directly concerned with violations of Student Government rules, academic and personal dishonesty. The Court will have the power to review cases on appeal from Student Union, Pan-Hellenic, Interfraternity Council and similar student judicial bodies.

Student Court will be an actual organism because it has been given the power by the administration to punish those found guilty of their various offenses. Students can be punished by the Court by loss of social privileges (restriction to dorms, fraternity or sorority houses) and restrictions on extra-curricular activities. The Court can recommend to the University Council candidates for dismissal from college or other academic penalties.

It has been provided by the bill which elucidates the constitution that administrative machinery be set up to supervise the punishment of men. Student Union is the judicial body for women and reports to the Court.

It has been decided that decisions of the court shall be made known to the University Council, the Executive Com

Why Not Dress Like This?

Hobo Day Brings Rags and Tatters

Hobo Day is coming—so don't mend that shirt! On Saturday, October 20, rags will be respected; shabbiness admired—and the student who is judged the worst-looking one of all can be really proud. Anything goes—for one day college officialdom promised not to frown on the girl who wears faded dungarees to classes.

A traditional part of Hobo Day festivities is the Bean Supper arranged for by the Pep Committee, when U. V. M.'s intellectual tramps gather in the Waterman Cafeteria and are served a genuine hobo's meal—baked beans. The atmosphere will differ a little from the customary fire-by-railroad track, and the Home Economics department prepares its beans with more artistry—but the spirit of trampdom will prevail.

The Pep Committee, consisting of Harriet Bristol, '46, McGill Annand, '48, and Barbara Sneiderger, '47, is preparing a program of entertainment to be served up with the beans.

Staff and Sandal Gives "13" Dance

In an atmosphere of black cats, broken mirrors, and witches, Staff and Sandal, junior women's honorary society, held their first dance of the season October 13 in the Student Lounge of Waterman. The unlucky idea was carried out in the decorations which included a ladder and an open umbrella under which all guests had to pass upon entering the lounge.

Dancing was to the juke box which was supplied with the music of name bands. Stags included men from St. Michael's College and Norwich University. Refreshments were served by members of staff and Sandal. Prof. and Mrs. Baker and Prof. and Mrs. Sargent were chaperons for the dance.

DEBATING SEASON TO BEGIN OCT. 23

The Debating Club, which has an enrollment of over 30 members this year, anticipates a heavy schedule of intercollegiate and intramural debates during the coming year. Material is already being gathered for these debates.

The first intramural debate of the season will be held on Tuesday evening, October 23, time to be arranged. The subject for the debate is one relative to campus life: "Resolved: that an honor system should be adopted." The affirmative will be upheld by Mildred Trachtenberg, '47, and Leona Felix, '48. The negative will be handled by Leonie Cotton, '48, and Ben Bursten, '48.

There are several highlights on this year's program including radio debates from Station WCAX here in Burlington for which the arrangements are yet to be made and the annual Lawrence Prize Speaking Debate which is a traditional contest between the University of Vermont and Middlebury College. The club is also planning to hold a convention for prominent eastern universities including a program of a series of debates.

If you haven't already signed up and would like to do so, come to the next meeting on October 23!

Lenon Pickett and Gordie Harris are managers of the U. V. M. Debate Club called to order the first meeting of the club for the academic year on Thursday evening, October 11. Mr. McGrill D. Rogers, director of debate was also present at this meeting.

Funds For Faculty or Fun?

Despite a considerable depletion in student activity of the extra-curricular variety (notably football and organized intercollegiate athletics) the Student Activity Fee is back to normal, pre-war size with a thirteen dollar increase over last year's rate. What under the heading of activity, calls for this decided increase?

We cannot answer by reiterating the tiresome phrase "There's been a war" to point out that high prices are demanding more money from those who live at the University. However, board and room charges stand at previously enforced rates with no additional fee for food. Are there, then, new activities drawing on the fund? No football team is present on campus to arrange [illegible] of equipment and transportation; only debate club is entering intercollegiate competition with perhaps an extension of ski matches and baseball team transportation in addition.

The only appreciable amount to be taken from the fund is therefore allotted to [illegible] with a third of the money administered to other organizations to break down. Yet last year these two top-salaried activities used only a third of the fee and other organizations were charging admission to most scheduled events. (Excluding the Cultural Committee and the religious group.)

The remaining third of last year's fund went to the Physical Education Department to pay salaries and $1,000 was attributed to Health Service. Obviously in the face of student opposition to paying for events that should be covered by [illegible] and their demand for more ambitious Acts and Events, salaries should be taken out of tuition. The Student Activity Fee should live up to its name.

Another situation faces us this year. All students are assessed for the Health Service whether a large per cent of their number will be using the Winter, February or not. Students from Burlington are charged with the payment of a health fee though they require the services of home and family doctor. Furthermore, in cases of extended illness the internee of the infirmary must pay extra for a visit of over ten days.

In paying the Physical Education Department, the University has elected to [illegible] $5,000 to which juniors and seniors, who do not take Physical Education, must contribute.

It is reasonable to surmise that in 1945-46 fully 60 per cent of our Activity Fee will be consumed by these two departments. Students voted last year for individual contribution to the infirmary and if they object to paying above $10.00 for Health Service to all, they know where to place the blame. But the very conscientious objectors to Physical Education Department dues have another kick coming. Are we to pay salaries out of the Student Activity Fee, the $33 total of which is sufficient to fill student needs, or are we to assess by tuition the people who use services not coming under Activity? Let's call a spade a spade and get what we pay for.

PRO— Students View the Question - Are Fraternities Desirable? —C

Carolyn Aronson

Diana Charles

Nancy Hall

For too long the misleading idea has been prevalent that sororities and fraternities are composed of "birds of a feather flocked together" behind the smug and snobbish protection of a Greek letter pin. The sincere sorority girl does not expect that with her pledge pin will come a push into campus limelight. Rather she gives of her talent and time for a double purpose: to make a place for herself as an individual and to cooperate in the collective effort of a society which can make a unique and greater contribution to campus life. The strength of a sorority is both in its variety and its unity.

Concrete facts prove the point. Last year a sorority on this campus carried out an Americanization project in Burlington. Every sorority supports some worthwhile national or local cause. A spirit of service and an active purpose forms the basis of the sorority code.

During the year a sorority's program includes cultural and social activities not possible to arrange for a wide and scattered campus. The pause for a lecture or a tea adds a touch of gracious living to the practical and hurried aspect of campus life.

And when her four years are over the sorority girl has acquired poise, adaptability, and firm and lasting friendships. In turn she leaves her college enriched and her sorority strengthened.

It is wise to attack the social problem on any campus with a clear view of the attitudes and aspirations of the post-war world. The objects of college life are not only to afford to the college student an opportunity to acquire intellectual competence but also to aid them in the development of well-rounded personalities and democratic attitudes. Thus our collegiate systems must keep a constant eye to the needs of the post-war world.

The exclusiveness of fraternity organization has been widely recognized. The evidence of this exclusiveness lies in the rigidity of the fraternity quota system. Fraternities and sororities so frequently employ false standards in accepting or rejecting prospective members. A person is accepted or rejected not so much on the basis of intrinsic worth as on superficial considerations.

It is apparent that the [illegible] system can breed a feeling of [illegible] tage and superiority within a student body rather than [illegible] ing of unity of purpose. [illegible] are invariably sacrificed [illegible] ties.

In college life where [illegible] thought and action is the [illegible] ing, fraternities seem [illegible] tion-wide statistics have [illegible] percentage of fraternal [illegible] dwindled from 90 per cent [illegible] between 50 and 70 per cent [illegible] hope that this shows a trend [illegible] liberal thought.

"Abbott and Costello in Hollywood"

If you're one of their fans, you may have received the assinine antics they performed in the picture. We didn't! Only relatives and friends would sit through a movie like that.

Strong—October 14, 15, 16
"Men in Her Diary"

The tale of dutiful Doris Mann who has dates a-plenty, but all in her imagination—and her diary. One of those triangle office romances which manages to become untangled and ends happily for all concerned. The moral of this movie, as we gather: Girls, keep diaries safely locked or just don't keep diaries.

"Barely Mentionables"

"Gangs of the Waterfront" (Majestic 12, 13) and the "Song of the Prairie" and "Hoosier Hot Shots" (Strong 12, 13)—These thrillers were for the group who would rather do anything than sit home with a good book. Guaranteed to give nail-chewers an incentive.

PICTURES OF THE WEEK
Flynn—October 14-21
"State Fair"

Another technicolor musical which lives up to the Rodgers-Hammerstein tradition of hit songs with an American folk background. A week spent at a State Fair by a small midwestern family forms the basis of the picture's plot. The chief merits of the movie lie in its colorful picturization of a typical state fair, complete with merry go-round, carnival rides, side-shows, livestock shows, and prize food exhibits. All this and seven hit songs too!!! A "must see" on your list.

Also playing this week:

Flynn

October 14-20—"State Fair"—featuring Jeanne Crain, Dana Andrews, Dick Haymes, and Vivian Blaine.

October 21-24.—"Pride of the Marines"—starring John Garfield as Marine Sgt. Al Schmidt. Also Dane Clark and Eleanor Parker.

Tuesday Chapel Address Is Given By Rev. Beyer

A large group gathered at the Chapel last Tuesday morning to hear an address by the Rev. Richard Beyer of Springfield, Vt. Mr. Beyer's talk was especially [illegible] for a group of students who are entering a world so changing in all its aspects.

He said that in this age people are [illegible] to get bored. Through modern inventions and conveniences, people have [illegible] leisure time in which to think about themselves, and as a result become too self-conscious and forget that in order to find happiness one must first give it away. Many people feel that they could be completely happy if only they never had to work, never had to submit to the will of the majority and never had to worry about money for food and clothing. They feel that they can only attain that sort of a world in Heaven.

Mr. Beyer illustrated by a story that this is not true. Arriving in the next world a man was pleased to find that all his earthly dreams had come true. He never had to do any work. Attendants brought all of his food to him as well as [illegible], books, and entertainment. This was fun for a while, but he soon grew [illegible]. Finding an attendant, he asked if there weren't something he could do for himself or for someone else. "Why," he said, "I'd almost rather be in Hell." "Oh," said the attendant, "I'd rather be in Hell than here with nothing to do." And the attendant answered, "That's where you are!"

Last Tuesday the regular Chapel address was given by the Rev. Duncan Littlefair of St. Albans, Vt.

Knowles Tells Cynic Reporter Highlights of Nutrition Career

By Jan Fickenscher

"Because I was born a girl and brought up to play with dolls, because I liked to cook and sew, and because I thought it would be fun to do these things in a home of my own one day, I became interested in home economics." This was the sincere reply of Miss Esther Knowles, U. V. M.'s new Home Economics teacher, when asked why she entered her chosen field.

Miss Knowles is from Niagara Falls and has never before been in Vermont for any period of time. She thinks "days like this are wonderful" and feels that, "contrary to all notions, New Englanders are extremely friendly." When asked what she has done, she drew a deep breath and began, for she has worked with everything from dehydrated vegetables to college students. She is a graduate of the Rochester Institute of Technology and received her B.S. and M.S. in Home Economics at Syracuse University. Since graduation she has taught at Syracuse, Penn State and the Carnegie Institute of Technology. But she has in no sense of the word restricted her activities to teaching. Since her major interest is in home equipment, she once acted as demonstrator for a gas electric company. At the University of Maryland, Miss Knowles was Home Management Specialist on the Extension Service.

Next time you partake of a steaming bowl of once dehydrated soup, thank Miss Knowles. Interestingly enough, she was the project leader for the Project for the Study of Compressed Dehydrated Vegetables in the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics in the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Even this is not an exhaustive list of Miss Knowles' past experiences, but she refrained modestly from relating more.

In the line of diversion Miss Knowles has many hobbies, chief of which are bridge, skating, bowling and boats. She loves Vermont mountains and "clean air," and wants to learn to ski while here. She is waiting, along with 40 million other Americans, for new tires to make possible an acquaintance with all of Vermont.

Miss Knowles is the resident Advisor in the Home Management House and is assisting in food preparation classes. She will also teach courses in housing, home management and equipment.

It was a popular innovation. Like Railway Express round-trip service for college laundry and baggage, the new method once tried out became nation-wide standard practice. Make a standard practice, too, of packing and wrapping securely, addressing clearly and starting early whatever you have to express. It will help all concerned.

First Match Finds Tri-Delta-Sigma Gamma Leading Tourney

Frank and Carpenter Tie for Men's Single Score, While Thornton Leads the Weaker Sex

At the end of the first week of action in the University Bowling League, Tri Delta—Sigma Gamma combination is leading the pack with six points to their credit. These were piled up last Thursday when the women trounced the Vets and took all the points of the match. Close behind in second spot is the Lambda Iota aggregation with a total of five marks in the win side of the ledger.

This time it was the women who were taken by storm and the Kappa Sig, Theta-Pi Beta Phi team took only one point for the high single of the match. The other four teams, the Men's and Women's Independents, the Phi Sigs and the Alpha Chi Omega women, are all bowling down the third place spot with two points apiece.

Last night four of the teams clashed again in the flying maple haven but at press time the scores were not yet known.

Coming tomorrow night, the remaining four quartets will meet to round out the second week of play. Watch for the Owls, Phi Sigs, Men's Independents and the Tri Delta-Sigma Gamma squads to be in the first division.

Competition for Honors

In the medal department there seems to be a rush after the first clashes. High single honors for the first week are split by Albie Frank and Russ Carpenter, both of whom turned in a neat 129. In second place representing the weaker sex is Mary Thornton with a 120 high string.

Taking first spot in the high triple field is Russ Carpenter with a mean of 347. Mary Thornton, Joe Doaks, Albie Frank and Jim Shadyac are next in line with 317, 310, 307 and 304 respectively. Going into this week's frays there will be only two, Russ and Mary, who will bowl against a 110 average so the handicap will be about even when the scores are computed.

Freshman Bowling League

Tonight the starting gun is supposed to sound for the freshmen and if all plans take shape as they should, there will be some tough competition on the alleys. The Junior League is to be run in the same manner as the regular University League and at the helm, seeing that things run smoothly, will be George Thomas.

It is still rumored that there will be a mixed-couples league which will run Friday nights but no one seems to have volunteered the "Big cheese" spot so not much action can be expected for another week.

Gym Program Places Emphasis on Dance

"The quarter system has enabled us to arrange our classes so that we can offer more sports than usual, and also some new courses to Freshmen this year," said Miss Cummings, of the Physical Education Department.

"From the questionnaire which was answered by Freshmen and Sophomores last spring, we found out that the students, on the whole, had been well pleased with the program, and so, in addition to sports, we have added instruction in clog dancing, American Cowboy dancing, and the dances of foreign nations, besides modern dance and square dancing. We hope that this will offer greater recreation to the students."

Another new project which has been undertaken is instruction in Water Safety, Artificial Respiration and First Aid to be given by a representative from the Red Cross National Headquarters.

The quarter system has helped to form a longer schedule for spring sports, which will cover 10 weeks, the longest period in four years. Freshmen, as well as Sophomores, will be allowed to choose a sport. Among those offered are tennis, archery, softball, hockey, swimming at the "Y," and riding. It was believed that hockey would be best enjoyed during the spring rather than the fall season. The riding class is not being offered among the fall sports because the schedule for an instructor is not at a time which is accessible to many students. It is expected that better provisions can be made for a riding class in the spring.

W. A. A. Notes

By Ruth Jandorek

The W.A.A. is already planning big things for the near future. In the meeting held last Thursday the council planned a party on October 26, to be held in honor of the freshmen. Upperclassmen are invited to join in the fun and share in the refreshments.

The council also decided that it would be wise to have a managers' club in order to acquaint the managers with their duties in the various clubs.

The main purpose of the meeting was to elect new sport managers and to set the opening date of the clubs.

The new managers are as follows:

Riding, Nancy Ladd; skiing, Catherine White; rifle, Mary Boardman and Betty DuBois; modern dance, to be elected; bowling, Joan Westwood, Olga Scholelles; swimming, Marion Rosenhain and Joan Westwood; tennis, Bea Bickford; fencing, Irene Fahey; hockey, Joanne Stevens.

Signing up for clubs will be held on October 26 and 27. Clubs will begin on October 29

From the Bench

By Chuck Constantino

Sports are still on a limited basis regardless of the number of men on the campus. A little rivalry between the upper Frosh and the first quarter boys on the basketball court and a few afternoon workouts of touchfootball are the only activities to be seen in this field.

Orders from headquarters still say nix on collegiate football at U. V. M. but coming into the picture is a proposed intra-mural football league. Such a league was initiated last year with quite a number of seven-man teams entered in the competition. If a sufficient number of teams can be organized and reported to Larry Gardner in the near future, another league can be carried through again this year.

In the first of a series of games between the two frosh squads, the first quarter boys walked away with a 41-36 decision over the old timers. Piling up twenty markers to the loser's three in the first quarter won the game for the tall, fast quintet. With two minutes to play, the second quarter squad was trailing by only two points but were unable to provide the necessary push to take the game.

A second match between these two teams is scheduled this week and the second quarter five is favored by ten points over the victors of last week.

Detroit's win over the Chicago Cubs in the seventh game of the keenly played, but thrill packed, World Series wrapped up the 1945 season. As Paul Richards, Tiger catcher, delivered his series winning double, Larry Gardner's mind must have wandered back to the 1916 classic. In the deciding game of that series, Gardner, then an ace hurler, lost a 2-1 duel becoming baffled by the winning run on a long fly to give the American Leaguers the world's title. Prior to that time Larry had starred at third for U. V. M. Upon his retirement from the majors, Larry returned to Burlington and for many years has kept Vermont high on the list of eastern college teams.

Another ex-U. V. M. third sacker may be "strutting his stuff" in the big show next season. "Bud" Kimball, a star here and for the Burlington Cardinals of the Northern League led the American Association in home runs during the past season with 22. His work was so impressive that the Brooklyn Dodgers purchased him for spring delivery.

As present things are quiet as far as active sports are concerned. Pete Mallet '47, is making a determined effort to line up some intramural football tilts and the freshmen are starting to sharpen their basketball eyes for the coming winter season.

Since football is non-existent in this vicinity perhaps it would be well to take a look at the national picture. So for the first time this season we go out on the limb with our predictions on next Saturday's tilts. We have also invited a guest quarterback to match wits (?) with us. Bill Cook '46, has kindly agreed to put his neck in the noose.

He sees it like this	This department sees it this way:

MUSEUM MURMURS

By Kay Marcott

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS! How many of you are aware of the really fine works of art that are to be seen on our campus? As you may expect, many of these objects are housed in the Fleming Museum. The marble court of the Museum now contains representative artistic material from ancient Assyria to modern France.

The alabaster Assyrian slab (ca. 860 B. C.), from the palace of King Assurnasipal shows the conventionally portrayed worshipper of that ancient age. This relief is considered by many as the finest article in the Museum's collection.

Representative of the Golden Age of Greece (500-400 B. C.) are replicas of the Elgin marbles. The original sculpture from the school of Phidias, once adorned the Parthenon of Athens' Acropolis.

From the early days of the Italian Renaissance is the reproduction of Donatello's famous statue of Saint George (1416 A. D.). Vasari said of it, "Life seems to move within that stone."

The refinement of Flemish painting is ably demonstrated by the original portrait of Anthony van Dyke (1599-1641 B. C.) of a contemporary nobleman.

Of a later period and of the French school is an original landscape by Jean Baptiste Camille Corot (1796-1875 A. D.) who specialized in portraying the grayish mist of dawn or twilight.

The bold realism of the modern sculptor is found in the works of August Rodin (1840-1917 A. D.). The small marble statue, "Brother and Sister," is a fine example of the exquisite delicacy and rhythmic contour of his lyrical expression.

Gardner Plans for Track Comeback

Cross country will make a comeback at U. V. M. this fall if present plans are successful. Larry Gardner has agreed to act as advisory capacity for the squad. Other colleges including many out of state conference have already sounded out U. V. M. on the possibility of meets. This assures the Green and Gold a full schedule with plenty of keen competition.

A meeting will be held at 96 Waterman Thursday, October 18 at 2:00 p.m. for all those interested in trying out for the team. All potential cross country men are urged to attend the meeting regardless of past experience. Vermont has always stood high as a track threat in the east and with a wealth of material enrolled here this year, should once more attain the heights.

Variety of Articles Found in Bookstore

The University Store with its usual aspirin-to-art-supply variety is keeping up its reputation with the new assortment of articles it displays. Colorful hooked rugs, hand made pin cushions, sewing and laundry kits and small ironing boards for last minute pressing are new items at the store. The usual novelty pins have been supplemented to make a larger selection. There are also plenty of green and gold banners, pillow covers, stuffed animals and the now familiar freshman caps.

The Store is the place to find books, too. Everyone has been buying, lately, nothing but text books but there are modern books in stock as well. The lending library offers about three-fourths of the books on the list of best-sellers, including "Cass Timberlaine," Sinclair Lewis's new, much reviewed novel.

All budgets for the year must be submitted by Saturday, October 27 to receive proper consideration.

Farland plans for the coming year were discussed after which all settled down to entertainments sponsored by President Harriet Barnes. Members of the sorority added laughter and pathos to the usual hour of card entertainment in her cozy little way.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

For quite a few years Delta Phi Epsilon has been without any local alumnae. This year we find ourselves blessed with two of them—Rose Eisman Borarsky and Ella Leon Irwin. They are getting that old sorority feeling once again.

Stella Blumberg is now at Boston University where she is studying law. She was home for the week-end and told us all the wonderful details.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

We arrived to find every painter and paperer in the city of Burlington holding shop in our midst. Believe it or not it takes fortitude to be papered into the upper of a double decker, but after a look at that "real" paper stuff in Sally and Mary's room we knew it was worth it. All we can say for Dick and Dugan[illegible] Wow!

Everyone was glad to see Pauline Ellis, Ruth Jones and Julia Pfannebecker all of whom were cited and we are looking forward to seeing Miss Robert Frost, Ivy Chester Phillips' wife and sister Judy.

PI BETA PHI

The sophomore investment brought Betsy Conner and Ellen Hollingsworth back to the fold at the Pi Phi Club for the week-end. A long distance phone call by Liz Conklin from Baltimore last week brought news the news from Caroline Kemper that she had recently undergone an appendectomy. Caroline is working at the most interesting at the University of Maryland Hospital.

SIGMA GAMMA

In an informal house-warming for their new quarters the members of Sigma Gamma will give a Tea at Claggett House on Thursday, October 18 from 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. The sorority is fortunate in being allowed the use of the library in Claggett House for its chapter room this year and the girls are inviting Dean Sawyer, Miss Bailey all sorority alumnae in town and their alumnae to the tea.

Edna Field '46 president of the sorority, is in charge of arrangements assisted by Kate MacNutt.

SIGMA PHI

Sigma Phi held its first meeting of the new year on Monday evening, October 8. Plans were discussed concerning activities during the coming year. Also there was talk about the welcoming of returning Sigs who have been in the service. Quite a few are expected back, one of these is Donald Page who lives in Burlington and is returning to college next year.

The week-end of October 13 will be made more lively by the visit of "Slick Hess" a senior at U. V. M. Med School and Bill Burchard a student at Harvard Med. School. They will spend the week-end in the city during which time we hope to see much of them.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

A new set of officials presided at the SAE's first meeting of the fall semester held October 9 in the Waterman Building. The new officers are: Doug Parizeau, '46, who succeedes John Williams as president; John Lantman '48 who will handle SAE's financial transactions and fills the vacancy left by Parizeau, and Ted Battles '48, scribe.

Plans for the coming Kake Walk were discussed. D. Parizeau and D. Weatherby '48, were appointed as representatives to the Inter-Fraternity Council.

During the summer William Hogan, '48 and John Reagan, '48, were pledged. Richard Mascolo, '48, one of last year's Kake Walkers, entered the Navy Air Corps.

Good, Bad Points Investigated in Student Survey

Cost of Salads Too High

Food is steadily going up in price. The [illegible] at the outdoor tomato crop results in higher prices. Oranges are small and scarce. Grapefruit comes in small portions. Lemons are on black market.

Lack of Butter and Sugar

These are the tightest foods to secure. There is still strict rationing which keeps the quota small.

Unfilled Soup Bowls and Coffee Cups

The soup bowl portions are one dipper full. You get that much. Unfilled coffee cups are an oversight which is now being checked.

Meat Table Slow

The distance between the gas jet in the kitchen and the meat table is great. This results in inefficiency. Originally, this was a poor set-up, and it would be a matter of additional expense to change it.

Open Dining Room on the Third Floor

This dining room will not accomodate enough students to make it work efficiently with the great shortage of help.

Line Cutting

This is a justified complaint. If line cutting does not cease, the line will be policed, and offenders will appear before Student Court. This is a matter of consideration for your fellow student. It is now directly up to the students and their sense of fairness, whether they prefer to be policed while on the lunch line, or whether they will see that a certain amount of justice and ordinary courtesy will prevail.

The Rotunda

There are too many starches at the majority of meals.

Here is the menu of a typical day, dated Thursday, October eleventh: Judge for yourself.

Breakfast—Prunes, figs, juices, oatmeal, raisin bread or toast with jelly, milk, coffee.

Lunch—Baked lima beans, jellied Mexican slaw, bread, floating island, milk, tea, coffee.

Dinner—Vegetable plate, baked potato, wax beans, kale, pear and jelly salad, bread and butter, applesauce cake, milk, tea, coffee.

The Food is Cold When it Arrives

Another legitimate complaint. Cool food is distasteful. The plates are kept hot until food is dished. Food is never dished out until it is desired in the dining room. However, this is being checked on quite thoroughly.

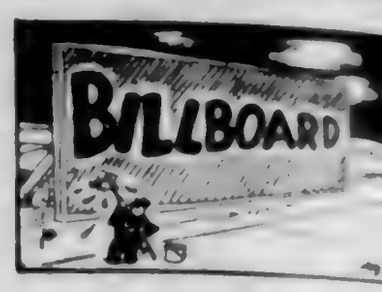
It Takes an Hour to Eat

Miss Godfrey observed one meal the other night. At 6.50 dinner was served. At 7.00 the Rotunda was empty.

Meat Portions Are Very Small

You receive "adequate" portions, the proper amount . . . four ounces per person.

No matter what the cafeteria did to plan their meals, they would never be able to please everybody. The menus are well balanced and adequate for nutritional values. Perhaps this article has not answered all of your additional complaints or suggestions. If you have [illegible] both, the Cafeteria Committee is more than glad to investigate the problems.



With the resignation of Miss [illegible] Underwood, Food Service Director, [illegible] year, another Mid-Westerner, Miss Godfrey, has come to [illegible] fill her position, which includes [illegible] Upon questioning Miss Godfrey [illegible] and why she came to Vermont, she [illegible] that the combined administrative teaching proposition appealed to her. She has had a great deal of experience in both lines, but prefers teaching.

Her undergraduate work was [illegible] Ohio State where she received a B. S. Home Economics. After teaching high school for three years she felt that she would like to put into practice some of the theory she had been taught so she returned to Ohio State to work for her M.S. At first Hospital [illegible] appealed to her, but after serving as Asst. Supervisor at one of the Ohio State cafeterias, while studying for her master's, her mind turned toward Commercial Food Administration.

She was employed by the Child Company in their various [illegible] restaurants in Cleveland and Detroit, before turning again to teaching, this time at Michigan State College, prior to her arrival at U. V. M.

While in college she managed a [illegible] room every summer in an old [illegible] mansion in Waterford, Penna., which is near her birthplace, Ambridge. However, one summer when she was working for Collanade she drove to California and toured throughout the West, but this is her first look at New England and Vermont.

Despite her heavy schedule Miss Godfrey finds time for music, her favorite hobby. She especially enjoys the music of Tchaikowsky and Beethoven.

Miss Florence Day [illegible] from the Smith College [illegible] Work will be on campus [illegible] ber 22, to meet and interview class girls who are interested in [illegible] work. She will answer questions about the field of social work, the scholarships and courses offered by Smith College.

In order to arrange [illegible] Bayley asks that all girls interested in social work see her before above date.

STAFF AND SANDAL

The committee for the dance [illegible] Marjorie Nelson, Lois [illegible] Fickenscher, Louise Jordan, [illegible] guy, dith McLaren, Mary [illegible] Lenore Eichel, Dorothy [illegible] Pickett, Sally Merwin, Ruth [illegible] and Gretchen Manning.

Five Seniors Elected To Court

Committee Names 11 Students in All

The end of a year's work on Student Court was reached Monday night when the Student Government Executive Committee elected seven justices, a chief justice, the attorney, and her two assistants, and a clerk to the court. A new feature in the judicial part of U. V. M. Student Government, the court is designed to give undergraduates a greater share in the responsibility of self government. The planning committee, was assisted by a faculty advisor, Prof. Andrew Nuquist of the Political Science Department.

Five seniors were elected, four justices, and the prosecuting attorney. The seniors are:

College of Engineering

Bart Barry is also a senior Civil Engineer. Bart is a Boulder man, and a Kappa Sig. Before entering the service, he was on the football and track squads.

College of Arts and Sciences

Nancy Hall, a senior, is active on the Religious Life Committee of Student Government and on the Y. W. C. A. cabinet. Nancy has been a member of both Staff and Sandal, and Sophomore Aides.

Pearl Weissbard is a senior Political science major. She is a Mortar Board and a member of Delta Phi Epsilon.

College of Agriculture

Phyllis Edgerton is a senior home economics student, the treasurer of Y. W. C. A., Home Ec Club, IRC, and Pi Beta Phi. She plays in the Co-ed band and was a member of Staff and Sandal.

Harriet Barron, prosecuting attorney, worked on the Ariel staff, and won the B'Nai B'rith Prize in '44. She is the president of Alpha Epsilon Phi.

Ruth Schoppe, a math major '46, is the chief justice of Student Union. She is a Mortar Board, a Pan Hellenic member, a Tri Delta, and she plays in the band.

Bob Rosenberg of Burlington is a senior Economics student. Bob is the CYNIC Business Manager, a Hillel executive, and a member of the debating and dramatics clubs. Bob is a Phi Sigma Delta.

Victory Loan Drive

To back the Victory Loan Drive which begins November 1 on this campus, free movies will be shown at the Fleming Museum weekly. The first film will be shown on Thursday, November 1, at 4 o'clock in the Fleming Auditorium. Sigma Gamma Sorority is backing this project which asks for undiminished civilian support in the purchase of bonds and all other war-related activities.

Interfrat Council Meets November 2

Interfraternity Council will sponsor a meeting on November 2 of all new men on campus to explain the fraternity system. Professor Carroll will speak to the group. The meeting will be held in 239 Waterman at 4.30 p.m., on Friday, November 2.

The purpose of the meeting is to explain to the men how rushing will be carried on this year, and to give them an idea of the workings of the fraternity system at the University of Vermont.

While the meeting is not compulsory, all new men on campus, are strongly urged to attend, in order to acquaint themselves with the fraternity system.

Coming Events

Thursday Oct. 25—I. R. C. Evarts Scudder

Friday Oct 26—W.A.A. Party

Friday Oct. 26—Hillel Services, Little Chapel

A one-day meeting of the Vermont Society for Mental Hygiene will be held Saturday, October 27, at the Fleming Museum.

There is a strong possibility for the establishment of United States Military and Naval air academies. Two bills calling for their erection have already been introduced in Congress. The schools would be patterned after Annapolis and West Point.

Wear Jeans to Eat Beans on Hobo Day

Observers of collegiate fashions would look on U. V. M. with raised eyebrows this Saturday, when campus attire will consist of—wait and see! On Hobo Day anything can happen, and to dress conservatively is to sin again tradition. The Bean Supper, at 6 p.m., will highlight Hobo Day festivities. There the tramps will be judged, and prizes given to the trampiest. Originality will score the most points, so imagination should be allowed full play.

Among the entertainment features being planned by the Pep Committee and Pan Hell are singing by Dick Haigis, a piano exhibition by Bob Astona, and, of course, music by Joe Lechnyr and the band. They are also sponsoring a bean guessing contest (how many beans in the jar?) for those who are numerically inclined. A dance will follow the Bean Supper.

Tickets for the Bean Supper will be on sale in the main hall of Waterman. Price, 40 cents per hobo.

Forty-three Frosh Excel in English

Entire Class Rating Exceeds National Norm

The new plan for English placement of new students in U. V. M. has resulted in the exemption of forty three freshmen from the regular freshman English curriculum. The plan has been worked out by the Re-evaluation Committee on English Placement.

43 High Scores

According to the Purdue English placement test which is the placement test recently adopted by the re-evaluation committee, students who received exceptionally high scores may have the opportunity of taking any one of the advanced English courses offered, including: History of English Literature; American Literature; or Periodical Writing. The Re-evaluation Committee made up of Student Government, the president and deans of all the colleges, and in conjunction with the English department has found that the new rating of the freshman class has far exceeded the national norm which was issued with the test. Not only this, forty-three students received exceptionally high scores which made them eligible for what is regularly considered sophomore English.

Liberal Arts Leads

Of the number receiving the high grades there were thirty-three Liberal Arts students; three in Elementary Education; one in Secretarial Education; one in Music Education; one in Engineering, and four in Agriculture. The names of the students in their individual curricula are as follows:

Liberal Arts: Jane N. Atwood, Allaire Blake, Betty Ann Branch, Mary Carpenter, Willa Chaney, Gladys Clark, Katherine Crocker, B. J. Doheny, Donna Donelan, Anna Dragoni, Dorothy Elmer, Rita Gilman, Fay Hawkins, Beverly Hillman, Helen Hitchcock, Peggy Ingalls, E. M. Kaitz, Betty Ann Kelley, Carol Leavitt, Maragarida LeSueur, Theresa Litster, Patricia McGinnis, Gladys Neiburg, M. I. Penn, Mary Plante, Jean Shaw, Zola Rae Shipman, Rita Silverburg, Mildred Stine, Margaret Thurstone, and Grace Wieder; Elementary Education: Janet Brooks, Anna Olson, and Joyce Prescott; Secretarial Education: Marie Powers; Music Education: Anne Illingworth; English: A. Popularity of the Adult Education Program Growing

Outside Courses Are Offered in Springfield And Rouses Point, N. Y.

Adult education courses offered by the University of Vermont will fill a new and big need. Courses of the nature given will be carried on in and outside of Burlington and the courses that in general psychology will be given outside of the state.

According to Prof. R. L. Cheney, acting director of the Adult Education program here in Vermont the courses offered last year were so popular that they will be continued this year, combined more extensively. The new extra-state course to be offered in psychology will no doubt act as a foundation for other such courses in other cities in as well as out of the borders of Vermont. The new psychology course is to be given in Rouses Point, N. Y., by Prof. H. L. Riker of the University of Vermont Psychology Department. The course will be practical in nature and will deal with the application of psychological principles and practices on various forms of human behavior, including business, industry, education, medicine, law, advertising, propaganda, vocational guidance and mental hygiene.

College Credit Given

One outside course is already in operation in Springfield, Vt. This course is International Relations taught by Prof. Andrew E. Nuquist of the Political Science Department and Paul D. Evans of the History Department. This class, at the present time, has an enrollment of forty two students.

There is a differentiation of the kinds of courses and credit given. One course will consist of college credit courses, similar to those given to full time students at the University and leading to degrees if desired. The other type of course offers no college credit but is more informal in nature and will fit a variety of needs.

Courses Given

Among the courses given will be Creative Writing with Prof. Leon W. Dean; Elementary Spanish offered by Prof. R. S. Towne; Accounting, taught by Prof. L. L. Briggs; Child Psychology with Prof. Sarah M. Holbrook and courses in painting, modern art, and art appreciation with Mr. Francis P. Colburn and Mrs. Isabel Mills as instructors.

First Formal Dance By Mortar Board

Signs of our return to peace time seem to have arrived with the announcement of the University's first formal dance sponsored by Mortar Board to be held on Saturday, November 3 in the Waterman Building.

One of the many exciting features of the Mortar Board Formal arises in the announcement that the dance will be held in the main fountain, rotunda, and cafeteria combined, with musical notes being tossed by Max Ahrens and his band.

Although men once again abound in great quantities on our campus there still seems to be a shortage, and for that reason, Mortar Board has voted to supply girls with dates from Norwich, Dartmouth and perhaps Plattsburg. A date bureau will be set up in the front hall of Waterman Saturday morning, and girls who are interested, are asked to sign up at that time. All dates will be matched according to height and age.

Problem of Textbooks Remain Unsolved for Waiting Students

By Burston and Mallett

Congratulations Mr. Kehoe and staff for the installation of a sound system in the Chapel. Incidentally congratulations are also due to Mr. Smith and those responsible for the new library system. The students can now use the time they used to spend in taking out books to stand in line for the cafeteria. In doing away with these problems the University has taken two needed steps in eliminating inefficiency.

Inadequate Book Supply

However, some inefficiencies still lie directly in the path of the conscientious student here at the University. One of these is the dilemma in which the student finds himself when he has to purchase his texts. At the beginning of the quarter certain courses scheduled by chapters, the assignments to be covered within a certain period. Texts were scheduled on the basis of these assignments. The bookstore has had few and sometimes no required texts for some courses. Thus if and when the texts do finally arrive, the student will find it necessary to read a multitude of chapters and cram for tests. Some courses have been able to supply a few texts, other courses have been able to supply merely promises. Certain information indicates that approximately 50 per cent of the courses have not an adequate supply of textbooks.

Solution—Elementary

Realizing the difficulties presented by the reconversion period, we can offer two solutions to this problem. Our immediate suggestion is for the students to place their textbook orders now for courses to be offered in 1946. This will assure the student of a fair chance to get the required texts on time. For solution, however, will only work for freshmen and those who plan not to graduate for a few years. The most practical solution for everybody is for the professors to take the shortage into the consideration when giving out the assignments. Furthermore we would suggest a system which is used by progressive schools throughout the country. There should be on reserve in the library copies of each text used in the school. The number of copies should vary with the popularity of the course. We feel that this would do much towards relieving the dilemma of the students.

Veterans Problem

The veterans attending the University have an additional problem. The few books that they are able to get must be secured through an inefficient and cumbersome procedure. The veteran asks for the required text. He is then given two sales slips. These must be taken to Professor Butterfield's office to be signed. In the meantime, the veteran's books and other supplies lie idle and disturb the neatness and efficiency of the bookstore. Many times the veteran will find Professor Butterfield's office closed. This means that the student must try again and again until he finds Professor Butterfield in. Meanwhile the veteran must do without the needed textbook and supplies.

Increase Efficiency

The people responsible for this system have taken a simple procedure and have made a complex problem out of it. It would be much easier for the veteran to get his books and supplies immediately and sign the proper slips, one of which should be sent to Professor Butterfield by the bookstore. If any veteran were to make ridiculous purchases, he could be easily reprimanded by Professor Butterfield. This would save the veteran much valuable time.

If the textbook problems are acted upon quickly much will have been done in increasing the efficiency of the school and the interest of the student in his courses.

Convocation Plans

Professor Dykhuizen, Chairman of the committee for arranging the Convocations, has announced November 1 as the tentative date for the first convocation, with November 8 and 29 as the dates for the other two to be held in November. The committee, however, hasn't met as yet so that the speakers and subjects haven't been decided upon. A permanent announcement will be made at a later date.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

After spending years at U. V. M., and after having been duly subjected under attempted and unsuccessful duress (already it entails flu, stomach upsets, strained ligaments and the like) I read the notice I received this summer about the opening of the new infirmary with a great deal of pleasure and new peace of mind. I felt happy in the knowledge that this year should I ever need the kindly and skillful ministrations of a trained nurse or doctor, the sanctity of a hospital bed, I would not have to be satisfied with only a kitchen brewed cup of Betty Crockers delicious noodle soup per day and the "Sorry, I can't do more, I have to go to a meeting" look of sympathy from my roommate.

So—I came to U. V. M. and plunked down with carefree heart my $11 Student activity fee which U. V. M. carefully specified was to go in part for an infirmary fee.

No Santa Claus

There had to be a catch—and so there was. Sorry to say, U. V. M. has quite completely destroyed my faith in Santa Claus—not to mention humanity.

It appears you have to have a fever to be admitted to the infirmary—never mind the fact that your eyes water, your ears buzz, your head hurts, your throat's sore, you can't taste, talk or breathe—YOU HAVE TO HAVE A FEVER!

I caught a cold. Much as I hated the idea of having to go to bed for a few days, miss out on classes, and have to make up all the work I missed, I went to the infirmary in order to get some treatment there, and to stop a cold before it grew into something worse. I went to the infirmary twice, once with an inflamed sore throat and the second day with a cold, the germs of which felt like they had grandoise illusions for becoming tubercules.

Danger to Others

I was sent out of the infirmary with the advice that since I didn't have a fever, why not just rest in the afternoon and go out for meals?

What is so hindering the perception of the medical staff in the infirmary that they cannot see the harm that I can do to every student in this school by spreading the germ? My cold does not only mean disease to me, but to every person who sits near me in class, to every person who eats the food in the cafeteria that I've passed by. I might even go so far as to say to every person that I pass in the halls. Think of this situation multiplied perhaps 50 times.

My cold, unattended, will linger on for about two weeks. If I had been confined in the infirmary over night with my sore throat and treated, I'd be perfectly fine today. I understood that one of the primary functions of the infirmary was to curtail infection, thus cutting down on the many illnesses with which the housemothers had to contend last year.

We who would be confined in the infirmary would be paying for our board and for the nursing services. I'd like an answer to this question: Why is the infirmary refusing to take any but sickest people with the splendid facilities they declare they have?

One more fact for consideration: No facilities whatsoever have been provided for taking care of ill men and women in their dorms. Thus, if a person who feels ill should want to stay in his dorm, he is completely toodless and neglected.

Perhaps this is the modern trend of all good universities—to save their infirmary for display purposes—I don't know. But I will say this: U. V. M. might heed this letter well because one case of unfortunate neglect is all that is needed to cause a very unhappy situation indeed.

AGILITY.

Chapel Speaker Gives Philosophies of Life

The address at Chapel on October 23 was given by Herbert S. Moore of Richford and Montgomery, Vt.

Found in the Cynic Files

By Marion Parker

April 25, 1883: On this date was born the first University publication to be designated as THE VERMONT CYNIC. Previous to this time, there had been several literary publications, including "Winnowings of the Mill." Although the CYNIC was not a successor of these, it was at first similar to them in that it was chiefly a collection of literary works. On the top of the first page of the now yellowed first copy is the warning "nothing of a partisan nature will be admitted."

Just recently many queries have reached our ears concerning why the paper was named THE VERMONT CYNIC. "Cynic" has been translated as "dog" or "watchdog" and, for that reason, it was thought to be a fitting name. The paper was to be the watchdog, watching over the interests of the campus.

Thus inaugurated, we present excerpts from back copies dated analogously with this issue.

October 17, 1883:

October 22, 1884:

"All friends of the University will be rejoiced at the entrance of so large a class of freshmen. The [illegible] the class is 44. Seven [illegible] been made to the sophomore [illegible]. This is the largest accession [illegible] has ever received."

"Two more ladies have joined '89 swells the number in the class to 8[illegible] the college to 18. This is the largest ber since co-education began at the versity of Vermont. An extra seats has been put in the Chapel for use."

"OLD IRONSIDES"
stood up throughout the war

LIKE the famous old ship, your telephone has come through the war with colors flying.

What other aid to modern living has been so dependable under all conditions and so free from mechanical troubles?

During the war years, when so little new telephone apparatus could be made for the home front, even equipment made many years ago by Western Electric has served you faithfully and has been a national asset in time of war. Quality shows best when the going is tough.

Western Electric, supply unit of the Bell System, is now tackling its biggest peacetime job. Furnishing materials and equipment to meet the System's immediate needs—then to carry out the System's $2,000,000,000 post-war construction program—promises record peace-time production and a level of employment higher than in the years just before the war.

Enrollment Hits Thousand Mark Women Still Lead All Colleges

Ages Run from 47 to 15; Mother and Daughter Enroll Together In Adult Education Program

The return of peacetime to the U. V. M. campus witnesses an enrollment of 1,046 students, of which 104 are returning veterans. This is an increase of 158 over last year's enrollment. More than one-third of the students at the University are men and the ratio of men is expected to increase each quarter.

An interesting item to be noted in the Adult Education classes is a mother-daughter combination, Mrs. Nan Thomas Isett, 41, and her daughter, Mrs. Joyce Isett Patterson, 24, both from Burlington. It might also be called a grandmother-daughter combination for Mrs. Isett is the grandmother of one-year-old John James Patterson, fifth. Both Mrs. Isett and Mrs. Patterson are taking courses in psychology and Spanish. Mrs. Isett is also taking creative writing and Mrs. Patterson, accounting.

Gladys Neiburg claims to be the oldest student in the Freshman class. She admits to the age of 47. An experienced writer, she is now working for a Bachelor of Arts degree. Because of her writing ability, Miss Neiburg was exempted from Freshman English.

Returning Air Cadets

Of the thousands of Air Corps preflight cadets who were stationed on this campus, many expressed a desire to return here after the war. There are two such cadets who have fulfilled that desire. John Williamson of Bayonne, N. J., who is taking Liberal Arts and Ralph Booker of Chicago, Ill., who is majoring in Chemistry.

Not to be forgotten from the list of the new and interesting personalities on campus this year are three women veterans. Recently discharged from the W. A. C.'s are Eleanor Jordan of Milton, and Bernice Severance of Colchester. The lone ex-Wave at U. V. M. is Anna Henderson who comes from New Haven, Conn. All three are taking the Med. Technician course.

Complete Fall Enrollment

The complete enrollment for the fall quarter includes 363 men and 683 women. Broken down by men and women, colleges and curricula, classes are as follows: Elementary education, 99 women and no men, with 16 seniors, 19 juniors, 30 sophomores and 34 freshmen.

Agriculture and home economics, 123 students of which 104 are women and 19 are men. There are 17 men and 7 women taking agriculture, 94 women taking home economics, and unclassified agriculture students number five, two men and three women. In the Agricultural College there are 20 seniors enrolled, of which only three are men; 15 women juniors; sophomores, 41, of which 36 are women and five are men, and freshmen, 42, of which 33 are women and nine men.

Engineering college: Fifty students of which four are women. Civil engineering 13 students of which one is a woman; electrical engineering, 15 men, and mechanical engineering, 23 students of which three are women. There are four seniors in the engineering which includes one woman; three men juniors; 10 sophomores of which one is a woman, and 33 freshmen of which two are women.

Nurses' education: Enrolled are 25 women, of which five are unclassified. No senior or junior classes are entered but there are 12 sophomore and 8 freshman women.

Medical technology: Twenty-two students, of which two are freshman men veterans, one woman; juniors, two women, and freshmen, 13 women.

Arts and Sciences

Arts and sciences: Of the 577 students 418 are women and 159 are men. In courses, there are 21 chemistry students of which 13 are women and eight are men; business, 38 students, of which 31 are men and seven are women; com-

ALPHA CHI DINNER

Active and alumnae members of Alpha Chi Omega gathered to pay tribute to their founders last Monday night with a supper in honor of the seven founders of the sorority. The traditional Dream Cake Ceremony was held at the conclusion to the Founders Day celebration.

Carolyn Aronson '46 was in charge of the supper committee and with the help of the several active members served tuna fish casserole, carrot and raisin salad, rolls, ice cream and coffee.

Tickets for the Bean Supper will be on sale in the Bookstore, Thursday and Friday. The price will be 40c. Girls who have board contracts do not have to buy tickets.

Pi Beta Phi Gives Tea

At a tea at the Pi Phi house on Sunday afternoon Mrs. Allen Moore, the new director of the Pi Phi house, was introduced to other house directors and representatives from each sorority. In the receiving line were Mrs. Moore, Mary Lou Robinson, president of the sorority, Virginia Donaldson, house president, and Mrs. Richard Aiken, a Pi Beta Phi alumna. Betty Mansfield and Beth Kelley poured.

Exchange Excerpts

Items From Other Colleges

By Ben Burston

In the CYNIC Office there are a few piles of newspapers from other colleges. The staff, in order to justify its laziness to throw the papers out, decided to start a new column, an exchange column. The word "exchange" is here advisedly substituted for the word "plagiarism."

To start off on the lighter side, a quip from the University of Dubuque's Cue is offered:

Oscar's definition of a male parent: "The Kin you love to touch."

Ouch! That hurt me as much as it hurt you—and, talking about getting hurt, U. V. M.'s freshmen should consider themselves lucky. Their "hazing" was rather minor compared to the freshmen at Temple University. According to the Temple University News, a six-point hazing program was used this year. This included the wearing of freshman identification at all times, girls wearing their hair in pigtails and using no make-up and boys parting their hair in the middle on a certain day. Frosh were allowed to buy food in the grille, but couldn't eat it there. Girls had to carry matches and boys had to have a ready supply of bobby pins. Ah, well, they're only freshmen once.

In the more serious vein is the fraternity question. Williams College's Williams Record says that the students are in favor of continuing frats. Some of the arguments offered are that any club system would have frat evils, and that frats foster spirit. However, it is suggested that changes be made in rushing and interfraternity council.

That veterans who are fraternity men are returning to college is the argument of the Boston University News—and, on the subject of veterans, The New Hampshire proudly state's that the college's Veterans' Organization has been dissolved. In part the editorial reads:

"Due to the excellent manner in which the Post-War Education Service has functioned and handled the veteran's problems here, the Veterans' Organization found itself without a purpose. There are 80 social organizations on this campus. (Incidentally, the title of the editorial is 'Plain American Citizens.'")

And, from the sublime to the ridiculous, here is a poem from the Northeastern News:

To kiss is oh, so very base,
I never do!
To smoke or drink is in bad taste,
I never do!
I don't believe in love or mate,
I never even stay out late,
You wouldn't think I'd get a date,
I never do!

In the field of extra-curricular activities, N. Y. U.'s Heights Daily News suggests a "college life more extensive than attending classes. College—means dramatic shows, humor magazines, frequent class dances." Of course, the News suggests studying also—and in connection with extra-curricular activities, Rider College's Rider News tells of the college's campaign to provide clothes for the needy people of war-torn Europe. All of which reminds us of the W. S. S. F. clothing drive here last year.

The prize boner was reported by Wayne University's Detroit Collegian:

Dr. Norman D. Humphrey asked members of his Social Disorganization class whether or not modern youth is revolting. Greeted by a stony silence, he hastened to add, "against the mores of society, I mean."

The headline for the above was "Well?"

Evarts Scudder to Lecture at I.R.C.

Evarts Scudder

Resident in England for eight years before the war, Evarts Scudder, who comes here under the auspices of the International Relations Club to speak on the subject "Which Way Britannia?" knows the English, their character, temperament, and opinions better than any other American. As the permanent station of U. S. Information Representative to the British Empire, he'll be resuming his usual approach this time telling the Americans what he knows about Britain.

Mr. Scudder's work interpreting the U. S. to the people on war effort and its post-war outlook to British service men and women makes him very much interested in continuing good relations between Britain and the U. S. On his visit at his work he has made 11 crossings of the Atlantic since 1940, gone through the "blitz," "buzz bomb," V-2 attacks, and was three times bombed out of his home. In the past four years he has lectured before several hundred thousand wearers of British uniforms; and sometimes has spoken three times a day.

Mr. Scudder speaks this Thursday night, Oct. 25, at 8:00 p.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel. All students and townspeople are invited to come and hear his views on the post-war harmony between Britain and the United States.

Evasive Amoeba Puzzles Students

In a little cubby-hole of an office in the Science Building, sits Professor Rowell, of the Zoology Department "up to his neck in hot water" trying to figure out what to do with the bumper crop of 191 students. This number is an all-time high and is attributed to the fact that all the previous sections of Zoology I for each different course have been integrated into one, and also the fact that the new quarterly system makes it possible for a student to receive credit for a quarter of Zoology I.

There are seven lab sections. Student assistants, something new in the Science Department, are Hiram Lippman, Virginia Donaldson, Lois Stevens, Elizabeth Drake, Olive Morris, Ann Bayley, Patricia Boynton, and Jan Commanday. The theme song of the first lab periods seemed to be "Oh where, oh where, has my little amoeba gone?" A number of the students found that they were not only one-celled animals, but also very evasive. But, after all, if you were one-celled and transparent, you would be self-conscious too.

Also of interest and guaranteed to help any indulgent femme cut down on her calories, are five beautiful monkeys. They are not only very dead but embalmed. Five strong-hearted people of the primate anatomy class are responsible for these specimens and if you want to stay healthy and hungry, don't open the little door on the left as you come out of the cellar of the Science Hall.

All budgets for the year must be submitted by Saturday, October 27, to receive consideration.

WANDA HOPKINSON,
Treasurer, U. V. M. Students.

PROFESSOR NUQUIST ADDRESSES I.R.C.

Prof. Andrew Nuquist spoke at the first meeting of the International Relations Club this year on the subject of student interest in the international situation. With conviction, he stressed the point that a knowledge of what is occurring in the world today will be the basis of the concern that we students, as future citizens, should have. He deems it important that college students gain this interest in order to become civic minded members of society.

The new plans for the year ahead were outlined by Peter Mallett, the President of I. R. C. Three guest speakers from outside the University are to be featured. In addition, round table discussions, forums and lectures by professors of U. V. M. are planned.

All students who have changed their Burlington or home addresses since enrollment should notify the Registrar's Office immediately. This information must be had for the Student Directory.

Former Justice Owen Roberts Calls For "Super Government"

A "super government" to prevent world wars was the topic of Justice Owen J. Roberts' speech at the Old Mill on the Green Friday night. He will be quoted as saying that the road leads to the [illegible] system for leadership.

As an example of the necessity of this organization, the former Supreme Court Justice said that although Hungary has a [illegible] population, it cannot [illegible] and a neighboring city would be settled by a rival government. Governing the Dominions and colonies are settled by a national government.

Govern International Affairs

The next logical step is the formation of a government to consider international affairs. At present Justice Roberts justified the power of this government to that of governing war, but he noted that in the future, the power could be broadened to [illegible] such matters as health problems or international commerce.

Justice Roberts said that the atomic bomb had brought the international problem to a head. "We are politically in the position of a white farmer in the south who is the only one with a gun and has the opportunity to destroy everything." He suggested two ways of meeting this problem. The first is to develop missiles in such a way that an atomic bomb could knock out only a small portion of it at a time. This defense against the bomb would prove very expensive. The alternative method is to guard against war by maintaining, through a "super government," friendly international relations.

Veto Power

Referring to the present council, Justice Roberts said that the veto power prevents it from working effectively. A representative of one of the four major powers can prevent the council from taking action in this country.

Russian Question

Among the points brought out in the lively question period which followed was the question of Russia. Justice Roberts said that we must be willing to cooperate in the same ways that we want Russia to.

When the organization of the "super government" Justice Roberts hopes to avert future wars and suffering, but he says that this government must be entered into with the idea of wholehearted cooperation.

QUESTION OF HONOR SYSTEM IS DEBATED

U. V. M.'s first intramural debate on the subject of the Debating Club was held on Tuesday evening as four students debated the controversial issue which surrounds the adoption of an honor system for this campus. Mildred Frachtenberg '47 and Leona Feitz '48 upheld the affirmative, while Uranus Contos '48, and Ben Bunster '48 maintained the negative viewpoint.

The club plans to hold one intramural debate every week and several intercollegiate debates during the year. All debates are open to anyone interested and there will be discussion periods afterwards during which questions may be asked of the debaters.

POLL TAX AROUSES GROUP DISCUSSION ON BILBO, H.R. 7

H. R. 7 the bill for the abolishment of the poll taxes and the bill which Senator Bilbo threatened to filibuster out of existence was discussed at the second of a series of discussions held at Sigma Phi place. These discussions are held weekly and cover a wide field religious, social action, politics, economics, and many other related fields. Rev. Skelmar E. Myers of the Unitarian Church who has played an important part in the development of the group led the discussion Sunday evening.

The group discussed methods of getting action from the students on the matter of H. R. 7 and plans were made to bring it to the attention of the student body, and to arouse their interest in getting it passed.

This discussion group is the outcome of a feeling among many of the students that an opportunity should be made for the students to get together for informal discussions on a variety of subjects, not covered by any of the existing groups on campus.

Medical College Receives Grants

Two grants, one of $8,850 a year for two years from the Milbank Memorial Fund of New York City, and one of $6,300 for one year from Merck & Co., Inc., of Rahway, N. J., have been received by the College of Medicine at the University of Vermont. The grants are for a study of nutritional deficiencies among Vermont school children, and remedial procedures.

The object of the nutrition studies, according to Dr. H. B. Pierce, professor of biochemistry at the University, who directs the program, is the correlation of clinical findings with blood analyses, in order to determine dietary deficiencies in children. Such deficiencies, when found, will then be treated by supplements of certain vitamins, in order to determine the effects on the blood picture, and the possible disappearance of clinical signs. Records of school attendance and height-weight changes will be kept. Doctor Pierce will be assisted in the work by specialists connected with the Milbank Memorial Fund members of the University medical faculty, the Burlington school physician Dr. F. B. Tomasi, and by the school nurse.

New Faculty Member

In the newly created division of experimental medicine headed by Dr. Wilhelm Raab, Dr. William van Bogaert Robertson of New York City has joined the medical faculty of medicine as assistant professor of experimental medicine.

Doctor Robertson received his secondary education at Bordentown, N. J. In 1934, he obtained the degree of mechanical engineer at Stevens Tech, Hoboken, N. J. and for three years, he worked with Prof. F. Gottworld Fischer at the University of Freiburg in Germany. There he received his Doctor's degree in 1937 in the natural sciences, majoring in bio-chemistry.

So far, Doctor Robertson's work has been concerned with the study of the fluid contained in human joints in regard to the arthritis problem, and with the metabolism of cancer and the testing of new drugs to combat malaria. In the division of experimental medicine, he will participate in an extensive research program concerning the origin and the treatment of diseases of the heart and blood vessels.

Brown, Dean of Meds, Speaks At Montpelier

Dean Brown, the new Dean of the Medical School, who succeeded Dean Beecher, will speak at the Vermont Hospital Plan Association on the subject of "Vermont Needs a Medical Center."

Also, on the list of speakers is Miss Faye Crabbe, Director of Nursing Education Department, who has chosen for her subject: "Should Vermont Hospitals Abandon Their Nurses' Training Schools?" and the "Vermont State Hospital Plan."

Sigma Xi Society

Sigma Xi, scientific club, was started on the University of Vermont campus seven years ago. It is an affiliate of the Sigma Xi Society, national scientific honorary which is devoted to the encouragement of research in sciences, including engineering, mathematics, home economics, psychology and agriculture.

Membership, open to men and women, is based on scholastic standing, interest in research, and demonstrated ability. Undergraduates may become associate members only and are eligible for full membership if they continue with graduate work. Prof. Dykhuizen Aids Farmer With Philosophical Approach

Professor Dykhuizen

Speaking of social [illegible] George Dykhuizen [illegible] an anonymous path, [illegible] U. V. M. students [illegible] what a fine piece of [illegible] fessor of philosophy has [illegible] past seven years.

It all began back in [illegible] ministrators of the federation program in Vermont [illegible] member of the Department [illegible] at the University would [illegible] farmers the moral issue [illegible] problem of soil conservation.

Professor Answers Challenge

Professor Dykhuizen [illegible] challenge and brought [illegible] lowed precepts into the [illegible] of twentieth century social [illegible] problems.

He first spoke to farmers [illegible] in 1938, and during the past [illegible] has explained his concepts [illegible] sonal freedom to farmer [illegible] eastern United States and [illegible] to the Province of Alberta.

The farmers themselves asked [illegible] planations of the terms "[illegible] "equality" and Professor Dy[illegible] cussed with them the philosophical planation of the democratic [illegible] liberty, equality of opportunity [illegible] and possession of property.

Personal Liberty

The farmers feared that numerous [illegible] ernmental regulations were robbing [illegible] of their personal liberty. Dykhuizen explained that "absence of governmental legal restraints, important as this [illegible] does not in itself guarantee to [illegible] maximum amount of liberty in [illegible] nomic and other affairs. For liberty [illegible] not a capacity existing in some individual or group which will automatically [illegible] inevitably realize itself when [illegible] legal barriers are removed.

"Rather it is an aspect or [illegible] a total situation of which the individual group is a component part.

"Farmers who live in a world of [illegible] ing markets, favorable prices, [illegible] ample soils, general employment, [illegible] ing purchasing power, and increasing [illegible] mands will experience one set of [illegible] nomic freedoms.

"Farmers who live in a world of [illegible] markets, ruinous prices, depleted soils, [illegible] sufficient soil resources, widespread [illegible] employment, shrinking urban purchasing [illegible] power, and falling demands will experience quite another set of freedoms."

Philosophical Approach

Sociologists and economists [illegible] tacking the problem of government [illegible] ulation of the farmer's personal [illegible] but none are following the philosophical approach which attempts to extract the essence of freedom and the necessity of the farmer to accept or reject government subsides.

Professor Dykhuizen plans to [illegible] his research in the social philosophy of agriculture and to help the farmer when and when he can.

He is not trying to win [illegible] soil conservation, but rather to [illegible] the farmer's thoughts so he can [illegible] for himself if he desires the [illegible] powerful aid of the government in American agriculture.

As Professor Dykhuizen [illegible] "My sole purpose is to make [illegible] er's thoughts articulate."

Leaders Explain Y.W. Commissions At Mass Meeting

Inner Faith, Social Action and Community Work Program Planned

"Y. W. is indispensable to you and you are indispensable to it" is the theme upon which Barbara Powers, president, opened the first meeting of the Y. W. C. A. in the Student Lounge Thursday, October 18. She then read the excerpt on Religion from The Prophet and explained the purpose of Y. W. on the campus. Y. W. is just a part of a huge organization all over the world.

Y. W. is a non-secretarian organization which has for its objects religious life, social reform and service.

Mrs. Frances Richmond, the State Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. then explained the program Y. W. is carrying on in Vermont. Their activities include the center here in Burlington, Camp Hochelaga, A Business Girls' Club in Burlington, and Travelers' Aid Work. They also sponsor Vocational and Religious Conferences for High School Students. She explained that Y. W. has been indispensable in other countries especially in those bearing the brunt of the war.

The meeting was then divided up into three groups with the head of a commission explaining and leading the discussion in each. The purposes of each commission were explained in turn to each group.

The Inner Faith Commission, led by Blanche Parker, has for this year planned to organize study groups with meetings once a month to discuss and study topics chosen by members; deputation teams to go to nearby places for week-ends to organize recreational and religious activities and services. They also are to arrange for services in the Little Chapel during the year.

Nancy Hall, chairman of the Social Action Commission, explained that one of the essentials of faith was to put it into action. The chief problems to be studied and worked on this year are Minorities, Labor and Strikes, and the Housing Problem especially as relates to Burlington.

Lois Stevens led the discussion on the Community Service Commission. Their chief projects this year are to be the Elizabeth Lund Home where they will help with nursery work, the Mary Fletcher Hospital, Rock Point, and the Community Center.

The membership drive took place Friday and Saturday in Waterman and all were urged to sign up in that commission in which they were most interested and for which they felt themselves best qualified to serve.

Tri Delt-Sigma Gamma Makes Six Point Gain

Last week the Tri Delta-Sigma Gamma combination jumped into first place in the bowling league when their opponents failed to appear for the match and had to forfeit the six points of the match to the already point rich squad. In the other Tuesday night tilt the Women Independents pulled an upset and took six from the powerful Owls aggregation to cop the second place spot.

In the Thursday night matches the women of the Kappa Alpha Theta-Pi Beta Phi quartet outpointed the favored Phi Sigs and won all points of the game to take the third spot by a safe margin. The only split of the week came in the last match of the evening when the Vets and Men Independents rolled off their first meet.

The Vets took high single by a narrow margin and the total pinfall by half a dozen pins to take away four points while the Independents took two for high triple. This split left both these teams in the fourth place berth with a total of five points apiece.

Holding down the next place are the Vets in fifth place with four, and clashing for the cellar position are the Alpha Chi Omega and the Phi Sigs with three markers in the credit side of the books.

Honors for the Week

High single for the week was produced by Ruth Jandorek with a 114 string. Trailing behind her came Bill Birnbaum and Sonny Tracey with two 112 strings. High triple was handed in by Russ Carpenter again this week with 311 for his total while Ruth Jandorek, Bob Rosenberg and Albie Frank turned in 302, 301 and 300 respectively.

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

The Burlington Free Press last week, through its very able sports editor, John Manchester, recommended that a new field house be built as a memorial to U. V. M. students who made the supreme sacrifice. Such a project merits the whole-hearted support of the entire student body. There has long been such a need to augment an otherwise modern athletic plant. Though the tribute be small, it is at least a start in showing our gratitude for what these boys did for us.

Already many ex-G. I.'s have returned to our campus to find activities in general, and sports in particular, at a low ebb. Students such as Pete Mallett, who is trying to get intramural football started, and Dave Harlow, who revived interest in cross country are doing their part to remedy the situation. Larry Gardner, too, is to be commended for standing by a green, untried baseball nine last spring and for devoting his time as advisor for our new cross country squad. The next step seems to be up to the administration. The football stadium must be repaired and coaches rehired to assure the resumption of the gridiron classics come next autumn.

While marking time until his return as head football and basketball coach at U. V. M., John "Fuzzy" Evans is serving as one of three Vermont representatives assigned to choose the 1945 mythical All-American team. Other coaches from this state who will be making their choices are Stan Keck of Norwich and Arthur Brown of Middlebury. In all, over 300 of the nation's top coaches will pool their knowledge in an effort to name a team which is truly "All-American."

After enjoying a good day last week-end, the "guest experts" job this week falls to "Hank" McGreevy '49. Last week's expert had a record of seven wins, two losses, and one tie for a percentage of .700. Hank sees Saturday's games winding up:

Alabama over Georgia
Auburn over George Tech.
Army over Duke
Michigan over Illinois
Ohio State over Minnesota
Notre Dame over Iowa
Purdue over Northwestern
Navy over Pennsylvania
Tulane over Southern Methodist
Southern California over Washington

This department must try to match last week's very lucky eight wins, one loss, and one tie. Crawling out on a rather thin limb we'll take:

Alamaba over Georgia
Georgia Tech. over Auburn
Army over Duke
Michigan over Illinois
Minnesota over Ohio State
Notre Dame over Iowa
Purdue over Northwestern
Navy over Pennsylvania
Southern Methodist over Tulane
Southern California over Washington

Classical Club Holds Initiation

Three new members were initiated to the Goodrich Classical Club at its first meeting which was held at Professor Prindle's home the evening of October 18. The initiates who were Marion Briggs, Barbara Warren, and Phyllis Page had to translate a few lines from Latin to English, but they didn't succeed for the words, when read, were English phrases. One of these phrases was "Vici, ibiet, vicissem." Besides struggling through the translation, Phyl Page had to sing "Gaudeamus Pgitur" while Mrs. Prindle played an entirely different tune on the piano.

Two teams, which contested in a word game taken from the Reader's Digest, were led by Professor Pooley and Professor Prindle. Following the games, cookies and punch were served by Mrs. Prindle and Latin songs were sung by everyone. By the conventional suggestion of Professor Poley to sing "Good Night Ladies," the gathering was adjourned.

The programs for the coming year, planned by Anita Ross, Gladys Levine, and Julia Hurley will include a translation of a Latin play, speakers, and a reading of classical authors' works.

Annual Parade of Hoboes Climaxes Weekend

Realistic Movies Highlight Campus Victory Loan Drive

"They finished their job - let's finish ours!" That's the slogan of the [illegible] Victory Loan beginning November 1 on the U. V. M. campus.

Our job as citizens of the United States is to lend our money to our government, but our job as college students who have seen this war come to a victorious conclusion is to study the problems of peace that we may assure our children of a lasting peace.

To help us understand the problems that our nation faces in restoring peace to a war-ravaged world, Sigma Gamma is sponsoring Victory Loan Movies to be shown each Thursday afternoon at 4.00 in the Auditorium of the Fleming Museum.

The films to be shown November 1 are:

Diary of a Sergeant—The film praised by Life Magazine as one of the finest stories on rehabilitation of the war-wounded as yet produced. The story is that of a young sergeant who conquers the disability and fear caused by a crippling injury, and who returns to a happy, normal civilian life.

Objective Security—A story of Okinawa that has never been told before, the story of less than a thousand men who went ashore at Okinawa to win a battle for humanity. Edward Arnold does the narration.

Here is your opportunity to see what has been accomplished toward winning the peace and what has yet to be done. If we can't all buy Bonds, we can at least educate our brains!

Prof. Dean Awards Prizes at Supper

Latest inclusion in hobo happenings were displayed at the Bean Supper in the Waterman rotunda dining room and soda fountain last Saturday evening, October 27. The supper topped off the annual Hobo Day frolic, the day for women's privilege to smoke restriction free, if in corncob form.

A parade of hoboes across the stage in view of the judges, Professor and Mrs. Benjamin Ladd, Miss Elizabeth Knowles, and Dr. Dan Little (all U. V. M. faculty), was climaxed by the awarding of a mustache cup, first prize, to a sad-faced freshman, Mary Caryl. Crystal Malone, clad in a barrel, won second prize; Richard Aydlette, third; and Ben Bursten received honorable mention. Joe Leclerc and his band, with Bob Astore tossing out some hot boogie-woogie, provided instrumental entertainment; the rotunda waitresses singing U. V. M. favorites and the Sigma Phi girls with their rendition of Little Nell a la U. V. M., provided vocal entertainment. Harriet Cohen and her twirlers gave an exhibition, and Professor Dean officiated over the entire proceedings.

Hobo Day Tradition

U. V. M. students for years have "gone back to the railroad tracks" to keep up the tradition and compete for the honor of first prize at the Bean Supper. Potential tramps go completely to rags with lumberjacks and jeans or go to extremes like the pair dressed as Robinson Crusoe and His Man Friday. Hobo Day seldom fails to get plenty of laughs, bring out school spirit, and furnish fun and excitement.

War's End Brings Change in Program Of Music Dept.

Plans Symphony For The First Choir-Orchestra Concert of This Year

For the first time since Pearl Harbor the University Ochestra will play a complete symphony. It will be presented at the first joint concert of the year in the Chapel. Professor Pappoutsakis reports that the freshman class has brought many new instrumentalists to U. V. M. and he has high hopes for this year's program.

In the Music Department as elsewhere, the return of man to the campus seems to lend a new vitality to activities. The choir has been enlarged by the addition of both faculty and student men. At present they occupy only the front row. Whether this is because they are outnumbered by female voices or just by females is unknown. Incidentally, the women members of the choir have increased in number over last year.

The first concert will provide a varied and interesting program. The choir will sing Fred Waring's arrangement of Kissinger's "I Hear America Singing" based on the poem by Walt Whitman. Many rehearsals have been interrupted but through some miscalculation, the choir has beaten Professor Bennett to the end of the piece. Another rehearsal tonight is Professor Bennett's boogie.

Soloists in the concert will be Lorraine Powell, Elisabeth Maess, Eleanor Caswell, Alfred Quance and Dick Haigis who was in "Princess Ida."

Sounds of that opera may again be heard in the halls of the Music Building. Several members of the cast are working up on numbers which they will sing at a forthcoming meeting of Burlington's Klifa Club.

Since the choice of the annual opera has been somewhat limited during the past few years by the lack of men, this year may see a change for the better. A few basses and tenors will now lend an added note to the male choruses.

The first meeting of the French Club will take place on Friday, November 2, at eight o'clock at the home of Professor Dionne, of the French Department. All those students interested in French are cordially invited.

Please sign up on the board in front of the French office on the second floor of Waterman.

Rotunda, Setting For First Formal

The first dance to be held in the Rotunda since the Air Corps arrived in the spring of 1943 will be sponsored by Mortar Board on Saturday, November 3. Under the chairmanship of Mary Greene, '46, plans have been completed for the formal "girl-asks-boy" affair.

Max Ahern's Orchestra will provide the music, and Ruth Schoppe '46 is in charge of the refreshments. Other members of the committee are: Mary Thornton, 46, tickets; Barbara Morgan, '46, chaperones; Pearl Weissbard, '46, music; Barbara Powers, '46, publicity; Carolyn Aronson, '46, decorations.

Boulder Men are helping with the decorations and are in charge of the coat room. Chaperons will be: Dean Simpson, Professor and Mrs. Dykhuizen and Professor and Mrs. Rowell.

The dance is the first formal to be held on campus this year, and a large crowd is expected.

The infirmary visiting hours are from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7-8 p.m. every day of the week. Doctor Kingsbury is at the infirmary from 11.30 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. to see patients and Doctor Harwood's office hours are from 1:00 to 1:30 p.m.

Y.W.C.A. Recruits For Social Work

Cabinet Holds Retreat To Decide Year's Plans

This past week-end was a full one for the Y. W. C. A. cabinet and several enthusiastic Y. W. members. Betty Johns, secretary of Student Christian movement in New England, arrived at U. V. M. Saturday, October 27, for the week-end to join Y. W. in their plans. Upon her arrival Y. W. held their retreat at Phyllis Edgerton's camp on Lake Champlain. The topic in discussion that afternoon pertained to the plans for the whole year. In the evening the cabinet gave a gala party at which song repertoires were exhausted. In charge of refreshments were Marilyn Derrick and Joane Goulart.

The following morning, church services were held outdoors. Betty Johns then held individual conferences with each of the girls concerning their respective plans after college. She also spoke to them about their responsibility in the Y. W. cabinet.

The next mass meeting of Y. W. C. A. will be held on November 15. All those who are interested in joining the Y. W. Organization can still do so by signing up with Betty Reid. Y. W.'s work schedule will be posted shortly showing the progress of its three commissions, the Inner Faith Commission, the Social Action Commission and the Community Service Commission.

Evarts Scudder Speaks On the British People

Evarts Scudder in his lecture Thursday evening, October 25, in the Ira Allen Chapel, elaborated three main points. The psychological effect of the bombing and the end of the war in England, the labor government and its meaning in world affairs, and the attitude of the English people toward America as manifested in the questions which they asked him.

Mr. Scudder, official United States Information Representative to British Troops, explained to approximately 100 students and townspeople, as well as anyone could, the tension of the buzz bombing and the pure relief at its termination. He discussed Churchill's defeat briefly and presented biographical sketches of Attlee, Bevin, Cripps, and Morrison.

Prof. Evans Presents Weekly News Broadcast

Prof. Paul D. Evans of the History Department is commenting on the news of the week every Sunday afternoon from 2.30 to 2.45 on Station WCAX. This program is being sponsored by the Chittenden County Bank.

Professor Evans

Professor Evans who claims he is a novice at this sort of thing, chooses as material for his commentary that which he believes to be of most interest to the public. On last Sunday's broadcast, Professor Evans discussed his viewpoints on the significance of the recent French elections. The difficulty of such a method of choice lies in the fact that such a great variety of important material breaks each week.

This news series started by chance when Wilson Follett, news announcer on WCAX, was on vacation and Professor Evans was asked to fill in the spot with a ten minute summary. He is now signed for a year's contract.

Religion Parley To Be Held Here

Forums and Interviews Comprise 2 Day Session

Sponsored by the student government committee on religious life the Religion and Life Parley will bring speakers representing three different faiths to the Vermont campus. Following the pattern of last year's conference the opening meeting of the parley will be on Sunday afternoon, November 18, and the sessions will continue on Monday.

Sophomore Aides will sponsor a tea following the introduction of the speakers on Sunday afternoon and a supper will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel at 4.40. A general forum is planned for Sunday evening while the speakers will interview students who wish to discuss various topics in detail on Monday morning. Round table discussions led by the speakers are scheduled for Monday afternoon and the closing session on Monday night will consist of a resume of the round table talks and [illegible] topic.

Nancy Hall '46 of the Religious Life Committee declared that "Last year's parley provoked much discussion and thought on the part of the students. The committee plans to make this year's parley equally successful."

Working with Nancy on the arrangement of the program for the parley are Ed Rosenberg, Eileen Pickett, Barbara Powers, Lida Stevens, Mary Brenneban, Elinor Kunowitz, Nancy McNamara, Selma Sonnik and Peter Mallett.

The Boston Globe was the first newspaper to use the telephone to collect news.

Exec. Comm. Names Pulleyn As Co-Director of Kake Walk

At the Student Government Executive Council meeting on Monday, October 29, Robert S. Pulleyn, Phi Delta Theta, was elected by a unanimous vote for 1946 Kake Walk Director, to serve with Gene Hamilton '46.

Pulleyn is a veteran with plenty of Kake Walk experience to his credit having scrubbed his first three years at U. V. M. In 1943 he was appointed by the directors of that year to serve in that capacity for the 1944 Kake Walk.

Bob's pre-war campus life was filled with various sports but football and track were his favorites. In his sophomore and junior years he played Varsity football and in his freshman and sophomore years he was a member of the Track team. In '43 he was the president of the Interfraternity Council and published the Interfraternity Handbook.

He returned to college this year after over two years in the service and plans to complete his Business Curriculum.

Life of Newman is Topic of Lecture

The topic of the first Newman Club meeting of the year was "John Henry Newman," patron of Newman Clubs.

The meeting, held Tuesday evening, October 23, in the Student Lounge of the Waterman building, was opened with a prayer. Nancy McNamara, '46, newly-elected President of the Newman Club, presided. A report on the membership drive showed that so far one hundred and three students have signed up for Newman Club.

The President then introduced the speaker of the evening, the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Bernard J. Flanagan, Chancellor of the Burlington Diocese, who gave an interesting talk on the life and works of John Henry Newman.

Keynote - Cooperation

Following upon the heels of the cafeteria's action last week came the student complaint against restricted use of the Waterman. The closing of the main dining room until 10:00 a.m. is another attack on student privileges adding to the inconvenience of the forbidden Student Lounge after 9:00 p.m. according to night late broadcasters and frequenters of the Bridge room. Other points of interest in their observations suggest that a room be set aside for students who wish to come to the Waterman after a social evening for a snack or talk. Students who reach the Waterman dining room after 9:00 p.m. are requesting that the Soda Fountain open at that time. On the face of it these requests are anything but unreasonable.

From the cafeteria's standpoint and the administration's, these petitions are impossible unless students cooperate in the maintenance of rooms and concession service. Student help could resolve the shortage in the Soda Fountain if convenient hours and service were arranged. Student aid could be easily secured if the administration will inaugurate a time requirement of not less with any additional time the student is able to put in. As conditions stand it would be necessary to have proctors in the Student Lounge if it were to be open all evening as property damage and rubbish keep the janitorial service busy.

It should be an easy matter for students to meet the responsibilities of their privileges. It's true that the Soda Fountain and Student Lounge are an important service to us, one which we wouldn't hesitate to designate as our due. But in arranging convenient hours for the use of rooms, we must volunteer student help. This is the only solution to the requirements for opening the Fountain earlier and closing the Lounge later. Any opinion of objection should be directed to Student Government. In this way we will be able to cooperate with Waterman and cafeteria administrators.

Okay, girls, thanks a lot! You've done a swell job during the duration. Now, we are back on the campus, how about giving us back a few of the offices we once held.

As we see it, it must have been very tough managing all the functions of the Student Government, Outing Club, Ariel, Cynic, Band etc. etc. Sure, why not take it a bit easy and let these tedious duties fall on the staunch shoulders of the returning men?

We are not asking you to give up entirely your leadership but rather make room for the fellows.

It is realized that for the past four years the shortage of men made it necessary for you women to take over, as a temporary trust, the leadership of the campus. Still three men as compared with eight women were elected to the Student Court. What of these other organizations. Are they to remain exclusively for women?

Everyone is looking for the men to bring a new school spirit back with them. But if they are not in a position to speak, how can this be done?

As it is now scheduled, the sports are to start back on the pre-war basis this fall with basketball taking the lead and completion with football starting next year. Even the Freshman men will be confronted with the old problem of caps, fountain fights, hose fights, and cane rush, with the beginning of a new academic year. The campus may even ring with the sounds of pep rallies, bonfires, and shakedances.

But under the leadership of women these things would be as teas in the halls at Smith. Not that they wouldn't try, but the old school spirit would be lacking.

Thus the "thanks" to the girls, and the wish of the return to previous offices.

Perturbed,
X & Y.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I have noted the editorial in the last issue of the CYNIC which seems to me to be based upon misapprehension of the facts. The article gives the impression that a student activity fee of $11.00 a quarter, or $33.00 per normal college year is being charged. On the contrary, three fees which are known as student fees are being charged. They are (1) Student Activity fee of $5.00 per quarter, or $15.00 per annum; (2) Health and Infirmary fee of $3.33 per quarter, or $10.00 per annum; and (3) Physical Education fee of $2.67 per quarter or $8.00 per annum. Although for brevity on the student bills and receipts these three fees are lumped together, nevertheless they are three distinct and independent items for which separate accounts are kept.

The Student Activity Fee of $15.00 is collected by the University on behalf of Student Government which has control, under the provisions of the Student Government constitution and the legislation of the Trustees of the University, over the entire sum. There is no proposal to make any deduction from this fund whatever to pay the expenses of any activity or department under the control of the University. These funds are to be used solely for the support of student activities.

Items two and three, the Health and Infirmary fee and the Physical Education fee, are not student activity fees but are University fees charged by the University, collected by the University, and used for the support of the activities mentioned, and bear no relation to student activities.

You are familiar with the history of the Student Activity fee over the past four years. In 1941-42 it was $35.00 per annum for each student and it covered not only student activities but certain University activities over which the University had control, such as salaries of coaches, expenses of health service, etc. The action taken by the Trustees last spring in separating the Student Activity fee from other fees was to clarify the situation and remove the complaint that Student Activity fees were used for purposes other than student activities. Hereafter all salaries of faculty members will be paid from the University budget and no funds collected in behalf of student organizations will be so used. Further, the entire enterprise of the Infirmary and Health

Your Country Needs the Money More

50,000 RADARS

TWO years before Pearl Harbor the Government asked Bell Telephone Laboratories to help perfect radar as a military instrument. The Bell System, through the Western Electric Company, its manufacturing branch, became the nation's largest supplier of radar systems.

Bell scientists designed and developed many different types of radars—each for a specific job. One particular type was standard for B-29s in the Pacific for navigation, target location and high altitude bombing. Another directed all Navy guns over five inches.

This is not surprising, for radar development and production stem from the same roots that produced and continue to nourish this country's telephone system.

Snake Dance Leads Off W.A.A. Party

Starting off with a snake dance from the locatum to the gym, the first WAA party of the year wound its way into a ... packed evening.

Mary Greene, president of the WAA, opened the proceedings with a pep talk to the WAA members. This was followed by more pep from the two team captains, Marnie Watts, Green, and Spike Thornton, Gold.

The highlight of the evening was a series of demonstrations by clubs featured by WAA. Several members of the Modern Dance Workshop illustrated the fine points of modern dance, followed by a fencing match between Spike Thornton and Irene Fahey. Ping pong was demonstrated by Maude and Olga Schoelles, Margie Watts and Ruth Benson. Participating in the badminton exhibition were Marge Nelson, Mary Pease, Mickey Mills, and Esther Hellerman.

Not to be outdone by the experts, everyone divided into Green and Gold teams to play shuffleboard, softball, and basketball.

Refreshments in the form of milk and chocolate cake were provided for the weary athletes.

Gardner Calls for Managers of Teams

Coach Larry Gardner today issued a call to all interested in managing U. V. M. athletic teams to report with basketball candidates at the gym October 31. Applications for managership will also be accepted throughout the remainder of this week by applying in person to Coach Gardner.

It will be virtually impossible to field teams unless they are backed up by an adequate managerial staff. This year plans are underway to stagger the managers so that all the work won't fall on a few individuals. Duties will be evenly divided among managers so that opportunities of advancement will be the same to all.

According to present plans approximately eleven managers will be necessary. One senior, two juniors, four sophomores, and four freshmen are called for to gear Vermont to a full-time athletic program.

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

Basketball returns to U. V. M. on an official basis this week after a wartime suspension of the court game, when John "Fuzzy" Evans returns to once again take the reins as head coach. During the past two years "Fuzzy" has been on leave of absence and has served as Associate Director of the local Y. M. C. A.

In his three years as head coach, prior to his work for the "Y," Evans compiled an enviable record. His Green and Gold squads copped 30 decisions against 16 losses from the winter of 1940 to the spring of 1943, for a .652 percentage. During that time the Vermonters captured three Vermont state titles.

With a wealth of Freshman talent to choose from, plus returned veterans and the possibility that such medic stars as Bob Doherty, Milt Kaufman, and Bob Linehan will be declared eligible by the Administration, U. V. M. prospects seem unusually bright once more. Coach Evans may well lead his charges to their fourth straight title.

Football Planned for 1945

Looking further ahead to next autumn, Vermont footballers will return to the gridiron after a three-year idleness. Already three games have been booked for next season, with more to be scheduled in the near future. As in basketball Vermont will be defending a state title. Evans' last pre-war outfit proved to be a fighting outfit and captured the Green Mountain crown by trimming a highly regarded Norwich 14-10, followed by an 18-7 win over U. V. M.'s ancient rival, Middlebury.

Turning to the national football scene last week's games stamped Army as potentially the top team in the nation. Navy, Notre Dame, and Alabama loom as the foremost challengers to the Cadets' claim at national honors.

Last week's "guest expert," Hank McGreevy, captured seven winners in ten games for a .700 average. This department slumped to .600—six out of ten. For the season as a whole we both have 14 wins, five losses, and one tie for a .700 percentage.

Coach Larry Gardner sits in the "Guest" chair this week and comes up with the following winners:

Cornell over Columbia
Yale over Dartmouth
Georgia Tech over Duke
Michigan over Minnesota
Notre Dame over Navy
Ohio State over Northwestern
Pennsylvania over Princeton
Southern Methodist over Texas
Southern California over St. Mary's
Purdue over Pittsburgh

Heretofore this corner picks:

Columbia over Cornell
Yale over Dartmouth
Duke over Georgia Tech
Minnesota over Michigan
Notre Dame over Navy
Ohio State over Northwestern
Pennsylvania over Princeton
Southern California over St. Mary's
Texas over Southern Methodist
Purdue over Pittsburgh

W. A. A. NOTES . . .

The milling crowds in center Waterman last Friday and Saturday showed the enormous turnout for all the W. A. A. Clubs. These clubs, divided into advanced, intermediate and beginners, were so distributed as to allow each university woman an opportunity to sign for at least one club of her choice.

Health Council

The Health Council puts special stress on prevention. Each week, reminders of health habits and suggestions for health protection will be posted on dormitory bulletin boards. Dormitory Health Council Chairmen will be given time at every House meeting to present the Health Program.

Many of the U. V. M.'s students are now wearing little yellow tags. These tags were given out on tag day by members of the Health Council after receiving donations from their wearers. The money received from the drive was turned into the Health Council Loan Fund.

To date Mrs. Yacinski, who heads the Committee on Study Habits, has sold the most tickets and has turned in the most money.

Will all the girls who haven't turned their money and tickets in turn them in to Room 116 in Waterman.

The health council has planned meetings for the following month. Two weeks are to be devoted to the study of head colds, one week to the study of good study habits, and one week to mental health.

The next meeting will be held November 28.

Club Activities

RIFLE: It is announced that those, upperclassmen and underclassmen, who have signed for this club are able to participate. The first meeting of the club will be a mass meeting at the gym on Wednesday, October 31, at 4:00 p. m. The Rifle Club congratulates itself in having Sergeant Landa of the military faculty as instructor.

RIDING: Because of the large number in the Riding Club, Marie Lawlor has volunteered her services to all the beginning riders. By calling 426-R members can make appointments. Advanced riders may choose their instructor.

HIKE-BIKE CLUB: The scheduled trip to the Sand Dunes was postponed because of the Community Concert to the following Sunday, November 4.

At the W. A. A. Council meeting on Thursday, Oct. 25, Lois Linn '48 was appointed the manager of the Fencing Club and A. Catherine White '47 manager of the Volley Ball Club. It was decided that to receive credit for W. A. A. Club, a member must attend 6 out of 8 lessons.

Service will be financed by the University Infirmary fee and again no Student Activity funds will be used.

I hope that this note will clarify the matter somewhat and that you will recognize that the steps which you advocate have already been taken and that the complaint made by Student Government last year has been recognized by the Trustees.

Sincerely yours,
JOHN S. MILLIS,
President

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The old Activity Fee was given to the students this year as "Student Fees" under which the items mentioned above were listed. There was no separation of Health and Infirmary Service and Physical Education which explains the student's unawareness (not misapprehension) that $18 out of $33 fees was allotted to these two services.

The remaining money was not specifically designated as the Activity Fee.)

WHAT MORE DO I NEED?

Give me a spot close to Lake Champlain
With a cow or two and a shack
And a plow to till on God's rich earth
On an acre of land in the back
I want no more, for my hands are strong
And I can not resist my heart
With help from the Lord I will live and earn
Until from this world I shall part

I shall sweat and toil from dawn until dusk
And harvest my crops in the fall
With a heart then gladdened with fulfilled hopes
I will thank dear God for my all
What more do I need than this piece of earth
What greater joy can man name
Than to leave for his own—by the sweat of his brow
A home-spot on lovely Champlain.

Colorful Mortar Board Formal Attracts Hundreds of Couples

Waterman's Rotunda has known many a crowd of people, ranging all the way from 1600 hungry air cadets to a gathering of University alumni. But one of the most colorful groups in the history of the Rotunda gathered there last Saturday evening, as Mortar Board sponsored the first fall formal dance and regained the tradition of the pre-war formals.

A "girl-ask-boy" dance, the occasion brought many visitors to the campus for the week-end and gave a number of new students a picture of Vermont social life at its best. Max Ahrens' six-piece orchestra, playing against a background of starry sky, provided music for approximately 325 couples.

Dean Mary Jean Simpson, Professor and Mrs. Lyman Rowell and Professor and Mrs. George Dykhuizen were chaperones for the dance and received the couples assisted by members of Mortar Board and their escorts. Corsages, made in Mortar Board colors of silver and gold, were gifts to the ladies who chaperoned.

Intermission found Mortar Board girls serving refreshments, which consisted of punch and cake. Following intermission dancing was resumed and continued until 11:45.

War Films Launch Victory Bond Drive

Movies Emphasize Danger of Post-War Inflation

"Stilwell Road," produced by the Army Signal Corps, will be shown at the Fleming Museum Auditorium, Thursday, November 8, at 4.00 p.m. in a continuation of the drive for the Victory Loan.

Tides of fortune ran swift in the Southeast Asia campaign—and they were all against us! The Burma Road was cut, our armies in retreat, China all but lost. This is the searing drama of the United Nations' bitterest campaign, its bravest soldiers and most heroic leaders. It's the story of the "forgotten front," where faith in Victory was the only force that saved us from overwhelming defeat.

Beginning the victory loan drive at U. V. M. were two movies sponsored by the Sigma Gamma sorority at Fleming Museum on November 1. These movies proved to the audience the importance of buying victory bonds in the present loan drive.

"Diary of a Sergeant" proved the importance of rehabilitation work, while the accompanying movie, "Objective Security," dealt with the activities of the American Military Government, and especially in its work on Okinawa. Rehabilitation and military security are only two phases of post-war adjustment. Highlighting the problems is the scare of inflation. College students who are close to the importance of inflation problems through their studies are urged to combat this difficulty by the purchase of victory bonds, mainly to stem the increasing tendency to buy up everything in reach of the consumer.

Noted Leaders to Speak at Parley

With speakers representing a wide range of religious thought, the Religion and Life Parley, to be held Nov. 18-19, promises to stimulate the Vermont campus to repeat the success which marked the week-end of the Parley a year ago.

Although a list of speakers is not complete at this time, the committee has released the names of some of the parley leaders. They include Ralph D. Hyslop, minister to students of the Congregational Christian Churches; Rabbi Harry Joshua Stern, of the Temple Emanuel at Westmount, Montreal; and Ben Richardson, formerly associated with the First Abyssinian Church in New York City, and now on "The Protestant" magazine.

A meeting of the Parley committee members and representatives from every campus organization took place yesterday and final plans for the week-end were drawn up. The program, publicity, and hospitality committees were organized at this meeting.

Lohman Views Russo-American Relations

"So What" was the title of Doctor Lohman's speech at the first student convocation of the year. Although Doctor Lohman has spoken before many groups of students this was the first time he had addressed the entire student body.

Doctor Lohman stressed the point that the United States agrees too much with Russia. Instead of following along behind, the United States should take a definite stand.

Men's Rushing Begins November 12, Professor Carroll Outlines New Rules

New rushing rules were announced by Professor Carroll for the benefit of the new freshman men who are eligible for fraternity membership. The procedure, which will be new to U. V. M., will consist of a week of concentrated activity on the part of the fraternities. This will take place during the week of November 12 to 17.

Each fraternity will be granted a room in the Waterman building for the two nights, 13th and 14th, active fraternity members will be present in their respective room to answer questions and furnish material concerning their fraternities. All eligible men will be urged to visit the rooms of every fraternity on the hill so that each man can get a clear picture of what each fraternity has to offer. These rooms will be open at 7:00 o'clock each evening for interviews with active fraternity men. The rooms assigned the various fraternities are: Alpha Tau Omega, 257; Delta Psi, 259; Kappa Sigma, 263; Lambda Iota, 140; Phi Delta Theta, 264; Phi Sigma Delta, 262; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 260; Sigma Nu, 258; Sigma Phi, 217; Tau Epsilon Phi, 216.

It is believed that for those fraternities that do not have any active members on campus the information will be dealt out by past members or local alumni of that fraternity.

Those men selected by various fraternities for rushing will be feted, banqueted and partied for the next two days. Each man who then desires to go fraternity is invited to visit Professor Carroll's office, 222 Waterman where he may indicate his first, second, or third choice of fraternity. Professor Carroll will have a list of all the men who have received bids and he will notify the applicants of their acceptance or refusal in those fraternities which they have designated. This procedure gives men a chance to go fraternity even if their first choice fraternity does not give them a bid. Those accepted are then eligible to meet the members of the fraternity and become pledged.

The members of the interfraternity council are sponsoring this Rush Week in order to revive peacetime interest in fraternity life at U. V. M.

BARRY ELECTED

At the first meeting of the newly organized Student Court Bart Barry was unanimously elected chief justice. The court acted upon and accepted the resignation of Ruth Schoppe.

The constitution of the Student Court appears in this CYNIC. This constitution outlines the functions of the court and the rights of the individual governed by it.

Tutoring Bureau To Aid Veterans

Mortar Board Uses Fund Set Up for Scholarship

Akraia Chapter of Mortar Board has organized as one of its projects for the year a Tutoring Bureau for Veterans, who are pursuing their college education under the G. I. Bill of Rights. By setting up such aid for the returning veteran Mortar Board feels its program of service can lighten the burden of the administration and faculty.

A man or woman who has served in the Armed Forces for a number of years cannot readjust to the college routine without a great deal of effort, physical and mental. Life in the service is a different type of education than that derived from the college atmosphere. It is a completely natural reaction on the part of the veteran to find himself in the beginning unable to settle down and acquire those study habits that are essential to mastering the average college course. By receiving additional instruction in the course which is offering particular trouble, the veteran will not suffer the loss of confidence in his own mental abilities in that particular course.

Tutoring may be received free of charge, since the project is being sponsored with the use of funds in the Mary Jean Simpson Scholarship Fund. This fund was made obsolete by the G. I. Bill of Rights, and it was decided that the money should be used in helping the veteran in as many ways as is possible. It may take a little time for the Tutoring Bureau to run smoothly and on some sort of schedule, since tutors, faculty or student, are very much in demand by the campus as a whole.

Toward International Understanding

We [illegible] on our this week to plead for cooperation from other colleges, in hopes that U. V. M.ers will, as tolerant observers of the world scene, lend a hand. Every university is trying, in this post-war era, to fit itself into the movement for international organization in the interests of world peace. There is an evident lack of discussion, interest, and information on the plans and problems of a world pact on this campus. For practical purposes we print two letters from colleges actively concerned with uniting students for service. Perhaps clubs such as the Sigma Phi Discussion group will give impetus to this movement.

DARTMOUTH CHAPTER

Plans for the formation of a world organization for maintaining permanent peace are now being discussed throughout the world. Nation-wide support is necessary to insure the United States playing her role in the establishment of a strong organization.

For many years groups have been discussing and suggesting plans for a world security organization. Ultimately, Wendell Willkie merged these groups (Right for Freedom, Citizens for Victory, United Nations Association etc.) into one American United national organization of which Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins president of Dartmouth College, is chairman of the Board of Directors. Local chapters have sprung up all over the country in cities, towns and villages under the direction of national headquarters at 405 Lexington Avenue, N. Y. C.

We, here at Dartmouth, feel that college students should make their opinions felt and give their support, and with this in mind, we have organized a local college chapter of Americans United. Our immediate aim is to work for the Dumbarton Oaks plan as a desirable first step and to insure the acceptance by the United States Senate of the organization drawn up at the San Francisco conference. Once this is accomplished the aim will be to see that improvements are made wherever necessary in order to maintain a permanent peace.

Our present plans call for a varied program designed to enlighten undergraduates (including R. O. T. C. and V-12) concerning the problems of building a strong world organization. This will consist of a series of lectures, round table discussions in which faculty members will participate, and movies. We would like, also, to hold joint collegiate activities.

We are hoping that other colleges will follow our lead in organizing similar chapters. We would like to hear from you regarding the formation of local college chapters.

BENNINGTON COLLEGE

The problem of checking a world armament race, the gravest problem we as a nation have ever had to cope with, is now facing us. Unless an effective control is placed on the facilities of producing and using the atomic bomb, the development of this weapon by other great world powers will eventually lead us into a conflict that will pulverize all of humanity.

We feel that the college youth of this country should add its voice to that of the nation's foremost scientists, in asking our government for a bold and responsible step toward international control of atomic energy.

The purpose of this letter is to beg your student body to cooperate with Bennington and other American colleges in shouldering the task before us. Enclosed you will find a copy of the petition which our college community sent to President Truman.

My dear President Truman,

In view of the grave challenge to our security and the peace of the world as stated so clearly in the declaration of the 400 experts of the Association of Los Alamos Scientists on October 15, 1945, the undersigned ___ students and ___ faculty of University of Vermont feel compelled to ask you:

(1) To propose at once in the name of the United States Government the creation of an international commission for the control of production and use of atomic energy, and to pledge the readiness of the United States to comply with the full inspection of our production facilities and the control of their use by that commission, on the single condition that other countries do the same.

(2) To see to it that this action be taken regardless of the progress of legislation on domestic control of atomic energy research and production.

(3) To demand extensive hearings on legislation proposing the creation of a domestic agency controlling research and production in the field of atomic energy.

Letter to the Editor

With a great deal of disgust we waded through a truly simple letter submitted to the Cynic. The two characters, "X and Y" naturally should, and did, assume a nom de plume.

To associate any type of sarcasm whatsoever in connection with the women's leadership on campus is to crawl lower than a snake.

During war-time college life and the reconversion period which we are starting women have shown, and are showing, capacity for leadership.

Equal opportunities exist for both men and women. It is not for the women to step down, but rather for the men now in college to prove themselves.

Report on Student Govt. Activities

The meeting of the Executive Committee of Student Government was held on Monday, October 22, 1945, at 4:30 P. M. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The election of the members of Student Court was held.

Also under old business, Dave Hackett gave a report on matters taken before the President.

Mr. Kehoe will have to be consulted in regard to having the Student Lounge open evenings and on Sunday afternoons.

The cards are being printed to use for taking attendance for future Convocations.

Dances can be held in the Rotunda.

In regard to the Cafeteria, the townspeople are to be excluded and a recommendation that all conventions adjourn at 12:30 instead of at noon will be made.

Girls living in sorority houses may work only one hour a day because girls in sorority houses only have to sign one-meal contracts.

A motion was made, seconded and passed that we drop the matter of entering nominations for the Who's Who in American Universities.

Under new business, a letter was read from Bill Dailey regarding a bulletin board the class of '45 wants to donate. A motion was made and passed that we accept the bulletin board if the class of '45 will pay for a student to be in charge of changing it each day.

It was brought to the attention of the Executive Committee that the Nurses were still using the study room for a classroom.

The estimate of having additional Freshman Handbooks printed will probably be available at the next meeting.

A discussion was held on those available to act as Kake Walk Directors.

Upon motion the meeting was adjourned.

Dead Week

At the Student Government meeting on Monday, November 5 a petition was presented by the Dramatic Club for permission to present their fall play on December 7 which is during Dead Week, the week preceding the examination period during which time there shall be no college activities. The night previously scheduled by the social committee for the presentation of the play conflicts with a Community Concert. Since they were asked to, but cannot possibly produce the play in January, the Student Government Executive Council granted the Dramatic Club the permission to present their play on December 7.

In granting this privilege the Council wishes to point out to the student body that this was a special case and that no other group or organization shall be granted such a privilege in the future.

V. C. A. Hears Nuquist

Included in the plans for the bi-monthly meeting of the Vermont Christian Association will be a talk on "Cooperatives" by Prof. Andrew Nuquist of the University Political Science Department. Any male student interested in joining V. C. A. is invited by the officers of the group to attend the meeting, which will be held tonight, November 7, at 7:30, in the third floor lounge in Waterman.

Basketball Team Candidates Show Promise

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

If sheer numbers guarantee success, Vermont is headed for an unrated basketball season. Some 28 candidates answered Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' initial call. For the most part the "hopefuls" are untested in collegiate competition. Only Howie Stein, a star on last season's informal team and a competitor on his service squad could be classed as experienced and Stein will be built Vermont's first postwar outfit.

From last season's Junior varsity also come Dick Manjoney, Dave "Dusty" Wetherby, and Ted Battles. Added to this list are ex-service cats and high school aces from this vicinity. Coach Evans' job seems to be to mould his wealth of talent into a smooth-working outfit. This may take time, as many of the players previously performed under different styles of play. In some schools the zone defense is emphasized, others press the man to man with an offense built around a fast break. The quickness in which Evans can put his ideas across to the cats will determine whether their early showings are to be marked with success or failure.

Unfortunately all attempts at organizing sport teams at U. V. M. haven't been as successful as in basketball. Last month the call went out for cross country candidates. A total of seven—the absolute minimum for a team reported. Naturally a team without any substitutes can't hope to be too successful. Due to this scarcity of material and the lateness of the date plans to field a team this fall were dropped. By spring an improved manpower situation plus a revived interest may enable the Green and Gold harriers to reappear on the college sports scene.

Along the national gridiron front mighty Army continued to roll along as the nation's top team. Notre Dame gained prestige in completely outclassing Navy, although being held to a tie by the Middies. Indiana and Alabama turned in impressive wins to keep their places in the Big Five of the United States.

Coach Larry Gardner had five winners, four losers and one tie last week, while this department came out with seven won, two lost and one tie. The regular first sacker on last year's informal U. V. M. baseball nine tries his hand at picking the winners this week. "Wendy" Barwood, '48, comes up with the following winners:

	From this corner it looks like:
Army over Notre Dame	Notre Dame over Army
Yale over Brown	Yale over Brown
Southern California over California	Southern California over California
Cornell over Colgate	Cornell over Colgate
Pennsylvania over Columbia	Pennsylvania over Columbia
Dartmouth over Princeton	Princeton over Dartmouth
Minnesota over Indiana	Indiana over Minnesota
Navy over Michigan	Navy over Michigan
Texas A. & M. over Southern Methodist	Southern Methodist over Texas A. & M.
Okla. A. & M. over Tulsa	Tulsa over Okla. A. & M

Senior's Art Shown

Barbara Anderson '46, who has studied painting since her freshman year, has had a large oil painting called "Quandry" accepted for exhibition at the annual show of New Jersey painters at the Montclair museum in Montclair, N. J. The show is on the professional level and is one of the best "little" art exhibitions of its kind in the country.

This is the second year that Barbara has had a picture accepted by the same organization. Her first painting was an abstract containing elements of surrealism. This composition was exhibited last year in the students' show at the Fleming Museum.

Coach Evans Views 28 Team Members

Sgt. Landa to Assist Coaching of Hoopsters

Chuck Costantino

Intercollegiate sports are at U. V. M. once more—this time to stay. Last Wednesday night in the Gym Coach "Fuzzy" Evans held forth and outlined his plans to twenty eight men who reported for the basketball squad. Informal practice sessions were held last week with Sergeant Landa, who is assisting Evans this year, putting the boys through their paces. Sometime in the near future the Auditorium will be available to the squad and "Fuzzy" will start formal training with a bang in order to get a squad in shape for the first game, which will be about December 1.

Little Experience

With only a few players with college experience, "Fuzzy" will be faced with the task of picking a quintet from material about which, for the most part, he knows very little. Out of the total number that reported for practice are only six men who have played college ball. R. Jake and Howard Stein seem to be the men who will form the nucleus of the squad at this time. Jake pounded the hardwood for Northwestern and Stein saw action with service squads. Familiar faces from U. V. M. that are on the court right now are Ted Battles, Paul Frazer, Dave Wetherby and Dick Manjoney. All of these men have played on the informal teams of the last few years and see action this year.

Two Squads to be Formed

In the hopes of building a team for the future, "Fuzzy" is going to have two fifteen men squads this year. Besides the varsity men he will have a reserve or J. V. squad composed of freshmen and sophomores who do not get a varsity berth. Coaching this J. V. squad will probably be Sgt. Andy Landa.

Many of the high schools of the state are represented in the frosh that make up most of the candidates. Ken Pierce starred at Montpelier last year, Gould Susslin and Jeff Griffin saw action with Bellows Free Academy at St. Albans.

Surprise Upsets In Bowling League

Alpha Chis, Tri Delts In Neck to Neck Lead

Last week's tilts in the bowling league saw the Women Independents jump into the first spot by a wide margin of six points, when they took all the points of the match from the cellar guard, Phi Sigs. At the same time on the other alleys the Men Independents took six from a favored Tri Delt-Sigma Gamma combination to go into a tie for the third place berth.

The other two matches proved to be more one-sided affairs with the Alpha Chi's taking six from the Owls and the Pi Phi's clipping the Vets, 6-0. The win for the Alpha Chi women gave them 15 markers in the credit side of the ledger to tie with the Tri Delts, while the win for the Pi Phi's quartet brought them up to tie the Men Independents in third spot. Next in line are the Owls with 9 points, the Phi Sig's with 6 and the Vets resting on the cellar with a total of 4 points after four weeks of league play.

Women Bring Home the Bacon

R. Giddings took away most of the honors last week coming up with a 329 for high-triple and a 120 for the high-single of the week. R. Jandorek turned in a 304 for second spot in the high three bracket and Dick Haigis produced the only score of the week for the men when he rolled a 112.

The Freshman Bowling League did not operate last week because of the basketball meeting Wednesday night, so going into the fray this week the D. D. Q.'s will still be in the number one spot.

NOTICE

Miss Margory Allen, Youth Secretary of the American Friends Service Committee of New England, will be on campus all day Thursday, November 8, to interview girls interested in any phase of American Friends Service work. Appointments may be made with either Miss Everett or Miss Bayley.

The Employment Office is making a list of the college girls who wish to take care of children evenings. Anyone who is interested is requested to leave her name with Miss Bayley in the Employment Office.

W. A. A. NOTES . . .

Freshman girls' schedule for the beginning of basketball will be postponed until November 19, because of the interest and competition in badminton.

There will be an opportunity for the swimming class to be divided into two sections, 4.00 p.m. and 5.00 p.m., on Friday. The present section is at 5.00 p.m. Anyone interested in swimming may come to this new section.

Because of the shortened time in the quarter system, the number of classes to be attended for W. A. A. Club credit has been changed from 6 times out of 8, to 5 times out of 6.

High scorers in bowling physical education classes are Joyce Bingham '48, Renée Finberg '48, Barbara Warren '47, Mildred Trachtenberg '48, Eileen Nichols '48.

Modern Dance Club

The Modern Dance Club will get under way this week and will meet every week at regular times. The Workshop will meet Tuesdays at 4.45; the Master group, those promoted from the Workshop last year, will meet on Wednesdays at 4.30, and the Apprentice group, for any freshman or upperclassmen who are interested in joining the club, will meet Thursdays at 4.45.

Since Anne Hoos '46 had to resign because of too many points, Midge Smith '47, assistant manager, has taken over for Anne as general manager. Other officers elected when the club adjourned last spring were: Talent scout, Betty Mansfield '46; costume manager, Phyllis Edgerton '46; costume designer, Nancy MacNamara '46, and publicity, Crystal Malone '47.

In addition to their annual Lilac Day performance, the club is hoping to put on another entertainment this year.

Notes on Various Clubs

SKIING: A separate Ski Team will be under direction of the Outing Club. However, W. A. A. will have its own ski instruction sections. It has been suggested the beginning skiers will be given lessons by the expert skiers of this college. As yet instructors for the advanced have not been chosen.

ICE SKATING: Figure skating will probably be held at South Park after the first freeze unless the hockey rink behind the gym is in operation.

Music Hour Features Many Famed Composers

Staff and Sandal, Junior Women's Honorary Society, presented the first Music Hour of the year on Friday, Nov. 2, in the Third Floor Student Lounge at 4:30 P. M. The program included "Berceuse" by Chopin, "Prelude in A Flat" by Shostakovitch, "Symphony No. 5" by Beethoven, and "Finlandia" by Sibelius.

Those attending were asked to note their favorite compositions, and these requests will be the basis of future Music Hour programs. The Music Hour is presented each Friday at 4:30 and is open to all.

On Wednesday night, November 7, the Debating Club will hold an intramural debate in Room 239 of the Watermen Building. The question will be, Resolved: that the United States and Great Britain should unite under dual citizenship as a step towards world peace. Everyone is invited to participate.

The court will review such cases on appeal from Student Union, Pan Hellenic, Interfraternity Council, and other similar student judicial bodies.

I. Punishment

Types of punishment will include loss of social privileges, restriction to dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses, restriction in extra-curricular activities and suspended sentences. Recommendations may also be made to the University Council for dismissal from college, or other academic penalties.

Administrative machinery will be set up to supervise punishments. In the case of women, Student Union will supervise and report to Student Court. Dormitory and fraternity presidents will be responsible for men in their reports to Student Court, and any breach of punishment is subject to review by Student Court.

J. Decisions and Appeals

In cases of original jurisdiction, a majority of a quorum is necessary for a decision. In cases of appeal a tie vote will be indicative of confirmation of the decision of the lower court.

The University Council, the Executive Committee of Student Government and the party or parties accused shall be notified of the decision and punishment which will also be published in the CYNIC.

The decision of Student Court may be appealed to the University Council. It is recommended that the presidents of Student Government and of Student Union be invited to meetings of the University Council where cases of appeal are to be considered.

Editor's Note—With this week's publication of the Student Court Constitution the CYNIC is starting a series of features designed to give information on all forms of student government. The constitution of U. V. M. students provides for Student Government news to be printed weekly in the college paper, as the means of conveying to students the importance of the structure of self-government we have here. (Recently completed with the formation of Student Court.)

COACH EVANS VIEWS 28 CANDIDATES

W. Irish played at Shelburne and Cy Elmore at Rutland High. Five of the freshmen have seen action on various teams in Burlington and are proficient at other sports besides basketball. George Thomas plays a nice game on the hardwood, Harvey Corman performed with the track team, Dick Haigis on the grid, Gene Morrissey on the diamond, and Herman Pankowsky with the ballbouncers.

Fifteen Game Schedule

At the time of this writing only seven games are on the schedule, but about fifteen games will make up the grind for the squad this year. Of these seven, six are with Vermont teams and are in the form of a home-and-home series with Middlebury, St. Michael's and Norwich. Some probables for the schedule are McGill, Wesleyan, Trinity and Lovell General Hospital. This year's quintet will go into battle defending the state title that they copped the last year U. V. M. had an intercollegiate squad. Many of the old-timers disagree as to when the last team played, but most of the ones with good memories set the date at the year 1942-43 squad 'way back when . . .

Religion And Life Parley To Begin Sunday

Vacation Petition Held Over Until President Returns

Students Ask 4-Day Thanksgiving Recess Beginning Thursday

A four-day holiday for Thanksgiving may be considered by the University Council. The holiday, to start either Wednesday, November 21, or Thursday, November 22, would extend through the week-end until the following Monday.

The Council voted last night to extend Thanksgiving vacation to include Friday and Saturday of next week. The vacation starts Wednesday noon and ends Monday morning at 8.

The following statement was released by the Secretary of the University Council:

The University Council understands that the student body is circulating petitions asking for an extension of the Thanksgiving recess. The Council, realizing that there would be such requests, has already considered the matter but, due to absence from town of President Millis, is delaying action until the President's return, November 13.

The Council understands that the petitions ask that the Thanksgiving recess start Wednesday noon, November 21, and extend over the week-end until Monday, November 26.

Lengthening of Quarter

"Should the Council grant such an extension the Quarter would be lengthened by two days, the final day of examinations being December 21, instead of December 19, thus leaving the number of teaching days in the Quarter unchanged. Thus instead of a 16-day Christmas Vacation there would be 14 days only, which, however, is the same number as we have had in recent years.

"Since students pay approximately $2.00 a day for the privilege of attending classes, it is clear that shortening the Quarter two days would cost each one approximately $4.00 and this would not be fair to the student body.

No Further Extensions

"Should the Council take action extending the Vacation, the rules regarding absences before and after a Recess will be strictly enforced, and no further extensions of the recess will be permitted."

According to this statement, the students were to have two days extra for Christmas vacation this year. The proposed Thanksgiving vacation means a shifting of those two days to another, and according to some students, a more advantageous time.

Sigma Phi Discussion Group Hears Dykhuizen

"As we look at religion we see a profusion of gods," said Prof. George Dykhuizen as he began the discussion about God.

Professor Dykhuizen was the leader of a group of over 30 people which gathered at Sigma Phi last Sunday evening for another one of their discussion periods.

The meeting was informal with opportunities for questions and presentation of ideas after Professor Dykhuizen had finished his introductory talk.

The meeting will be held this Sunday as the religious parley is this week-end.

Rev. Michael J. Ahern

Rev. Ben Richardson

Last year's parley received stimulation from the talks of Ben Richardson; he is returning this year to help U. V. M. relate religion and life. Through his position on the editorial board of The Protestant, he has been unusually active in combating anti-semitism, which he thinks is closely related to anti-Negroism. Ben Richardson has risked his life in fighting racialism and intercepting race riots; he was left for dead on a New York Street New Year's 1944, after having been slugged into unconsciousness by an assailant.

At Harvard Theological Seminary Rev. Richardson studied theology, specializing in comparative religions with emphasis on Judiasm. He served as chaplain and was associate minister of the Abyssinian Church in Harlem of which A. Clayton Powell is pastor.

Clergymen Speak For All Faiths

The Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S.J., is senior professor in the department of science in Weston College, and has been director of the Catholic Radio Question Box since 1929. He studied at St Francis Xavier's College of New York City, graduating from Woodstock College in Maryland in 1898. He was ordained to priesthood in 1910.

Head of the department of chemistry and geology at Boston College and Holy Cross College, Worcester, Father Ahern also has served as president of Canisius College in Buffalo, N. Y.

As a member of the executive committee he is active in the work of the National Conference of Jews and Christians. By invitation of President Conant of Harvard, and through appointment of Cardinal O'Connell, he was the Catholic speaker at the recent Tercentenary Celebration of the Harvard Divinity School.

Rev. Hyslop, W. S. C. F. Member

Congregational young people recognize the name of Ralph D. Hyslop, author, through the Lenten Devotions for Young People, Student Life, and other pamphlets. A Phi Kappa Phi member, Hyslop graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1935, receiving his B.D., at Chicago Theological Seminary three years later, Summa Cum Laude.

Further education came in 1937 at Oxford Conference, the Edinburgh Conference, and the World's Student Christian Federation at Bieveres, France. Following the 1939-40 Amsterdam Conference at which he was a leader Hyslop assisted for two years in the Theological Dept. at Union Theological Seminary.

At present, as minister to student life, division of Christian education, he is a member of the Board of World Student Service Fund, which aids students unable to obtain an education; the War Emergency Council for Student Work; the Lisle Foundation, and others.

Students Hear Lecture By Dr. Jacques Errera

Six U. V. M. Chemistry majors, Mary Greene '46, Ann Hoos '46, Mignon Burggraf, '47, Lois Eimer '47, Mary McBratney '49, and Jean Shaw '49, accompanied professors from U. V. M's Arts, Agricultural, and Medical Chemistry Departments to the meeting of the Western Vermont Section of the American Chemical Society in Middlebury, Monday, November 5. Following dinner at the Middlebury Inn, Dr. Jacques Errera discussed the "Problems Relating to Processing of Animal Fibers."

Rev. Ralph J. Hyslop

Rabbi Harry J. Stern

As rabbi at Temple Emanuel in Westmount, Montreal, since the fall of 1927, Rabbi Harry Joshua Stern has promoted goodwill and amity between various religious, racial and national groups there. He is the author of Jew and Christian, The Jewish Spirit Triumphant, Judaism in the War of Ideas, and is contributing editor of the Canadian Jewish Review. He has also written numerous essays and sermon pamphlets.

Since 1923, the Rabbi has traveled extensively in Europe and in the Near East, visiting Palestine three times and the Soviet twice. All of his travels were made with the purpose of studying political, social, and economic conditions.

Born in Lithuania in 1897, and brought to the United States as a lad, Rabbi Stern, was educated in the public schools of Steubenville, Ohio, and at the University of Cincinnati, where he received his B.A. In 1919 he graduated from the Hebrew Union College, with a B.H.L., and in 1922 he received his Rabbinical degree there. Post-graduate work was at University of Chicago in 1926.

VETERANS' OFFICE ADDS FACILITIES

In order to keep up with the growing number of returning veterans it was announced that the Veterans Administration office is expanding its facilities. The office is moving from its present location at 149 Waterman to the suite formerly occupied by the Medical Director and the Student Health Service, which was at 143 Waterman. Instead of the two rooms formerly occupied by the Vet Administration office, they will now have three at their disposal.

The office staff is going to be increased with the addition of two new personnel, a secretary and a training officer, the latter being sent from the Regional Office of the Veterans' Administration in Vermont.

Post-War Religious Problems Will Be Discussion Theme

This week-end four nationally known speakers will lead the second annual U. V. M. parley on religion and life. The Rev. Ben Richardson, associate editor of The Protestant; Rabbi Harry J. Stern of Temple Emanuel, Montreal, Quebec; the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S.J., of Weston, Mass., and the Rev. Ralph D. Hyslop, Minister of Student Life, Congregational Christian Churches, will conduct round table discussions and forums on November 18-19 in Waterman.

Helping relate life's problems to a religious foundation is the purpose of the parley and of the men who come to talk "with" and not "to" the student body. Similar to last year the subjects for the round table discussions have been presented by students through questionnaires.

Subjects for the forum have already been decided upon by the planning committee, which consists of representatives from most U. V. M. organizations. "The Religious Part in the Post-war World" is to be the theme of Sunday night and is to be led by President John Millis. Prof. A. T. Sweet of the political science department will head Monday night's discussion on "Can Brotherhood Be Achieved in Post-war America." All four religious men will be in the forums.

Each of the leaders contributed subjects for their individual round table discussion groups. Rabbi Stern has chosen "Can the Christian Understand the Jew" and Rev. Hyslop will lead a discussion on "The Problem of Power." Father Ahern's subject is "A World to Reconstruct: How to Proceed," while Rev. Richardson is to lead "Truth and Race."

Invitations have been sent to Middlebury, Vermont Junior College, Green Mountain Junior College, and Goddard College in Plainfield. Local ministers will also be invited to attend.

Two Piano Recital Given by Bennetts

Prof. Howard G. Bennett and Mrs. Elsa Kremers Bennett will be heard in a two-piano recital at the Chapel the evening of November 16. Their program will include:

Double Concerto in E flat major, by Mozart; Andante and Scherzo from the Sonata in F minor, Opus 34 B; by Brahms; Sonata, written by Stravinsky in 1944; Rumbolero, by Morton Gould; "In a Mist" by Bix Beiderbecke, and Espana, by Chabrier.

Professor and Mrs. Bennett are well qualified to present this duo-piano recital. Mrs. Bennett studied piano and theory at the University of Wisconsin; studied piano in Vienna, the center of musical activity before the war, and received her Master's Degree in composition from Vassar College. She has played the Grieg Piano Concerto and the Franck Symphonic Variations with the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra. Professor Bennett studied piano under Clarence Adler in New York, and under Franz Schmidt in Vienna, and received his Master's Degree in composition and theory from Harvard University.

There will be a Student Convocation Thursday, November 15, at 10:00 a.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel. Prof. Paul D. Evans will be the speaker and his topic will be "The Recent French Elections."

Attendance is required of all students in the three academic colleges.

R. Swift, Secretary.

Religious Life Committee Presents Timely Questions

Does the Church propose a vital plan to control Atomic Power? Have any of the gains from the war justified the destruction? Suppose our government should give complete assurance to the world that we will not use the atomic bomb in any unprovoked attack on another nation, could the present administration make its promises binding upon future ones?

Has labor's "right to strike" become an immoral weapon of power? Scientists say that the energy of the atom can very soon be used for constructive peacetime work. It can be, but will it be, do you think?

Many people believe a common understanding between Russia and the U. S. is one of the urgent needs of the world today. Can religion play a part in building up this understanding?

Curiosity Shop . . . . Military Conscription

By Rich Harper

Q. Should [illegible] Compulsory Military Training?

[illegible] encroachment on personal freedom
Dave Hackett '46

Yes. The program should be in the laboratory.
Tim Emmerson '48

It should at least be given a trial.
Myron Sawyer '46

Having given ourselves to the question of the moment, we took a survey at the recent Outing Club meeting to get a [illegible] of the general opinion. Thoughts were at least represented at said banquet-meeting-festival. Of a group of fifty-some [illegible] were in support of the proposed training. That majority are helping more properly in the fire-and-forget department, but we have say it's the general and popular attitude throughout the student body—to finish even of other business.

If there's any room on the end of that limb, move over—we're coming out to join you. We definitely feel that the bill calling for compulsory training, at least as it was presented on its début, is not for us.

As a matter of fact it would need drastic changes before even consideration as a logical answer to today and by that time nobody would recognize it [illegible] thought he could probably make some changes.

• • • •

To end on a serious note, it seems to us that we first have to try and give a little consideration to what is required [illegible] and so on just emerged from a war, the victory of war that for the most part were won by sheer [illegible] and a large helping of luck. Already there are statements of disfavor among yesterday's allies, all of which is unfortunate but true. What is our next step in international politics?

• • • •

One answer to the question is an Army fed mainly through the reservoir of 17 and 18 year olds with their year of training. Then if war is to come again we have this great horde of well trained men to throw into the mess. Is this the solution?

It is paradoxical that amid efforts at lasting peace, we must concern ourselves with questions of preparedness.

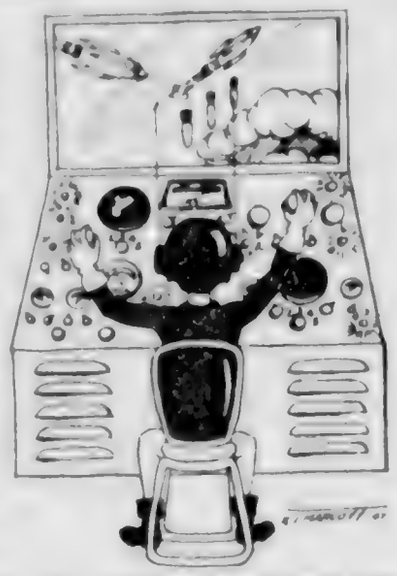
Having had the experience of Army life, it is our reaction that to begin with the same civilian military machine that was called together in 1940 and on could be duplicated. There was a purpose then, a deadly one, and generally we all submitted to the task ahead.

Yes. We must maintain a certain amount of prepared [illegible]
Lucy Zwick '46

Yes. Not only to provide equip a man, but to provide a reserve for national emergency. [illegible] '47

Yes. It insures sufficient bulk for a military machine.
James Gilmore '49

What about our State Department? Herein we feel lies an excellent place to veer away from the compulsory training [illegible] thought. If we could have a modern efficient and effective group under capable leadership such as Byrnes, supplemented by literally thousands of intelligent and personable young men trained in our diplomatic schools, we might have within our reach a more practical solution.



Carrying the question to the individual, let's ask ourselves if we as Americans have the privilege of demanding any time restriction on another—can we put any limitations on his use of years?

What of the professional man? Are the doctor, the minister, the teacher and other professional men to gain by a year's military training? A minority group, perhaps, but at least we may hope for the day when their ranks swell.

Reverting to the question of the present day military requirements, can anyone make more than an intelligent and inspired guess as to what we might need ten, twenty, thirty or more years from now? We're entering the atomic age, in itself foreboding and making more uncertain our estimates of future war requirements.

We can take a page out of Jules Verne, all of which seemed ridiculous just a few years back, and we find that in one light it is prophetic. "An inter-nation rocket war could lie in the future and certainly a standing military machine of several thousands would be about as ineffectual as a cross-bow at St. Lo."

We strongly contend that the "Emphasis should be in the laboratory." Isn't a man preparing himself more fully there? Not directly for military service, perhaps, but certainly his adaptability to it would be ever so much greater. In the vital meantime he is preparing for a useful life of living, wherein our emphasis should be today.

We heartily endorse a small, efficient, modernized standing Army and Navy—even to the extent of rejuvenating the National Guard, R. O. T. C., etc., for all those who enjoy it. But as far as a peacetime draft Army—never.

Choice of Fraternity Demands Thought On Part of Freshmen

By Ben Burstein

The interfraternity council has set November 12 as the date for the rushing of the new freshmen. This plan is a great improvement over the "picking them off the train" system in force last year. It is of utmost importance that the freshmen get acquainted with fellows from various fraternities before committing himself to one in particular.

Choosing a fraternity is one of the most important things that a new student has to do in the way of extra-curricular activities in his first year. For, he is not merely choosing a club; he is picking out a group of men with whom he will associate during and after college days. If the fraternity has a bad name, he will inherit that name: if it is known as a studious fraternity, he will be known as studious.

Fraternity is certainly more than just a pin. The pin is merely the symbol of what the fraternity stands for. It is an outward manifestation which shows that the wearer is part of a group. It is a symbol of brotherhood, of the spirit of friendship and of understanding between the fraters.

When a person joins a fraternity, it does not mean that he must divorce himself from the rest of the students. This is, in fact, contradictory to the idea of fraternity which is loyalty to the school as well as to the fraternity.

The advantages to be gained from fraternity are both material and spiritual. The frater will have a place on the campus; he will have a group [illegible] whom he can call "Brother" [illegible] ers will advise him as to [illegible] will help him with his [illegible] more than that, the frater[illegible] have a feeling of belonging; a [illegible] he has a solid group of [illegible] willing to accept and ass[illegible]

The great danger, however [illegible] case of choosing the w[illegible] Great care must be exercised [illegible] student to meet all the [illegible] to pick the one he is most [illegible] Equally great care must be [illegible] fraternities in bidding [illegible] fellow who will fit in with [illegible] the fraters.

Once a person becomes a [illegible] has taken the final step. It [illegible] late to decide that he would [illegible] better in another fraternity. [illegible] and disadvantages of all [illegible] be considered. Only in this way will [illegible] intelligent, happy choice be made.

One hundred stricken Russian libraries are asking you for aid. The internationally minded Soviets want to rebuild their bombed libraries and replenish the shelves with books written by well-known Russian and American authors. All books, from the time of Chaucer on are welcome. However, they have asked that no [illegible]lations, magazines, paper or cardboard bound books, or outdated textbooks be included. Take your books to Prof. Dean's office now.

POST-WAR RELAPSE . . .

The still small voice that has barely made itself heard in student affairs this year is Student Government representative body and organizer of activities. To date its role in campus has been that of an interested spectator in the battle of red tape that has sent student petitioners to the "Letters To The Editor" Box. Out of a dearth of student needs and complaints two projects of note have been picked by the Council and given to committees. These projects, Student Court and the honor system, have been bequeathed to several distinguished but non-Council students reducing the Council to a mere figurehead, at least this year. The honor system (suggested last year by the Cynic) is dependent upon a committee for indoctrination. By neither originating or establishing the two aforementioned projects the Executive Council has left itself open to the question—What has Student Government Accomplished This Quarter?

In resolving the difficulties of the soda fountain, student laxity on the job in the cafeteria, and infirmary misinterpretation Student Government has done nothing but watch house presidents and health council take the lead. Is this the voice of the U. V. M. student? Its lack of disciplining students in their behaviour in the Waterman vestibule in Mortar Board proctoring lines and the refusal of the cafeteria administration to keep the fountain open at convenient hours because of lack of co-operation. A few observant members of the student body have seen and tried to remedy difficulties resulting from lack of intelligent student government, particularly in the case of the red tape a student has to go through to get even a door opened in Waterman.

Besides ignoring these details and failing to administer reforms the Council has neglected its own constitution which is sorely in need of interpretation. It is a provision of the constitution that a Publications Board and an Athletic Board of Control be formed to assist carrying out the U. V. M. Students ideal "to bring about a system-atic administration of student affairs." Since teams are coming into existence Student Government is necessary in meeting new demands for money and expansion. An organized group should promote school spirit before our first basketball game, December 1. The constitution provides for that. But how could the Executive Council members of the Athletic Board know if fifty percent of them haven't even read your constitution. Cut Roberts Rules of Order.

The Cynic's Face Should Be 'Read'

The November 1 issue of the Cynic carried an article about Kake Walk directors which was inaccurate in naming the men who are to direct this year's event. The directors are Doug Parizeau, Jean Hamilton, and Bob Pulleyn. Apologies to this committee for our error.

Campus Comment

To the Men on Campus

Okay fellows, here's your chance to get back into the campus activities that you claim are dominated by women. Besides taking over the leadership during the shortage of men we also took over all the work connected with it. Now we are more than willing to let these duties fall on your "staunch shoulders."

At a recent meeting of Dramatic Club two men represented your interest in this activity. Before the war, the Dramatic Club and University Players were comprised of equal numbers of men and women. We cannot successfully carry out our program of two three-act plays without your interest. We need actors, stage managers and those interested in props and business.

Our first production is scheduled for December 7. We need you! How about

HEADS GOT TOGETHER

RESULT: MORE TRANSCONTINENTAL TELEPHONE CIRCUITS

With wire scarce and wartime calls increasing, telephone engineers made existing pairs of long distance wires carry nearly four times as many calls as before. This was done through installation of additional carrier equipment, requiring closer spacing of the wires on the line and transpositions at shorter intervals.

Three pairs on the Southern Transcontinental Route were rearranged, and in a 430-mile section this had to be done while keeping the urgently needed wires in service all the time. To do this, new tools and new methods had to be devised in the laboratories and on the job.

This is another among many examples of how Bell System teamwork and engineering skills maintained telephone service under wartime conditions.

Robert Frost, New England Poet, Gives His Views on Modern Trends In Poetry

CYNIC Interviews Writer at Middlebury

CYNIC Reporters Hear Frost

. . hate Hitler is common. To ad- . . ham is brave," said Robert Frost . . . sing his theories on modern day . . . s in an interview with CYNIC re- . . . ers. With this opening, he continued . . the statement of belief that bravery . . . t really found in the United States, while three U. V. M. students took down . . . ecems following his lecture on "The . . . tant Symbol" in Mead Chapel at . . . dlebury last Friday evening.

. . . ering the body of the lecture, Mr . . . st stated that all metaphors are sym . . . and that all poetry is symbolic of . . . thought. "Science and politics . . . ld do well to profit by poetry in not . . . g themselves too seriously when . . . r metaphors break down," he said, . . . continued with a comparison of the . . . Deal to Robin Hood—"both take . . . asure in making people squirm by taking money from them." In his poem "Mending Wall," he associated the line "Good fences make good neighbors" with nationalism, and the line "Something there is that doesn't love a wall," to internationalism.

An informal gathering was held in the library following his speech while Mr. Frost expanded his theories on the trend of poetry with the statement. "It is partly pride which makes this mystery of new style. Obscure poets try to imitate Finnigan's Wake by making their poetry charming but not understandable. Some poets go backwards and justify themselves by old poets' precedents."

Robert Frost was born 70 years ago in San Francisco, but he is basically a New Englander. He was educated at Dartmouth and Harvard, and following his graduation he taught English in Plymouth and Derry, N. H. In 1912, he went to England where his first works were published, and remained there for three years. Upon his return to the United States, he turned to farming for a short while and then taught at Amherst College. Mr. Frost has been Poet in Residence and Fellow of Letters at the University of Michigan and is the recipient of three Pulitzer Prize awards—in 1924 for "New Hampshire, a Poem with Notes"; 1931 for "Collected Poems," and in 1937 for "A Further Range."

Victory Loan Films At Museum Nov. 15

Two Victory Loan Films will be shown in the Fleming Museum Auditorium on Thursday, November 15 at 4.00 p.m. They are:

Army Nurse—The absorbing story of the Army nurse from the veterans' hospitals at home to the fighting front.

It's Your America—The dramatic story of the soldier, Jeff, and his lucky penny. This realistic film follows Jeff's adventures through the routine of basic training, his travels over his own nation, the battle for Rome, the invasion of Normandy, and home. The boy who thought he knew all the answers discovers the real answer to the question, "What am I fighting for?"

Mr. H. B. Eldred, chairman of the Victory Loan Film campaign in Vermont, said, "This film is one of the finest of the campaign and no student should miss this opportunity to see it. Even if you can't afford a Bond, you owe it to yourself and to your country to see It's Your America."

NUQUIST PRAISES CO-OP IN SPEECH

"Our country grew because people helped each other. The cooperative is based on the equality of the individual," said Professor Nuquist, speaker at the Vermont Christian Association meeting, November 7.

Because of their democratic nature, co-ops were driven out by Hitler. Later they were branded as communistic by the semi-illiterates of conservative nations. However, the co-op is based on the equality of voting. It is a mutual organization in which everybody shares. Its purpose is to serve the people and the society by keeping standards high.

The meeting was brought to a close with the business of the day. Morris Pike was elected secretary of the organization, and the following boys were elected chairmen of the different commissions: Bob Taisy, Deputations; Ed Russell, Christian faith; Charles Wingham, Social Action; and Luke Howe, World Friendliness.

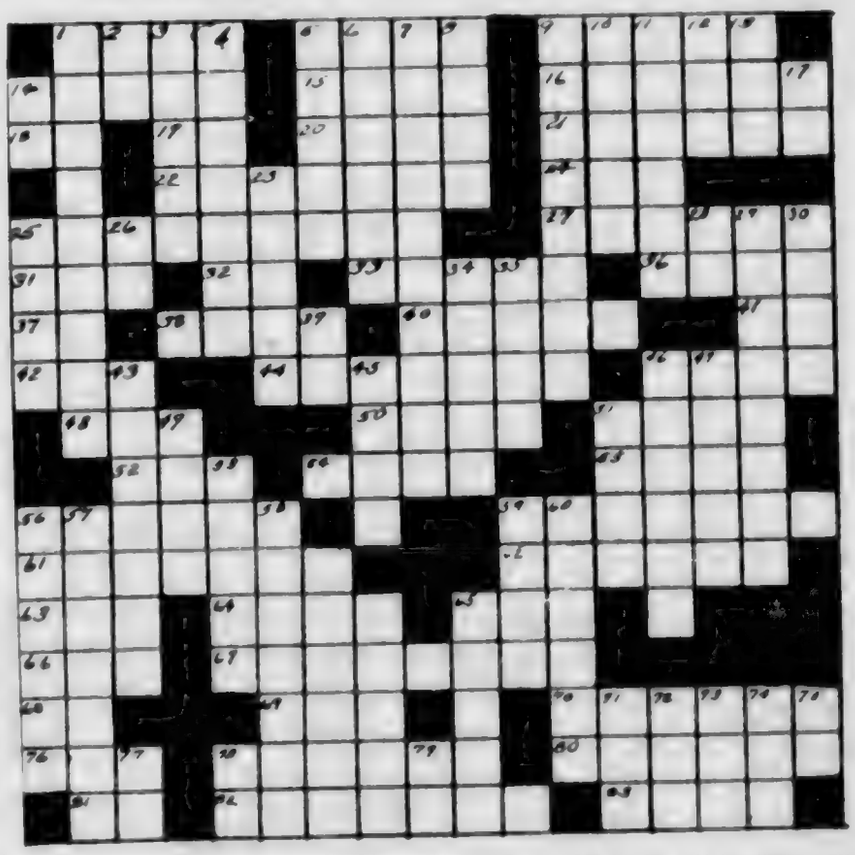
Orchestra, Choir Present Concert

Selections Include Prof. Bennett's Piece

Their first concert of the season was presented by the University Orchestra and the Augmented University Choir under the sponsorship of the Department of Music Thursday night, November 8, in the Ira Allen Chapel. Prof. Ippolites Pappoutsakis conducted the orchestra; Three Gypsy Songs, Op. 103 and Prof. Miriam Natilee Marston assisted at the organ.



The program included the following selections: Symphony No. 103, in E flat major by Haydn—Adagio, Andante, Menuetto, Allegro con spirito by the orchestra; Three Gypsy Songs, Op. 103 by Brahms—Where the Rima River Flows, by the mixed chorus; Cantata, I Hear America Singing, by Kleinsinger based on poems of Walt Whitman), by the mixed chorus, and The Heavens Are Telling from "The Creation" by Haydn, presented by the mixed chorus and orchestra.

The orchestral pieces were skillfully performed; played with well developed modulations in tone and volume. An obbligato featured in Haydn's Andante was beautifully executed. The chorus sang its selections with excellent emotional interpretation and tone quality, attested to by prolonged applause from the capacity audience. "Hymn to Diana," one of Professor Bennett's own compositions, was especially well received.

Joint Conference Meets

Joint Conference met last Friday to discuss cooperation of Student Government and Student Union. Their next meeting will cover the Honor System. Meetings are open to any member of Student Union.

Back in the days when U. V. M. meant "immortality verde mon" the CYNIC featured a Fair Middlebury smoker. Middlebury didn't stay under—we lost 6 to 0. Stella rocks 21 spanked the smoker with a rousing song accompanying himself on the ukelele. No list of the repertoire is reported but we can imagine the tune on the old going well over "Leave Watty the Light Lemon Here." A special train carried the U. V. M. men to Middlebury for the game. Twenty cents got the boys and women.

It must have been a marvelous game. The epic verse inspired "Local" to pay tribute this gem to the Literary Corner:

Glory, glory they are gaining
Wrists and ankles they are spraining
But U. V. M. stays by it unrelenting
And our team goes marching on.

Somehow our heart goes out to the boy who complained in a letter to the editor that Vermont girls just seemed to lack pep. Of course he was wrong and every man on campus leaped to the defense of the fair sex—well, there were at least two letters vaguely suggesting that the girls were sort of nice to have around. Then a down-to-earth senior turned campus interest back to worthwhile affairs with this terse comment, "I hope this will be the last contribution to waste the CYNIC's space in unnecessary praise of girls who seem destined to be a rather sizable section of the Vermont student body."

Burlington's Barber Shop advertised new maroon leather chairs, and for the pleasure seekers there was Fanchon's Playground starring Crawford Kent and Bebe Daniels at the Majestic Theater.

And President Bixby had Sunday dinner at Commencement every week—while the sociable Sherry Day was casting a sheep's eye Miss Allen for another Wilbur gift to the campus.

A new high in decorating motifs was designed to startle the timid and was practical too. The committee for the Military Ball promised a receiving platform surrounded by stacks of rifles and machine guns. It must be that chaperones really believed in that "speak softly-big stick" stuff in the good old days.

Dramatics weren't neglected. The boys had just put on "The Death of Little Eva." S. D. Smith popular man on campus, is reported as having been a natural for the part of Simon Legree and A. W. Jutter and J. Greig are listed in the cast as cakey as ice.

Oh yes, a fashion note. Makes us think that twenty years ago things were just about the same. Here's a bit from the "Listening Post" column. "Short shorts have made their appearance among our more stylish co-eds. Dr. Marvin now treats six cases of eyestrain in one day among the men."

Only A Paper Moon To Shine Down On Annual Owl Formal

Owls will peer lazily from trees and shrubs when the Owl fraternity holds its traditional semi-formal dance under a harvest moon at the Waterman Lounge from 8-12 on Saturday evening, November 17.

The lounge will be decorated in typical harvest-moon style complete with hay stacks and hors evers-owls. Chrome signs representing the different fraternities at the University will also serve as decorations for the evening.

Music will be furnished by Jack Collins, one of last year's Lake Walk bands. Chaperones for the evening will be Miss Mary Jean Simpson and Professor and Mrs. Lyman Rowell. The dance has been limited to 75 couples.

V-12 Program Finished

Students in the Navy V-12 Medical program at the University will be placed on an inactive status effective November 10, according to a notification received by President John Millis. In part the letter from Rear Admir. C. Frederick, assistant chief of Naval Personnel says: "The Navy Department is deeply appreciative of the contribution the University of Vermont has made to the war effort through its medical school in the training of medical officers."

Y.W. Get-together Is on Social Work

Mrs. Metcalf, Miss Wright Will Lecture

Talks on social work by Mrs. J. P. Metcalf, wife of Professor Metcalf of the psychology department, and Miss Doris Wright, head of Rock Point Institute for Girls, top the program for the YW Get-Together to be on November 15 in the Student Lounge. Plans of Lois Stevens, chairman of the community projects commission, and Nancy Bookstaber, newly elected social chairman, include singing, entertainment, and refreshments and a panel discussion with Miss Wright, Mrs. Metcalf and Florence Reed '46.

Mrs. Metcalf, executive secretary of the Howard Relief Society, a local family welfare organization, will speak on matters of the social worker. Before being on the board of the Howard Relief Society, Mrs. Metcalf taught at the smith College School of Social Work in Northampton.

As founder of Rock Point, Miss Wright will speak on her experiences and the reasons she feels there is a need for Rock Point in this community. A trained nurse and former supervisor of nurses in Philadelphia, Miss Wright supplemented her nurse training with a degree from the Pennsylvania School of Social Work.

The Get-Together is for all members of YW and those interested in coming.

U.V.M. Debate Season Begins, McGill-Vt. Stage Battle Here

Debaters Will Be Busy This Month

Whether cooperation with Russia should be the keynote of United States foreign policy was the topic of the first debate of November 14 opening the debating season for U. V. M. Donna Lawyer and Louise Conley debated the affirmative for the University while the Middlebury team took the negative. The debate was not judged and therefore no decision was reached.

Vermont and McGill will debate here on Friday, November 16. McGill will take the affirmative and Leona Foley and Mildred Easterbrooks will debate the negative for Vermont. Three judges will decide which team presented the more convincing arguments whether or not the foreign policy of the United States should be directed towards the establishment of free trade among the nations of the world.

This subject will also be used in the third scheduled debate, when Middlebury debates the affirmative viewpoint with the same representatives of the McGill-Vermont contest in a meeting of the clubs at Middlebury on Tuesday, November 20. No decision will be given in this debate.

Miss Marjorie Allen Shows Mexican Slides

Mexican projects of the American Friends Service were the subjects of slides shown by Miss Marjorie Allen, Youth secretary of the Committee in New England last Thursday November 8 at U. V. M.

Miss Allen was here all day Thursday and part of Friday to discuss with anyone interested the work of the American Friends Service and the projects for next summer.

In the spring Miss Allen hopes to return and interview students interested in the summer work projects. These projects consist of volunteer work in "poor communities" involving physical labor. Miss Allen will bring on her return slides covering all phases of the American Friends Service work.

Schoelles Unveils Dramatic Club's Plans for Season

Two Three-Act Plays And Radio Broadcasts Featured on Program

"Two major productions will be presented by the Dramatic Club during the school year," said Olga Schoelles, president of the University Players, outlining plans of the Dramatic Club at the meeting on Wednesday evening, November 7.

Two three-act plays are now to be given instead of the usual one long play and three one-act plays. The dates for tryouts for the fall play will be posted this week and all those who are interested in acting, make-up, scenery, costumes or lighting are asked to sign up. The Dramatic Club and University Players will also sponsor a series of radio broadcasts after the Christmas recess over station WCAX.

Explaining the new status of the Dramatic Club this year Olga pointed out that membership is now open to all those who obtain 50 credit hours where the system formerly required a student to earn points through participation in school dramatic productions.

After the business meeting Mr. Harry Fisher, who directed last year's productions, discussed the various aspects of acting and the use of the study of drama in movies, on the stage, on the radio and in television.

Student Govt. Notes

The meeting of the Executive Committee of Student Government was held on November 5, 1945 at 4:30 p.m. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

New business motion made and passed which elected Shirley Harris as assistant to the Prosecuting Attorney for Student Court to fill the vacancy of Ruth Selegue.

A student complaint regarding the study hall not being quiet enough was brought before the committee.

The student Lounge can be open on Sundays if the students will aid in keeping it clean. Motion was passed that Student Government will take the responsibility.

A complaint was made about the band having to pay for dinner at the Bean Supper. The Food Service Department claims it is up to Student Government to pay for this.

World Student Congress Will Begin In Prague November 17

Fighters of Yesterday--- Builders of Tomorrow

JOIN in commemoration of •

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT DAY

• With World Student Congress

Held in Prague, November 17th to 23rd 1945

Last week Vermont lent an ear to pleas for cooperation from other leges with the hope that Vermonters might offer a hand to condition the world scene. This week comes news of an international meeting t held in Prague, Czechoslovakia, as a memorial to those students whose it was to fall as victims of the Nazis.

On November 17, 1939, the Germans launched a search for studen Czechoslovakian universities. The Nazis recognized that young stu were the spirit behind most of the resistance which confronted them i small European nations. They realized also that students of colleges universities were respected by the peoples of all countries and that upri of students, more than of any other group would gain outside sympathy

The sixth anniversary of the slaughter of Czechoslovakia's most pr ing youth—November 17, 1945—has been chosen as the date for the ing session of the World Student Congress in Prague and as Internat Student Day. It is hoped through the Student Congress to bring to c students the realization of the powers with which the Nazis credited and the utilization of these powers in planning a more peaceful world. ditionally, the Congress hopes to stimulate alertness to the problem today and motivate college students to fulfill the ideals of their group i coming leaders of tomorrow.

Contest Given by The Victory Shop

"Why We Buy War Bonds" is the subject for the essay contest sponsored by the Victory Shop. The shop, which is a non-profit organization is utilizing the money which is left over to furnish prizes for the contest.

The essays should have about 500 words and must be in by December 1. Professor Page is receiving the essays from U. V. M. students.

The prizes to be awarded are: first prize $5.00; second prize $3.00; third prize $2.00. The prizes will be awarded in war bonds.

The contest is open to all who attend any institution of learning in Burlington. However each school will have its own contest and prizes.

U. V. M. contestants may write in long hand on one side only of ordinary theme paper, and submit contributions to any member of the English faculty or slip them under the door of 358 Waterman before Thanksgiving.

STUDY HABIT HINTS GIVEN TO FRESHMEN BY MISS F. CRABBE

"Motivation must come from the student and not from the professor," said Miss Fave Crabbe at the meeting on "Study Habits" given for Freshmen and those under warning by Student Union and Health Council.

Miss Crabbe at this meeting, stressed important study hints which, if practiced, would prove valuable to the students. A good environment in which to study, a quiet place with all the materials for study within reach and a favorable mental attitude are two requirements.

It was also brought out that a student, in order to absorb knowledge, should not study an assignment the night before it is due but should space the periods over two or three days at shorter intervals. New learnings should be linked with the old and so the previous lesson should be reviewed. Underlining or outlining the material was encouraged.

A final point stressed was the effect a poor study habits on mental and physical health. A student who has crammed far into the night is not capable of doing good work.

The Health Council of W. A. A. is still selling yellow tags the receipts of which are contributed to the University Health Fund for aid to students needing medical care or glasses.

November 12 through 17 they are sponsoring a "Mental Health Week." One of the aims of the Council is to urge U. V. M.'s "average" student to take a personal interview at least 'as' as she spends those previous 24 hours. It can't take a student so that eight hours are spent in sleep, two for meals, four for classes, five for study, 1.5 for recreation and rest and 3.5 for work and extra curricula activities. A personal, mental and emotional diagnosis will be created that will put the average student back on his feet.

...ering laboratories as the ground floor for getting back into campus life."

UNIVERSITY PLAYERS.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

For lackey of the student government to organize the observation of Armistice Day seems to me to be not only negligent and unpatriotic, but grossly ungrateful.

We have compulsory attendance for convocation which takes a half hour of one day; we have a day off to observe Thanksgiving, and these seem to cause no particular pain. Would it then be too much to set aside a few minutes of time to be devoted to the decent and respectful honoring of the dead of the first World War? Certainly our debt to them and to those of them that are still in Veterans' Hospitals is just as great as it was four years ago or twenty years ago . . . or do debts of this kind diminish with time? Certainly those heroes are just as dead as those of this war, and they will be dead just as long.

Even with the scar of war still livid and tender on our youth today, we are too busy pursuing our own ends and too busy having a good time to take a few minutes off each year to honor the men who gave up all we have so we could have it.

school spirit, which at time (when but seven men reported for crossery) had appeared to have disappeared on the campus, is apparently very much in evidence at U. V. M. Last week two of the boys at Phi Eta Theta House were injured so badly they were forced to retire from at the outset had been a friendly game of "touch" football. Such in- and love for the game would seem to assure a successful re-entry into collegiate grid picture next fall.

There are other evidences of the spirit and temperament necessary to nce winning teams. Many ex-G.I.'s, back from months and years of service in the armed forces, have volunteered to take military science—ve younger men the benefit of experience they gained the hard way.

Many co-eds have offered their services as cheerleader, a job so important in making a poor team good, or a good team great. Still other men have taken over the reins as managers and assistants.

Step by step the Green and Gold is returning down the path of normalcy. e road may be steep and rocky, but each succeeding day finds us advancowards our goal.

Football enters its stretch drive with Army continuing to dispel any lingdoubts that it ranks with the great teams of all time. The women copped all six points from the Tri Delts to lengthen their lead of last week. The men's independents, who were tied for third place with the Pi Phi Theta last week grabbed all six points from the Pi Phi Theta combination, putting them in the second place position.

The standing at the clubs to date follows:

Women's Independents	27
Men's Independents	19
Alpha Chi Omega	18
Theta Delta Delta-Sigma Gamma	15
Lambda Iota	15
Kappa Alpha Theta-Pi Beta Phi	14
Veterans	7
Phi Sigma Delta	6

VETERANS TAKE HIGH TOTALS

The veterans took the high totals for the week while tying with Alpha Chi Omega. The Owls shut out the Phi Sigs dropping them into the cellar position. The vets finished out of their last week's cellar having the Phi Sigs one point below.

High singles last week were rolled by Chuck Costantino 134 Mickey Mills, 118 Russ Carpenter 119 and A. Beatie 119. The highest single in the first five weeks of play was 149 tossed down the alleys by Rae Giddings.

Presenting Basketball Personalities

For the first in a series of stories on the U. V. M. basketball squad we have chosen one of the past seasons regular squadsmen, Howie Stein. At first glance, Howie is typically an aspiring pre-medical student, with one year to graduation. At 19, Howie has done a lot with his time enjoying life as easily as he has applied himself to pre-medical studies.

Stein In Action

At prep school in his native Brooklyn, there were studies but still time to play varsity tennis, basketball and baseball. After graduation from prep school in 1943, he entered the accelerated program at Amherst College, where he participated in basketball and tennis.

In July, 1944, Howie, at 18, was whisked into the army by his draft board and served at Fort Dix, in the chemical warfare branch until his discharge in early 1945.

Immediately after his release from the service, he entered the University of Vermont. He participated this past year with the basketball squad, and those who were here for the season will remember him as the regular forward on the team. Howie is hoping to wind up his undergraduate work with a chance to do his part in the coming basketball season.

A contest between the green and gold individual members will determine the best written songs and cheers. Intentions should be made known to Miss Cummings who will state the requirements and rules. A Tuke Box Dance under the sponsorship of the W.A.A. Council will be planned for November 24.

The swimming class announced for 4.30 p.m. on Friday has been changed from an instructed class to a formation swimming class. The regular instruction period will be as before at 5.00 p.m.

Hike-Bike

The excursion to Jericho Center on Sunday, November 11, by the Hike-Bike Club started at 2.30 p.m. from front Waterman. The bikers faced a 17 mile trip and the hikers contemplated a comfortable ride in the station wagon followed by a leisurely hike of two or three miles. However, the tables turned when the hikers took the wrong road and had to ask for directions. A friendly Vermont farmer trucked the girls back to the right road.

About 4.00 p.m., the parties arrived simultaneously at Mrs. Williams farm. Mrs. Williams is a graduate of U. V. M., and had invited the girls to spend the afternoon. A supper of baked beans, cole slaw, brown bread, milk and coffee, plus carrots pulled from the garden and fresh butter churned by Priscilla Kilam, made a real home picnic. The farm's plow horse received a workout when all the girls took bareback rides.

Both the hikers and bikers came home in the station wagon in two shifts, a tired but happy lot.

Outing Club Cleans Up Camp for Winter

Eight members of the Outing Club took a trip to Bryant's Camp on Bolton Mountain, Sunday, November 4. They traveled over most of the road in the station wagon, but had to hike the remaining two and one-half miles to the camp, as the road wasn't too good.

The sole purpose of the hike was to clean up the cabin which will be used during the winter sports season.

Students Begin Fraternity 'Housecleaning'

Committee Adopts Plan of Action to Promote Tolerance

Last night U V M students saw the Religion and Life Parley crystalize into action. Approximately 100 fraternity sorority, and independent members of the student body thronged the lounge to elect a committee to investigate the quota system and abolish it on this campus

The decision was the climax of a two-day parley which was designed to stimulate brotherhood and democracy. Last night's forum was the last address on these topics and reached its logical conclusion with the plan presented by students Rabbi Stern, Rev. Ahern, Rev Hyslop, and Rev. Richardson led the two-hour discussion from 8:00 till 10:00 o'clock, which ended in student demand for immediate action on the local problem

Students called for a meeting to answer U V M 's needs at which the forum was adjourned and the local problem was taken up. Rev Richardson and Moderator Nugent remained to direct discussion and keep the meeting in order

After an hour's debate students elected a committee to carry on the work started at this meeting. Headed by Don McRell of Sigma Nu, this committee is composed of two members from the fraternities sororities, independents, and freshmen It is contacting the national organizations in an effort to do away with the Quota

The three hours that were spent in reaching the point of formulating a plan for brotherhood were punctuated by arguments from student leaders. Peter Mallett started the ball rolling by giving evidence of racial and religious discrimination in his fraternity. Boulder and Mortar Board members voiced their objections to lack of service and presence of power politics in fraternities of students, banded together with a common purpose and an inability to see that purpose.

The abolition of fraternities was not proposed in the arguments, pro and con, as these organizations can follow the purpose of brotherhood, according to campus opinion

Students volunteered to represent the following: Alpha Epsilon Phi, Delta Phi Epsilon, Sigma Gamma, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Xi Delta Women's Independents, Men's Independents, freshmen, Sigma Nu, Phi Sigma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Delta Psi Kappa, Iota, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Lan Epsilon Phi, Sigma Phi, and Kappa Sigma

Specific opportunities for church and YW work were presented to the delegates from New England colleges by five leaders of religious work. Saturday afternoon the group had personal interviews with the 15 leaders. An address on the individual's role in society was given Saturday night by Walter Muelder, dean of Boston University School of Theology.

Among the speakers were Betty Johns, National Student Secretary of the YW in the northeastern region and Ensign Leininger, N.E. Secretary of S.C.M., both of whom were here at U.V.M. this fall.

RELIGION AND LIFE PARLEY

Speakers Emphasize Student's Role In World Reconstruction

Anti-semitism and anti-Negroism, the atomic bomb, Russian and American relationships and daily methods of helping reconstruct the world were discussed during the two-day parley on religion and life this weekend. With forums and round table discussions, personal interviews and worship services, the four leaders, Rev. Ben Richardson, Father Michael Ahern, Rabbi Harry J. Stern, and Rev. Ralph Hyslop, kept the parley at a constantly stimulating level.

Vespers and a general forum on 'Religion's Part in the Reconstruction" followed Sunday's launching of the parley The vesper's address was led by Rabbi Stern, who spoke on "A Renewed Faith for the New Age"

Sunday Night Forum

A brief definition of the four leaders' own beliefs on religion in the postwar world started the forum. "Fascism must go," was Mr. Richardson's first point. Also to guarantee world reconstruction, believes Mr. Richardson, people must accept the idea of the Soviet government and American democracy living together peaceably "And, lastly, there must always be as many faiths allowed as men want "

"Love thy neighbor as thyself," defined Father Ahern's beliefs. There must be fundamental unity over the earth. By discriminating against others, we discriminate against ourselves

Round Table Discussion

Three main points highlighted the round table discussion on Problem of Power, led by Rev. Hyslop. "There are different kinds of control we must work out together," he stated. "Not only those of the atomic bomb are important, but also those of radar, and further development of the airplane." A second point discussed was the possibility of America's being corrupted by the power she now possesses. Bringing the problem of power home was evident in the third point on how U.V.M can have real and active democracy for social and political group life on campus

"Christianity and Judaism overlap and supplement each other in thought," exclaimed Rabbi Harry Stern in his round table discussion on "Can the Christian Understand the Jew?" "Minority is always a disfavor, and minority is one of the main causes of the universal persecution of the Jews," the leader said. Reasons for present day persecution were as

Rush Week Ends on Nov. 15 Following Talks and Dinners

Amid revival of old fraternity customs, rushing meetings and banquets, pledging for the various fraternities on U.V.M. campus ended on Friday, November 16. Beginning Monday November 12, and continuing for the rest of the week, fraternities were engaged in rushing talks and interviews with new men on campus, followed by rushing banquets

It was apparent to the returned veterans who were fraternity men before the war that things weren't like the old times. Lack of houses to entertain the rushees, lack of a large group of men all made it more apparent that fraternities were still hard hit by war time. Yet, there was a definite feeling of revival and of fraternities getting back on their feet as witnessed by organized rushing under Interfraternity Council Rules as opposed to "cut-throat" rushing

Kappa Sigma pledged H. F. Crocker Jr., J. E. Hancock, III, S. V. Mace D. W. Patch, and C. W. Sprague.

Delta Psi pledged Frank Lackey

Phi Delta Theta welcomed P. H. Johnson and R. S. Sumner. These were all the names submitted to Professor Carroll's office on the day of pledging

Bennett Concert Gives Contrast in Schools of Music

A most unusual concert was presented by Prof. Howard Bennett and Elsa Kremers Bennett last Friday night in Ira Allen Chapel. The duo-piano team played a program which, although interesting, seemed to be somewhat balanced at the extremes. The first half consisted of the classical Mozart and Brahms, and a remarkable contrast was achieved in the second portion by such modernists as Stravinsky and Morton Gould. While it was evident that there was a lack of the romantic school on the program, this served to heighten the contrast, between the classic and modern. The pieces, while not too familiar to most, lent a distinct character to the program

The outstanding feature of the first part of the program was fine feeling and interpretation of the Brahms Sonata in F minor. The Scherzo was performed with spiritual character

The unusual melodies and developments of the Stravinsky sonata were performed with a strange fitfulness which characterizes the composer. The artists continued the second portion of the program with the Rumbolero by Morton Gould and this, and Espana by Chabrier, the artists displayed a good sense of marked rhythm and these numbers were very well received. "In a Mist" by Bix Beiderbecke completed the modern round of the program. The encore was also in the modern, syncopated mode and was rather well received

NEW HILLEL DIRECTOR FOR 1945-46

Palestine Problem Interests Rabbi DeKoven

Ben Burstein

Hillel's new U. V. M. director, Rabbi Ralph De Koven, comes to Vermont with a long record of work behind him.

Having studied in Chicago, his native city with both a secular education from the University of Chicago and a religious education from the Hebrew Theological College in Chicago to his credit, Rabbi De Koven completed his education in Palestine where he spent three years.

While in Palestine, he observed the conditions and the bases of the "Palestine Problems." Palestine has been marvelously developed in recent years. The Rabbi cites as an example the building of Tel Aviv, an important middle eastern city. This city was literally raised from the desert

One of the big problems in Palestine, according to Rabbi De Koven, is that presented by the Arabs. The Arabs are by nature a non progressive people. They cling to the old customs of raising sheep and goats. When they have exhausted the land, instead of trying to replenish it, they move on to other places

Although many sources tell of the frequent clashes between the Arabs and the Jews, the Rabbi says that a great many of these riots are incited by a few men, such as Arab leaders and the British Colonial Office which believes in the doctrine Divide and Rule

The marriage Arab and Jew can get along together. The Rabbi tells about the Hadassah hospitals in Palestine. Although these hospitals are run by Jews and have been built with Jewish money raised by Zionist organizations all over the world, more Arabs are treated than Jews

Besides doing work in Palestine Rabbi De Koven has organized a Jewish center for the hospitalized people in the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. He has also been active in interfaith activities

Rabbi De Koven plans to institute an extensive program of Jewish culture as well as religious activities here at U V M

Evans Speaks on French Elections

Election in France was the title of Professor Evans' speech at convocation [illegible] October 16

Professor Evans compared what France is now going through in regard to its recent election to what the United States went through in 1787 to better its constitution. He said that France is not satisfied with the government under the Third Republic and voted three weeks ago whether to take their old constitution and improve it or to take it out entirely. It was voted by the majority to make a new one, a new base for the Fourth Republic. In this new constitution there will be a change in leadership, a stronger position for new heads of departments and the state will take over the biggest productions

The Vermont Cynic

VOL. 63 NOVEMBER 20, 1945 NO. 29

The Time Is Now

Brotherhood is not just a word nor an abstract ideal. It was a fact at last night's session in the efforts of the religious leaders, Rabbi Stern, Rev. Ahern, Rev. Hastings, and Rev. Richardson to promote tolerance. It was evident at yesterday's discussions which were attended by a large proportion of students. For the knowledge that brotherhood exists was first brought home to us at last night's demonstration of school spirit. A student body completely acquainted with problems and solutions of brotherhood (as presented by religious leaders...) worked up an answer of their own to the challenge of racial and religious intolerance.

Passing the issue up for a definite plan of action to wipe out organized intolerance on this campus, Rev. Richardson led student discussion and inspired the abolition of the Quota. We owe him a profound thanks for waking us up to the utter incompatibility of democracy and Quota. To the student leaders who inaugurated the student committee we offer congratulations. Here is a movement of the students, by them, and for them and it is significant that outstanding students have taken on a serious responsibility to which their talents are suited.

The student committee was formulated in a time of action (we might say near riot), and must adopt as its tenet ACTION or we will have been sadly misled by the enthusiasm and clear thinking of last night's debate.

The time to strike for democracy, not only through fraternity but in a general "house cleaning," is now, at the moment the first step has been taken. It is time to devote into oblivion the blindness that leads to Quota and the sales tron and segregation which is "snobocracy."

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC

The Religion and Life Parley is over. The student body at U. V. M. is to be congratulated for its cooperation. The faculty of U. V. M. is to be censured for its lack of it.

I have been sadly disillusioned. To me the Phi Beta Kappa key and Doctor of Philosophy degree have always been symbols of knowledge, a high degree of scholarship, wisdom, and vision. Now, though my respect for these symbols remains unabated, I find that knowledge and scholarship may exist while wisdom and vision are, in some cases, lacking. I feel that high-sounding theories and well worded convictions, unless they are put into practice, are worthless.

As a member of the Planning Committee for the parley, it was my job to schedule class lectures by the four speakers. It was my job to approach certain members of our faculty in order to offer the speaker's services. The services, with one exception, were rejected—politely by some, disdainfully by others. "Sorry, but my lecture schedule allows no time for interruptions." "A discussion of Religion has no place in this course". "Brotherhood has no place in the college classroom." "Brotherhood is an institution in itself. I would no sooner have a Religious speaker in my class than I would have a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers."

(Is it polite to mention names?)

Brotherhood, the understanding and respect of one individual for another, is essential to happy and constructive living. It is an integral part of life. Psychology is concerned with it. History, Philosophy, Sociology and Economics, must, by their very natures, emphasize it.

College is the place in which we learn to live with others, in which we prepare to face the problems of life squarely and intelligently. The reading of textbooks—no matter how thorough—is insufficient basis for such preparation.

Today's college students are tomorrow's world citizens. We will determine the course of humanity. Upon us will depend the success of world peace. And world peace depends wholly upon the mutual understanding, cooperation, and confidence on the part of all people of all nations. Is that not Brotherhood?

Many of our country's leaders have stated that the only hope of the world lies in a return to religion. They do not use "religion" in the theological sense. They mean the religion which magnifies brotherhood and peace; which seeks truth in freedom, individual discipline in social duty, which makes of nations, races, sects, and classes one fellowship of men.

That is the religion which the speakers of this parley discussed.

Does religion in life deserve consideration in the college classroom? I put the question to the faculty.

Conference Proposes U. N. O. Commission for Atomic Bomb

Pete Mallett

The secret of the atomic bomb will not be shared until the United Nations devise a control plan. This was decided recently in a conference at Washington in which President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada jointly proposed a United Nations Commission be set up to devise means to outlaw the atomic bomb and to insure the use of atomic energy "only for peaceful purposes."

* * * *

No mention was made of Russia in the document but there was a lot of Russia between the lines and her reaction is being anticipated with anxiety and hope. Specific proposals were set up in this document.

"For extending between all nations the exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends."

"For control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to insure its use only for peaceful purposes."

"For the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons and of all other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction."

"For the effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying states against the hazards of violations and evasions."

In proposing that a commission be set up under the United Nations, Canada, Britain and the United States have no intention of trying to dictate the commission's terms of reference. All that these nations have in mind is that the United Nations organization take up the matter at its organization meeting to begin in London between January 2 and 7. This means that the General Assembly will have a voice in whether it or the Security Council shall pick the nations to be represented on the commission.

Bertrand Russell, British author around whose ideas philosophical storms have often hovered over Britain and the United States offers a similar plan for a globe Atom Federation. So long as two sovereign powers remain on earth, the philosopher writes, war can be expected. He suggests that members bind themselves together against any aggression and that a court should be seated to decide whether aggression has occurred.

Armor Clad Gentleman Comes From Museum to Waterman

Something new has been added to Eng- classes this quarter in the form of strated lectures. Aided by the Flem- Museum, the English Department dis- ved suits of armor and lances in giv- background for courses

For about a week the English Depart- ent played host to the armor clad gen- man of the Fifteenth Century at lec- es on the Arthurian legend. The suit armor was acquired about 20 years when the Museum was in the present Center. The armor came from the ate of Henry LeGrand Cannon.

Story of the Scimitar

The Museum is still welcoming infor- tion about the origin of the mystery ord recently loaned by Maj. Joseph uffre and which will be exhibited from vember 19 to December 1.

Maj. Joseph Guiffre of Burlington, n a member of the Army of Occu- tion in Germany, was one day accosted a German who asked him if he wanted word. Before the Major could reply, German placed a jeweled Turkish- le scimitar in his hands and fled.

Major Guiffre, wondering at the origin the weapon, brought it to the Museum r aid in identifying the insignia and scriptions on the sword and scabbard.

The blade is of fine steel with a golden d ivory hilt studded with rubies and quoises. On the blade is engraved in ld inlay the royal titles and insignia of tephan, king of Poland and Prussia, the name of Graf (Count) Szecseny Ist- an, and the date 1848.

It would seem likely that this was a eremonial sword presented to the Hun- arian Count for the distinguished serv- s he rendered his country from 1809 1833 and for his political position in e first Magyar administration of 1848.

The red velvet scabbard is decorated ith gold and jewels in the manner of e sword. On the gold is a royal coat- arms with the Latin inscription, "If od is for us, who is against us."

Novel Decorations Highlight Formal

Unusual decorations were the highlight of the Owl dance in the Student Lounge Saturday night, November 17. Painted owls with blinking eyes of electric lights looked down on the dancers from black trees in a background of autumnal scenes. Approximately 75 couples danced until midnight to the music of Jack Collins' six-piece orchestra. Their novel rendition of "Shanty Town" was a special hit. Bill Cook and Jeanette Soules contributed to the occasion with several popular songs.

Another unusual feature of the dance, was the absence of a policeman. It has been the custom in the past to have a policeman on duty during any dance. The Owls gave a trial to a system of policing by several students, and if this method proved successful it will probably be used in the future.

Miss Mary Jean Simpson and Professor and Mrs. Rowell, with Lambda Iota members, received the couples as chaperones. Refreshments of punch and cookies were served during intermission

LAST CHANCE!

The Victory Shop essay contest will receive all manuscripts up until Wednesday, November 28. This leaves students three days after vacation to get into the contest and win a first prize of $75, or second prize of $50, third prize of $25. Essays may be handed in to any member of the English Department or may be submitted to Professor Pope, Room 235.

W. A. A. Notes

Ready, aim, FIRE! These three words in Sergeant Landa's rifle club bring forth a volley of shots that echo and re-echo in the basement of the men's gym. On Monday and Wednesday from 1.00 to 5.00 p.m., and on Tuesday and Thursday from 2.00 to 5.00 p.m., the club shoots and learns the techniques of handling and cleaning the rifle. Sergeant Landa announces that he has applied to the National Rifle Association for certificates in rifle for the students who complete the course. There is room for a few more in both classes so that anyone who would like to start in the Rifle Club should see Sergeant Landa.

On Saturday, November 17, the Hockey Club played on the athletic field near the weather bureau. The next game will be held on November 30.

A Health Council meeting in room 116 in Waterman was held on Tuesday November 20. New officers were elected and projects for the remaining year were discussed. The next drive will be on "Fatigue and Rest." One of the main points in the drive will be to have the houses quiet after 10.30 p.m.

Hariet Barron spoke before the House Directors on "Purposes of the Health Council." She also reviewed projects which have been made this year and forecasted events to take place in the near future.

Veterans Have Party

The U.S.O. of Burlington was host to 25 veterans of World War II, including an ex-member of the WAC and the WAVES Friday night last, November 16

The affair was just a simple get-together for the fellows and girls at which they discussed their various experiences and duties in the service as well as their school work now.

Womens Independents Gain Nine Point Lead

The standing of the clubs is as follows

Women's Independents	33
Alpha Chi Omega	24
Lambda Iota "Owls"	21
Men's Independent	19
Delta Delta Delta, Sigma Gamma	15
Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi	13
Veterans	12
Phi Sigma Delta	7

Alpha Chi's Are Top Standing in League

This week's wind-up, the sixth in Bowling competition is notably a boost to the Women Independents; increasing their margin from 8 to 9 points

The Women Independents copped all six points from the Pi Phi's to lengthen their lead of last week. The Men Independents with no increase in score dropped from second to fourth place which obviously is added encouragement to the Alpha Chi's, who have now reached second place. This coming week we look to a potent challenge from the Alpha Chi's who, evidently are eyeing top standing in the bowling league

The competitive picture is otherwise stationary. High singles this week were rolled by Roger Baker, 113, followed by George Thomas with a close 112. Third place went to Alison Cady and Joe Deakes, who rolled 111

High triples for the week were chalked up by Roger Baker Lambda Iota, with 312; 38 points lower than Russ Carpenter's score of last week. Virginia Hamel, Alpha Chi 308; Ed Sarnlaki Veteran, 314, and Joe Deakes, Phi Sig 301

The line-up for this week stands November 20, Alpha Chi Omega vs Women's Independents; Lambda Iota "Owls," vs. Veterans.

The Employment Office has many calls for girls to do light housework, tend children, etc. and boys are wanted to put up storm windows, rake leaves, or other similar work.

Anyone interested is asked to contact Miss Bayley at the office.

MILEHAM OF AGGIE COLLEGE RESIGNS

Dean Carrigan announced this week that Harry P. Mileham, Extension editor for the U.V.M. College of Agriculture for the last 10 years, is leaving Vermont on November 15. Mr. Mileham has accepted a position with the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Washington D. C. His new duties will be to promote the most effective use of popular publications as a means of furthering extension teaching through a program of improved planning, preparation, and distribution of the publication. Mrs Marie F. Lavallard assistant editor will carry on the editorial work until a new extension and research editor has been appointed.

Their subject was a discussion of the integration of work as pre-medical students and later work in medical school. This was the first of a series of similar meetings planned throughout the year.

As chairman of the Pre-Medical Association, Professor Rowell introduced the speakers and conducted the meeting. After the speeches, the pre-meds met with their advisors and discussed individual marks up to the present time and other subjects pertaining to the current academic year.

Dr. Grobel Speaks on Loopholes in Our Laws

Dr. William K. Grobel, Randolph, in his chapel sermon Tuesday, Nov. 14 took one of the most familiar passages in the Bible, the Sermon on the Mount, and translated the laws into modern meaning, showing how modern Pharisees make loopholes in our laws.

Doctor Grobel declared that each individual must be complete in his obedience to the law. The Christian law forbids idle oaths. As good Christians we must make our "yeas" mean only "yeas."

Although the law prohibits murder many commit murder with their thoughts and words. "Tell the law with authority and sanity," Doctor Grobel said in closing.

This is the first time Doctor Grobel, who is minister of the Congregational Church in Randolph, has been speaker at campus chapel services.

U.N.O. Faces Atom Bomb Control Problem

[illegible] 40 million Americans in congested cities ever night in one atomic bomb raid.

Representative Arends of Illinois declared "I am advised on the most competent authority that our scientists and technicians have now created atomic bombs of such prodigious and multiplied destructive power that the explosion which killed 150,000 humans and obliterated the City of Hiroshima was only a small firecracker by comparison."

These figures give a new urgency to the task of fashioning a durable peace. The new atomic weapons offer the great nations of the world the nearer certainty that each other's major cities, and civilian populations living within those cities, will be destroyed in the first hours of another war. Despite this pessimism, we must be optimists. We must have great hope and a great faith in the peoples of the world.

Tuesday, November 20, Professor Carroll spoke for the I.R. Club and led a discussion on the political aspects of the atmos bomb. It is through such discussions and using our newspapers that we may keep informed of the developments of the most vital problems facing the world today.

Infirmary Answer

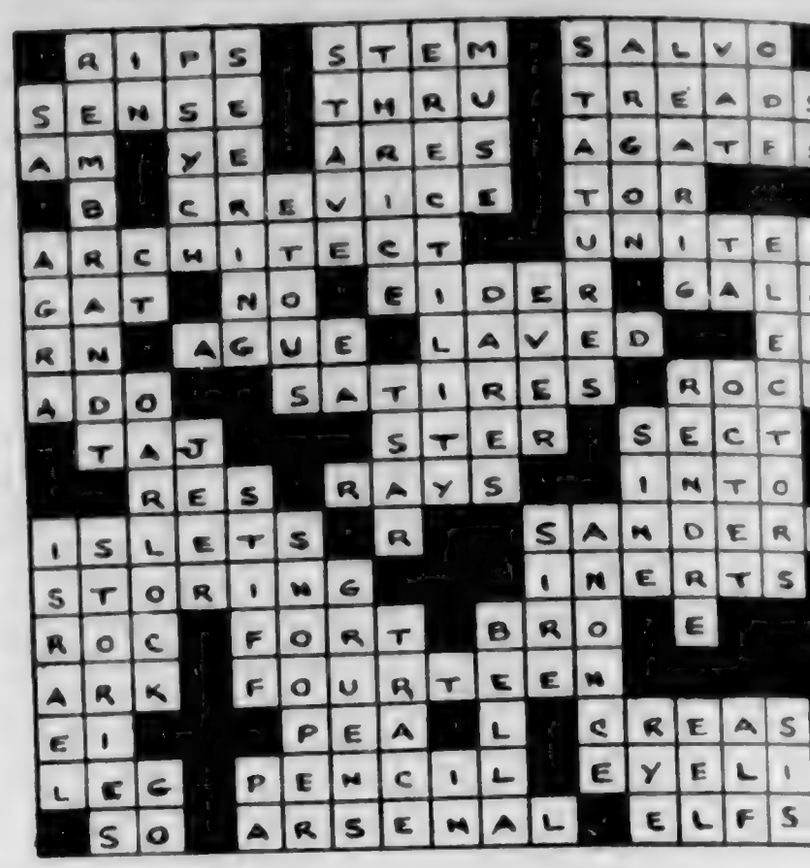
Complaint III "Our colds are given too casual attention."



Answer to III When you are utterly miserable with a cold you are sometimes apt to exaggerate your symptoms to yourself. You certainly should go to a doctor. Having done this, you should have some confidence in his decision as to the seriousness of your condition.

Complaint IV "Some students may develop pleurisy or pneumonia from colds."

Answer to IV This is true. In consulting the doctor you should (1) be careful to state exactly and fully how you feel, (2) carefully follow his instructions, (3) go back again if you are not satisfied, (4) go at once to the infirmary a second time, or call the doctor to the house, if there is even a slight indication that the cold is getting worse.

Administration Supports H. S.

DR. JOHN SCHOFF MILLIS
President of the University

With the presentation this week of the Honor System by the students, the following statements, summarizing the opinions of the administration, were collected.

Dr. John Scholl Millis, President of U. V. M., favors an Honor System in the University. His observations on the question of honor among students are embodied in the statement below.

"Complete academic honesty and integrity is a standard toward which every college and university strives. Dishonesty in college work is reprehensible because it short-circuits the educational process, weakens moral fiber and conditions the student to an ethical standard far below that which society expects and demands of those who receive the benefits of education.

A high standard of academic honesty is best achieved through the efforts of the students themselves. An ethical code which is adopted voluntarily and implemented by popular opinion is obviously better than any system of proctoring by a faculty. Such a system is more dignified and much more consistent with the aims and philosophy of education. An honor system begun and perpetuated by students is therefore a most desirable thing. On the other hand, an honor system is a difficult goal to achieve. It demands that the vast majority of students believe in it and actively desire it. It demands that each student support it even at the cost of reporting a friend, a fraternity brother, or a sorority sister.

I sincerely hope that the students of the University of Vermont will give earnest thought to the matter. The achievement of an honor system for the University would be a great step forward and evidence of the true worth of Student Government."

JOHN S. MILLIS, President

Miss Mary Jean Simpson, Dean of Women, in her statement to the Cynic, presents observations on the Honor System that are indicative of the feelings of the administration.

"There is much more to an Honor System than its adoption. It must rest on sound ethical principles and a respect for the highly concentrated attitudes under which the code is made. The individual cannot be lost to sight in the face of law, compromise, or what many more can do. The university, society or what reaches of college life it does or does not operate, should must be a great understanding of every attorney before the system is adopted and thereafter. It becomes the responsibility of every individual not only to be personally trustworthy, but to share in the responsibility for honorable conduct on the part of others.

In my judgment there is plenty of evidence that many students, possibly the majority, do not understand the plan but as Honor System men are they keenly interested about the adoption. An educational program must not only precede but go along with any honor system so that each student will become acquainted with the Honor Code and aware of the reasons for it. Also the individual must be helped to develop the attitudes of mind and patterns of behavior which are in accord with it so that he or she may live happily within its limitations and assume willingly the responsibility for helping to interpret and defend it.

This is not a program which will operate by wishful thinking nor by authoritarian pronouncements. It must come from an enlightened and sensitive student conscience. It is not too soon to begin to educate toward that end."

Honor System Challenges Student Maturity

Committee Lays Groundwork; Starts Ratification Campaign

Idea of an Honor System Arose Last Spring In Unorganized Student Discussion Groups

H S for U V M. This slogan promoting the support of the Honor System here, is a part of the campaign now being launched by the Honor System Committee. This campaign is the climax of a long series of discussions and planning by both the students and the faculty. Monday night H S for U V M. began in all dorms and sorority houses.

The first beginnings of interest in the Honor System were shown in the little unorganized groups of students who discussed the pros and cons of the system. While this was going on, the faculty, too, was displaying interest in the system. On March 1 Mr. Weaver, editor of the Washington and Lee Student, who worked under the Honor System at Virginia, addressed the Men's Faculty Club. He said that the basis for the success of the Honor System there was "the practice of the principle the least governed is the best governed." The March 7 issue of the Cynic added. "How childish and backward our self government seems as compared to this plan of obligation and non-enforcement of the law! Can't we lift ourselves up by the bootstraps and meet the requirements of duty and courtesy without endless restrictions?"

The first organized student discussion of the system took the form of a Bull Session on March 15 in the student lounge. Professors Wainwright and Towne, both of whom worked under the honor system at Williams College, described the success of the system there. Professor Wainwright feels that the "present system of proctoring at U V M. is very unsatisfactory because of the policed atmosphere. It puts a premium on unfair play and on students outwitting the professors if possible."

Recognizing the student interest in the Honor System, student government discussed the matter on March 29. Soon afterwards, a committee was appointed by Student Government to study and draw up a constitution for the Honor System. The committee consisted of David Hackett, chairman, Ann Hoss, Mary Thornton, McGill Annand, and Ben Burstein. This committee met and wrote letters to other colleges which have the Honor System asking them for information. Then it set to work on a constitution for U V M.

In the annual Founder's Day address, William Dailey, last year's president of the U V M. students, highly recommended

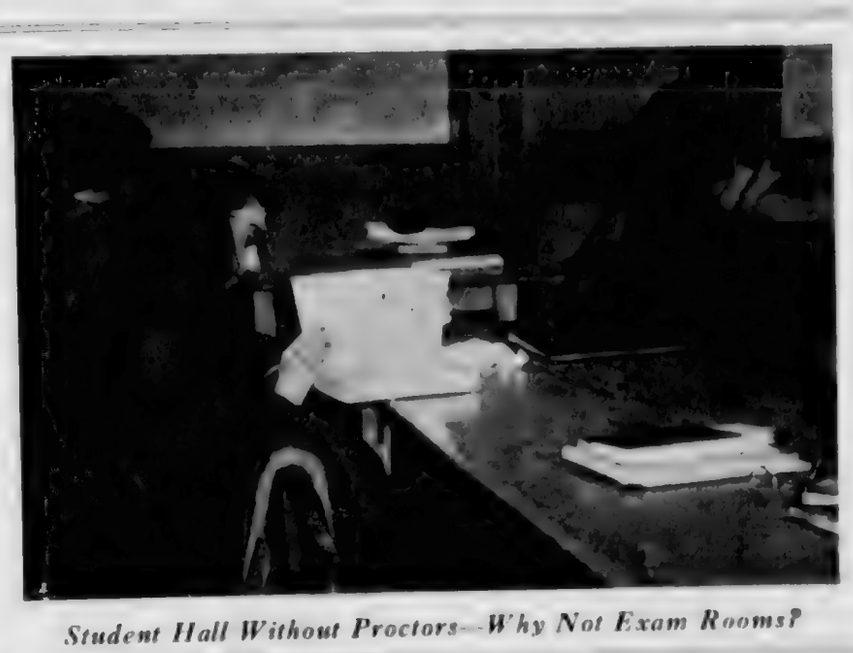
Community Concert Presents Fox Hole Ballet on Nov. 30



Grant Mouradoff Heads Troupe; Plays Overseas To American Soldiers

U V M. students and Burlingtonians will have the opportunity of seeing the Foxhole Ballet at the Memorial Auditorium on Friday night, November 30. This ballet is the second presentation of the Community Concert Series under the direction of Mrs. W. Raab.

The Foxhole Ballet is the first dance group of its kind to play to troops overseas and from this it takes its name. Grant Mouradoff heads the company with Anna Andrianova, Anitra Upton, and Virginia Richardson. They compose the original Foxhole Ballet that traveled overseas.

Reports from all over Europe tell of the warm reception given by fighting men to this troupe.

It is interesting to note that concerts are also being held in Windsor, Brattleboro, and Springfield, Vt. Members who have subscribed may attend any of the concerts in these cities. Some of the famous persons who have appeared in the past on the Community Concert Program are Dorothy Maynor, Nelson Eddy, Fritz Kreisler, Richard Crooks, and the Don Cossack Chorus.

It is not yet certain whether the dance will be held in the soda fountain and rotunda, or in the third floor lounge.

Hotel Van Ness to Quarter Veterans

Plans Recreation Room Dining Hall on Roof

In the near future the Hotel Van Ness, one of the two largest hotels in Burlington, will have a close affiliation with the campus. For through the cooperation of Mr. Frank A. Cantwell arrangements have been made to house 98 married veterans in the old hotel.

The roof garden will be turned into a recreation center and will also be used as a dining room. The top floor kitchen will be a cooperative community affair with facilities available for cooking.

President Millis, Professor Butterfield, and Mr. Page met with Mr. Frank A. Cantwell, owner-manager of the hotel, Monday afternoon and were thus able to solve one of the many problems concerning the housing of the returning veteran.

Denton Receives Award

At the annual convention of the American Legion held in Chicago, Cleveland E. Denton a U.V.M. Medical Student was awarded one of the ten national commander's scholarships. These scholarships, awarded annually since 1941 to sons of deceased war veterans, are worth $400 in cash with an additional $800 obtainable provided the student's scholastic average is maintained.

There will be a Student Convocation Thursday, November 29, at 10 a.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel. Mr. Charles Weaver will speak on "The Honor System at the University of Virginia."

Attendance is required of all students in the three academic colleges.

FACULTY MEMBERS SAY . . .

Honor System Can Work Here At U. V. M.

Professor Dykhuizen, Honor System mentor, believes that the Honor System will not only work on this campus but that it should be made an actuality. Philosopher, thinker, professor, and friend of the student, Dr. Dykhuizen feels personal integrity among the student body is a reality.

In a recent interview to a Cynic reporter, Professor Dykhuizen declared, "It has always impressed me as strange that honor among students should be a debatable issue. Almost every other type of organization assumes that the people that belong to it are persons who practice the ordinary rules of honesty, and expels from its membership those who fail to measure up to the accepted standard. The directors of a bank, a business or a library assume that the people whom they hire are people to be trusted and oust without ceremony anyone who betrays this trust. That a university administration (including its faculty) should proceed on the assumption that the average college student is not to be trusted is a serious indictment of American college students, an indictment which unhappily is not without grounds. An Honor System represents a challenge to the student body to cut the grounds on which the indictment rests."

Professor Dykhuizen stated that honor systems frequently fail because students will not report cases of dishonesty on the part of their friends. According to Professor Dykhuizen it is understandable that an individual should want to be loyal to a fellow student, however, a loyalty which condones wrong doing and, in so doing, helps to undermine a noble endeavor on the part of others is morally bad.

Dr. Dykhuizen said, "I cannot imagine failure to report dishonesty on a football field. If a quarterback or end were discovered revealing his teams signals to an opponent, loyalty to other members of the team would lead the discoverer to expose the act. Why doesn't

Time to Grow Up

The opening of the Honor System campaign pointed out the reluctance on the part of the student body to shoulder complete and self-appointed responsibility. There is even some lack of maturity evident in the objection those students made to Article III, Section 1 of the Honor System Constitution, which states that students will have to investigate and possibly report violations of the system.

The entire crux of the Honor System—student enforcement seems to have been subordinated to a form of so-called good fellowship or misplaced loyalty. Remarks such as "I saw a girl cheating, but after all, I wouldn't dream of reporting her," are prevalent. Others say that they cannot personally accept the responsibility of having a fellow student expelled from the campus on a conviction of academic dishonesty. They contend that their consciences would bother them for the rest of their lives. Yet these same students are perfectly willing to allow a person to continue cheating throughout his college life and to chisel out a career in the world – a career that has a foundation as rotten as the decomposed vitamins collected by the "Used Vitamins Convoy Service" of Burlington. Is this maturity? Can this be called even so little as a fifty-second cousin to that all-important intangible labeled "honor"? It can be termed nothing less than a type of personal weakness.

The Honor System is a chance for complete self-government. It has arisen from the students for the purpose of giving the students complete freedom during exams. It will, since it is entirely a student matter, have to be enforced by the students. Why should we throw away our chance to prove ourselves capable of governing ourselves?

TOPTICS

By Joan R. Levin

Tuesday morning, 10 o'clock chapel time, and in the chapel—"Praise Him Above ye Heavenly Host"—the notes split and roared and smooth—"Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

I was in the chapel. I looked out across the rows of students. I felt uncomfortable. I am not a member of this congregation, I realized. I am a visitor here.

Visiting is nice. It's pleasant and informative and good. But belonging is much nicer, for in addition to being all these things, it gives to each individual a special privilege, a high obligation, and a heart-filling pride. Belonging is much nicer.

I know a different doxology. It's just as beautiful, just as meaningful, and far more embracing. The music is the same, and it goes like this:

"From all that dwell below the skies,
Let words of Love and Peace arise,
Let joyful songs be sung
Through every land by every tongue."

All—that's the word. That's the keynote. That's you and me and every man of every belief. That's Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Hindus, Mohammedans. That's every human being. That's belonging.

I looked out across the rows, and I thought—"if our chapel could be a monument only of beauty and love and comfort and inspiration—wouldn't that be enough? If it could substitute for denominational and sectarian religion the idea of the religious instinct as inherent in all human nature; if it could have upon its altar only a basket of flowers, symbolic of God's greatness, and a burning candle, symbolic of man's highest hopes and aspirations—wouldn't that be enough? If it could regard all religions as contributions to the achievement of ultimate and universal truth, giving deference to none, but welcome to all—wouldn't that be enough?"

I thought and I pondered. But thought is only a base and a groundwork. It must be followed by purposeful discussion and action, and unless it is, mere contemplation is useless and in vain. And so I ask for your ideas and your suggestions. What about a non-denominational, non-sectarian Ira Allen Chapel? Would you support it? Would you attend it?

Our chapel is not affiliated with any sect. It is a college chapel in the Christian tradition. And what is the Christian tradition? Jesus said: "Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed by Thy Name." He marked no divisions. He prayed to one God. Can't we?

Picture of the Week

"Love Letters." Flynn, November 25-28. Hollywood pops up again with another of those psychological thrillers. Starring Jennifer Jones in the role of an amnesia victim, the plot deals with her attempts to recapture her past. The excitement and suspense of the plot, plus the excellent performances of Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten, all add to making "Love Letters" a very worthwhile picture.

In Case You Didn't See Them

"Our Vines Have Tender Grapes." Flynn, November 22-24. Here is an unusual picture, which although somewhat enjoyable, fell far short of being the great movie it could have been. Perhaps it was the miscasting of Edward G. Robinson as a Wisconsin farmer, or the plot in general—all we know is that Hollywood advertising let us in for an awful letdown.

"Shady Lady," Strong, November 25-28. Why is it that all singers who take dramatic lessons think they have to put that particular talent to use? Starring Ginny Simms and Charles Coburn, this is a picture for your "better forgotten" list.

Calendar

FLYNN—Nov. 25-28: "Love Letters," Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten.
Nov. 29-Dec. 1: "Her Highness and the Bellboy," starring Heddy LaMarr, Robert Walker and June Allyson.
Dec. 2-5: "Fallen Angels," starring Alice Faye and Dana Andrews.

YAH TA TA . . .

by Carolyn Aronson

On Monday morning as the cold dawn broke and conservative souls who had returned on the afternoon tram were peacefully dreaming of drum sticks, pumpkin pie and Tums, other frantic coeds and hardy vets played gin rummy, pestered the porter, and cursed the milk train. Some stalwart sophomores slept straight through but the less hardy stopped off for refreshments at Rutland. Cows around there may be contented but Jo Howard wasn't after sampling one cup of Daisy's strictly pasteurized, Grade A. Some had hair-raising tales to tell of night life in the big cities . . . . and then there are we Vermonters.

Over the holidays Pat McGinnis bagged a deer. Elsie Bruce and Wanda Hopkinson returned from vacation sporting diamonds on the third finger, left hand.

From an unimpeachable unquotable source we have it that the 2,000 veterans entering in January will be billeted in fourth floor Waterman, the Carnegie room and the stacks at the Billings Library. If you can't find Plato, maybe a private will turn up in the 92 hundreds. An actual survey shows three-fourths of the men will be taking Textiles and Home Nursing.

Full speed ahead on our biggest peacetime job

TODAY, conveyors like this [illegible] Western Electric are carrying thousands of new telephones for the Bell System.

But it takes far more than just telephones to provide service. It takes cable, central office equipment and many other complex items that cannot be produced and fitted into the telephone system overnight. On these things, too, production is steadily increasing.

Western Electric, supply unit of the Bell System, is hard at work on the biggest peacetime job in its history. With home and home games with Gremer Field, previously listed as "pending," definitely added to its schedule, Coach "Fuzzy" Evans announced a 13 game card for Vermont's cagers during the 1945-46 season.

Included on the card are U.V.M.'s state rivals, Middlebury, Norwich, and St. Michael's and such perennial power houses as Massachusetts State and Clarkson Tech. Back for a return appearance is the Plattsburg Army Air Force, a team whose color and ability made quite an impression with local fans last season. The Bombers help the Green and Gold get the season started with a bang on December 1, at the Memorial Auditorium.

In releasing the schedule Coach Evans stated there is still a possibility of a game being booked for February 9. The home game with St. Michael's will be played at 3:30 p.m., and will be an added attraction to the annual Kake Walk.

Your reporter had the good fortune to be on the 50 yard line at the Dartmouth-Cornell football classic. Allen Deckdebrun, Cornell's passing sensation, clinched the tilt with a brilliant 45-yard heave to fleet Hillary Chollett. Deckdebrun's pass was all the more remarkable in that the ball was very wet and slippery. The entire field was covered by a first half snowstorm.

Chollet also thrilled with a 63-yard gallop to set up the Big Red's first score. Albrecht revived Dartmouth's hopes by sprinting 52 yards to set up the Indians' final touchdown, time ran out on the Big Green, and Cornell clung to a hard fought 20-13 win.

Elsewhere Army stamped itself as one of the great teams of all time by crushing a strong Pennsylvania team 61-0. St. Mary's and Holy Cross saw their dreams of an unbeaten season end in stunning losses to U.C.L.A. and Temple respectively.

Ted Battles came through with seven winners in ten contests last week while this department raised its average with eight out of ten.

Bill Watt, of the chemistry department, takes over the "guest experts'" duties this week.

Prof. Dean's Latest Novel is Slated For Radio Production

[illegible] a writing career began [illegible] at the college [illegible] Enrollment [illegible] was considered [illegible] the time [illegible] the position of [illegible] Chief. The second [illegible] as the [illegible] and takes [illegible] Connecticut [illegible] published [illegible] in 1933 he edited the Lake Champlain Region for about a year. After that he became a free lance writer, delving into history books, old newspapers and various publications carrying information about the country of his ancestors, namely Vermont and other parts of New England—and sold many stories about the Green Mountain State. Dean's family settled in Vermont immediately after the Revolutionary War and the early history of famous men of that period are of paramount interest to him.

Novels Concern History

His first novel was a biography written about John Stark, a Revolutionary hero and general who figured in the struggle with the French and Indians at Crown Point Rangers, Inc., and who later saved the day for the Americans in the victorious Battle of Bennington. "Stark of the North Country" took between [illegible] and relating many facts, in such a manner that the reader is never conscious of the book being [illegible] fact after fact from line to line with the adventurous plot.

Lucas Paxton, the character referred to as "Old Wolf," is a fighting Connecticut Yankee whose life is a long series of adventures. His campaigns with the Colonial Rangers during the French and Indian War and his leadership as one of Washington's devoted subordinates in the Revolutionary War were supplemented by his pioneering spirit which carried him from Connecticut to the Mississippi country and from the Great Lakes to Florida. His boundless knowledge of Indian customs, ways of warfare and fighting [illegible] his capture, ships, [illegible] and fighting.

In writing these biographies a great deal of research was done to assure absolute correctness in minor details. The author [illegible] the manner of [illegible] a friend and the kind of food eaten [illegible] what is not found in the history book [illegible] historians regarded these matters as unessential. Dean said that he could not begin to enumerate the endless [illegible] he had happened upon such information from very old inhabitants of a small town to large libraries.

The Novel Reaches Radio

His third novel, "Green Mountain Boy Seth Warner" has just gone into its second printing and Dean received word recently from the publishers that a radio production of the book will be given in the immediate future over the Chicago Station WBBM under the direction of the Board of Education at Chicago Schools. This novel is another exciting story of a Revolutionary officer, about battles and heroic fight for independence. Seth Warner was a more dependable leader than Ethan Allen, but a less colorful character for this reason not many people realize his greatness. No hero is more deserving of praise, and this is the first time that he has received the recognition time has failed to give him.

Dean's most recent novel, "I Become a Ranger" strays away from his biograph-

the Honor System. He cited many examples of the successes of the Honor System at other schools. He added that we are now college students and that "one of the pre-requisites of maturing is the willingness to accept responsibility." The Honor System not only develops this but demands it.

Professor Dykhuizen, who was always highly in favor of the Honor System, held a meeting of some 20 students at his house on May 12. There, the students heard Mr. Weaver tell about the Honor System at Virginia. He said that "the 'honor spirit' is the most moving force in student activity in Virginia." He, too, highly recommended its adoption on the U.V.M. campus.

This year, the Honor System committee has finished the Constitution and is presenting it to the students. This campaign is now in progress. It is now up to the students to decide for themselves whether they want the privileges gained by the Honor System and whether they are mature enough to shoulder the responsibilities of the system.

Passes which will admit students to all intercollegiate athletic contests during the college year 1945-46 will be issued to all students who have paid the activity fee. These tickets will be given out at the main entrance of Waterman on Thursday and Friday, November 29 and 30, between the hours 12.00 p.m. to 1.30 p.m.

FACULTY STAND ON HONOR SYSTEM

the same code apply in cases of dishonesty on campus life."

At Williams College

Professor Wainwright, who experienced the Honor System at Williams College, expressed his views on it at last year's Faculty-Student Bull Session. His opinion on its application is:

I should like to see an Honor System adopted at U.V.M. provided that it has the wholehearted and active support of the students; a bare majority in favor of it will not suffice to make it work. The faculty will, without doubt, cooperate if they feel that campus sentiment endorses it.

Opposition to this system is found chiefly among two groups: (1) Those who, having no confidence in human nature, insist on the need of a police force, and (2) those who, holding that honor is indivisible, consider it absurd to limit it to specific activities. One can ask the pessimists of the first group whether they are not willing to permit an experiment which, if successful, would eliminate the atmosphere of surveillance in the examination room and has certainly brought satisfactory results at some institutions—at Williams, for instance, where examinations have been conducted under an Honor System for approximately 50 years. As regards the Utopians of the second group, one can respect their idealism and admit their theoretical soundness with the reservation that we had better inch towards our goal here.

I repeat then that I am in favor of introducing an Honor System here as applied to examinations. The presence of proctors is dispensed with but, if the Williams procedure is followed, the ensuing statement must be signed to make any examination or other work written on paper in the classroom valid: I have neither given nor received aid in this examination.

Since any system must have teeth, I shall quote from a recent issue of the Williams College Bulletin to show how the Honor System there is provided with them: "All cases of suspected fraud are dealt with by a committee of ten students including four seniors, three juniors, two sophomores, and one freshman. This committee has the power to decide on the question of guilt and to recommend to the faculty the penalty of dismissal from college in the case of senior, junior or sophomore, and of suspension in the case of a freshman."

At Athletic Board of Control consisting of four members was elected. These members are Vice Secretary Bart Barry, Hal Mackenzie and Doug Parizeau as a member from the Executive Committee.

A discussion was held on Kake Walk finances. A suggestion was made that bids for Kake Walk be submitted to the accounting office the same as other student organizations. Gene Hamilton, financial director, spoke against having an additional member on the Kake Walk Committee as a member of the Finance Committee, but for using the accounting office in payment of bills. A suggestion was made to use a bank instead of the accounting office. Doug Parizeau made the motion that "all finances of Kake Walk shall be taken care of through the accounting office with the provision that this office shall receive and pay all bills; this does not in any way restrict the use of funds by Kake Walk directors." This motion was passed unanimously. This last provision of this motion means that the directors shall decide how the surplus funds shall be used.

The old tradition of Junior Week was brought before Student Government to be revived. It usually takes place the first week in May. A motion was made and carried that the junior members of Student Government form a steering committee to hold a junior class meeting for electing committees to plan Junior Week.

A motion was made and passed that the priority previously in use concerning the use of the school's station wagon still be kept. This means that the ski team is first, other Outing Club trips second, and other organizations third. Originally it was money from the Outing Club that bought the station wagon.

Dr. Long, Political Science Professor Returns After MG Service on Saipan

"Daddy" Long Was Active Supporter of Campus Sings, Caroling; May Revive These Activities

This week Lieutenant Long, familiarly known as "Daddy Long" to the students, returned to our campus, and with his arrival memories of Campus Sings, Christmas Caroling, and Political Science classes were awakened in the minds of many seniors.

Leaving Vermont in January, 1943, Professor Long went to the Columbia School of Military Government, where he studied Japanese as well as other subjects pertinent to the formation of Military Governments. After studying at Columbia he was sent to Washington for a six-week course and then sent to the Pacific with his final destination Saipan, and his work that of helping to establish a Military Government on that island.

The first few months the Military Government worked under emergency conditions for the actual defeat of the Japanese was still in the future, and the natives of the island having been terrorized were afraid to come out of their caves and hiding places. The purpose of the Military Government was to restore the people to as normal as possible life under invasion conditions so that they could govern themselves.

Lieutenant Long also served as defense lawyer of those people who got in difficulty with the Military Government. Here he came in contact with the natives of the island as well as with the Japanese.

To illustrate the conditions under which the men of the Military Government worked and lived the following episodes are cited. Lieutenant Long went into Saipan with the First Marine Divi-

Newman Club Hears Bishop Edw. Ryan

Stresses Need of God And Religion in Life

His Excellency, Edward F. Ryan, Bishop of Burlington, met the Newman Club for the first time in the Student Lounge, Thursday evening, November 29. Speaking of the need of God and the essential place of religion in an individual life, in a home, community, and the world, Bishop Ryan quoted generously from Washington, Hoover, Lippman, Horace Mann, Newman, and the Bible. He closed his address with an earnest plea for courageous faith.

Mrs. Quinlan and Mrs. Carrigan presided over a punch bowl of ginger ale and ice cream while the social committee under Paula Whelan, '47, served tea cakes. In the short business meeting which preceded the reception, Mary Mitiguy, '47, program chairman, announced that Father John Dempsey, National Chaplain of Newman Clubs, will speak at the January meeting.

The Newman Club is cooperating with the National Catholic Welfare Conference in collecting canned goods for starving Europeans. A campaign is in progress this week, December 3-8, to have everyone either place a tin can of food in the box in the main lobby of Waterman, or if they can't get down town, give the money to a member of the executive committee. The food will be distributed without regard to race or religion.

DR. FELIKS GROSS UNDERGROUND AGENT SPEAKS ON PEACE

"The Central Eastern European Battlefield at Peace" was the topic of a talk by Feliks Gross, former Polish lawyer and underground worker, at a meeting of the International Relations Club on Tuesday evening, December 4, in the student lounge.

Gross, who was editor of the newspaper New Europe escaped to this country in 1941 by going through Russia and Japan as the Nazis invaded his country. He stayed in this country as a representative of the Polish underground and member of the Polish Labor Delegation, working for the eventual liberation of his oppressed country as well as the other countries of Europe that were occupied by the Germans. Here in the United States and Canada he represented Poland at conferences of the International Labor Organization and the United Nations Rehabilitation and Relief Association.

These former activities have only climaxed but not concluded an already picturesque career. Professor Gross was born in Cracow, Poland in 1906 and received an extensive education leading to the degree of Doctor of Law at the University of Cracow in 1930. This led to his receiving a Carnegie Fellowship for study in Paris. In 1939 he lectured at the London School of Economics and is today a professor of regional studies at New York University.

YWCA MEMBERS HOLD RURAL DEPUTATIONS

From eight to 80 was the age group that lent gaiety to the Saturday night square dance in Ripton, where four YW members held their first deputation of the year. Going into two towns with no weekly church service, the group planned a Sunday worship service to climax the week-end at Ripton and South Lincoln.

Liz Concklin '47, and Lee Zoll '47, planned their Saturday night "shindig" in the schoolhouse, where some 65 people attended the square dancing.

Visiting the townspeople Sunday morning, Joe Mele '49, Marion Patterson '47, Ruth Post '47, and Betty Reid, held

Honor System Opposition Gains Impetus, H. S. Committee Plans Student Forum

Faculty-Student Debate Is Scheduled to Clear Campus H. S. Arguments

Groups against the Honor System will come to the fore next Wednesday evening, December 12, at 8:00 p.m., in the student lounge, when the Honor System Committee will sponsor a Student-Faculty Discussion. This meeting is designed to acquaint those who are still in doubt about the Honor System with its proposed installation at U.V.M. Several points of the Constitution will be handed out at this meeting.

While the Honor System campaign runs through the third week, the debate, which was active in the soda fountain last week, is taking a rather calmer trend. The opposition, led by John Pappas, Jim Shadvac and other veterans established the soda fountain and the student lounge as the headquarters for "No H.S." campaign. Many hours were spent in discussing the pros and cons of the system. As the anti-honor system campaign got well under way, posters in the hall were marked up and even reversed.

Active complaints were made to the committee and the Cynic about the lack of the Opposition's publicity. Protesting that the Cynic's statements were biased, the Opposition sought publicity of its own. It adopted a slogan question "Would you report a friend?"

The Student-Faculty Bull Session will represent the first organized meeting where any interested members of either side will be free to discuss the problem. Many members of the Faculty will express their views and the students are expected to spark the discussion.

Midd Mortar Board Visits Vt. Chapter

The Mortar Board chapter of Middlebury came to Burlington last Sunday to confer with Akraia chapter on campus problems and Mortar Board projects. The two groups of seniors met at Grassmount with Dean Simpson and advisors Professor Rowell, Professor Dykhuizen and Mrs. A. E. Nuquist. The afternoon's discussion revolved around the drinking rule, fraternities and sororities, honor system, and the Mortar Board traditions at both colleges.

Mortar Board has a two-fold project for the year, and hopes to complete payment on the public address system installed in the chapel by last year's Akraia chapter as well as purchase a phonograph for the English department.

World War I Ace Arrives Tomorrow

STUDENT UNION TO GIVE PARTY TONIGHT

Departing from the usual order of business, Student Union will hold a Christmas party this evening in the Ira Allen Chapel in place of its customary meeting. Attendance is required of all University women.

There will be a junior class meeting Wednesday, December 5, at 7.30 p.m., in Room 239, Waterman. This is an important meeting for the purpose of planning Junior Week and all juniors are urged to attend.

Co-ed Bags Deer, Dorm Feasts

"We had been out an hour when I saw it. It was jumping and I had to shoot three times to bring it down." Pat McGinnis, a freshman co-ed, used these words to describe her recent hunting expedition in which she bagged a seven-point, 140-pound buck.

Pat, who comes from Brattleboro, went hunting with her father in Townshend the week-end before Thanksgiving. Early Sunday morning while the rest of the Vermont co-eds were dreaming of turkey to come, she captured the game for the McGinnis Thanksgiving.

Pat, who comes from a family of deer hunting enthusiasts, has been hunting for five years. This is the third deer she has shot with her .250-3000 Savage rifle. Her largest prize was a 156-pounder two years ago. Her father failed to keep up his record of a deer every year but her grandfather, W. W. Lucier, who was hunting with them in Townshend, bagged one.

Deer-hunting, is my favorite sport along with fishing," Pat said decisively. She goes in for brook fishing.

The girls at Sanders, where Pat lives, feasted on the venison which the successful deer hunter brought back with her to uphold her "deer tale." She says the horns will be kept for all-time evidence that a co-ed can get her deer.

For The Last Full Measure . . .

December 7 is merely a date, one infinitesimal member of a multitude of milestones in human affairs. Sunday, December 7, 1941, gives to this date lifted by the Japanese from obscurity to designate a day of infamy, the significance of a national and world crisis. The public consciousness of its meaning has been heightened by "Remember Pearl Harbor" and the recent probe, with a dedication to preserving peace in clearing the flotsam of the war.

We prefer to forget Pearl Harbor in order to remember the 2,400 men who from December 7 on were plunged into the grimmest holocaust in history. U. V. M. students and alumni were among the "so few" to whom we, who were in the privileged halls of a university, owe more than we can repay. U.V.M. will never forget this roster of men whose names are now publicly recorded on the Waterman walls.

We can never repay the 67 men who paid the ultimate price in war. To the gold star men of the University we therefore dedicate this issue.

Editor's Comment . . .

The latest threat to U. V. M. security and individual liberty is the Honor System.

[illegible] was reached last week by several students after a two-day debate between the H.S. committee and its opponents. This statement is not political [illegible] the thought of the large body of veterans and students who launched a counter-attack against the Honor System, but it is the [illegible] of some dissenters who have brought H.S. almost to the brink of a catastrophe. It clearly demonstrates the irreconcilable poles of thought on campus today. The above argument is one which cannot be accepted by any Vermont student, pro or con H.S. Other objections are based, it seems to us, on a narrow-minded conception of society in general and U.V.M. society in particular.

In this issue of the Cynic there is a letter which summarizes some of the arguments of the opposition. In particular, the anonymities challenge Cynic policy in a fashion which prompts us to define for the benefit of these uninitiated writers, the newspaper's position. The Cynic is neither conservative pro H.S., nor slightly pink in the news. Editorial comment is confined to this page. The Honor System Committee did not attempt to railroad H.S. through the student body via the Cynic. Last week's issue consisted of news plus the total opinion of authorities to which no opposing forces added a voice. The more vociferous of the H.S. objectors demanded to have a voice in the college paper but when asked to contribute opinions declined with a timidity which leaves Anonymous gentlemen 1 and 2 quite alone in their protests.

The objections the opposition raises concerning the Honor System itself are well-founded and well-argued but it is evident that the over-all benefits of the system are overlooked while particulars are singled out for criticism. No system is perfect. The fact that students will not report others, that groups will cheat, and that police are prevalent everywhere are not arguments against an honor system. Individuals correct each other in every society, report misdemeanors and restrict unlawful activity. This is without aid of police and calls for citizenship that places emphasis on a more personal type of government. In a small group, such as U.V.M., individual responsibility can and must be developed. The only hope for world peace and progress today is through individual acceptance of responsibility and an active spirit of cooperation.

There is no honest system where dishonor is accepted nor is there an easy way to stamp out dishonor. The Honor System calls for adult thinking. Are we men and women enough to live up to it?

Letters to the Editor . . .

To the Editor of the CYNIC

Your recent drive for the Honor System seems to me to be ill-advised. Does the student body want an Honor System and if so do they know what such a system entails. I would like to question your editorial policy on this system.

First: The student body has not voted on the Honor System nor indicated an interest in it but the committee has launched it upon the students in an effort to "put something over on us." Is it wise to adopt as a newspaper policy something which is a campaign of a few students and reluctantly accepted by the majority?

Second: Why is it necessary to get rid of proctors? The picture in last week's CYNIC lauds the proctorless study halls with an effort to further proctorless exam rooms. Why? We have police in our government and find them necessary.

Third: Is the student body adult enough for the Honor System? We think not. The general attitude is that it is too tough to report a friend. Enthused by the high ideals of the Honor System committee the poor freshmen insist that they would report their friends. Actually they wouldn't put the ideal into practice. The committee is making hypocrites of us all.

Fourth: A few individuals are working for this Honor System and using it politically. Who will judge cases of breach of honor? The Student Court, a political body at best, composed of too many students and too many fraternities and sororities. This form of self-government will deteriorate into a factional conflict without the objective judgment of the faculty intervening.

Fifth: The Honor System constitution is irrelevant and a thorough waste of time. Who deems it necessary to have honor legislated? The constitution certainly adds red tape to the issue.

These are only a few of at least 20 objections we have to the system. We think, on the evidence of the committee's railroading tactics, that the system is entirely political and not at all those "high ideals."

Emphatically,
ANONYMOUS 1,
ANONYMOUS 2.

Dear Editor:

If we as students regard ourselves as grown-up men and women and individuals of high moral standing, then there is no apparent reason why the University of Vermont could not adopt the honor system and have it work successfully by its own accord.

College is certainly not the place for immature youth. When one enrolls for a college education the person is supposed to have passed the adolescent high-school age. At the age when an average student starts a college career, he should be able to make up his own mind, use sound judgment in making decisions, determine readily between right and wrong, and in general be able to look out for himself along both social and academic lines without side assistance on behalf of professors or other students.

If we as students can claim these qualities as representative of ourselves then we must surely be able to say that we also possess honor. If any of us claim to possess maturity and discrimination but hesitate when it comes to question of honor, we are sadly lacking in an essential virtue and should not even be in the University.

Surely if we are students with a mature human outlook, the honor system at U. V. M. could be a realization. If this system could work, it would prove the fact that U. V. M. students possess high moral standards and are capable of complying to the system's regulations, but on the other hand, if the honor system after a trial period should fail . . . well the deduction is obvious. By not being able to cooperate under the system we would be showing ourselves up as gum-chewing teen-agers who should be back in high school and our University could not possibly be able to live up to the Honor Code which it holds as its highest standard . . . "the desirable kind of discipline is the kind that comes from within . . . from one's own will, not from outside authority."

NANCY AHERN.

To the Editor of the CYNIC

We want to express our agreement with last week's Toptics column upon the uniting of all groups on campus in a non-sectarian chapel service. We were most concerned during the Parley that our good friend, Rabbi Stern, could not join in any of the prayers offered at Vespers, and that Father Ahern was not able to attend at all. It seems to us that, especially at such a time when brotherhood was stressed particularly, we should have had a service that embraced all faiths. Last Tuesday's chapel marked the first step in that direction, and we hope that in the future all students of U. V. M. will be able to attend as members of a united University congregation.

Problems of A Painter's Model

Colburn Liquidates Student

One of the paintings done during the summer by Francis Colburn, instructor in painting, is included in the annual exhibition of contemporary American art at the Whitney Museum in New York, on the invitation of the museum director. The show lasts through January 10.

When asked about the painting, Mr. Colburn declared that it has had a strange history indeed, and one which might startle the Whitney Museum. To begin with, the picture, a large oil called "Lonely Places," was a portrait of a rather sad-eyed girl in a slightly melancholy setting. The model was "Eke" Bruce. In her lap she held a glass bell full of stuffed birds.

"If you must know the truth," said Mr. Colburn, "I came upon the picture unexpectedly one day and realized that a young girl had no place in the composition, so I removed Miss Bruce with benzene." A new and enlarged version of the glass bell full of birds took her place, said the painter.

"I suppose," continued Mr. Colburn, "the moral of all this is never come upon one of your own pictures unexpectedly. Not two weeks after completing the new version I again came upon it, with a fresh eye, and took a violent dislike to the birds. So they were removed, also with benzene. Thus the painting became just a landscape. I guess I'd better not look at it again. Or I'd better misplace the benzene."

Edward Alden Jewell, critic of the New York Times, liked the painting, classified it as surrealist, and Miss Bruce at the present writing seems none the worse for having been rubbed out.

Ballet's Comedy Repertoire Amuses Large Crowd

Grant Mouradoff

Betty Burge

Half-packed suitcases—exquisite costumes amidst ballet shoes, Kleenex, and grease paint—skews of autograph hounds standing fascinated before the door—these were scenes of backstage Memorial Auditorium after the completion of the Lenkoic Ballet.

Even in hurried moments, each of the dancers found time to tell about the organization of the ballet. "Each of us was chosen from those who auditioned for the ballet," said petite Sonia Woicikovska, daughter of a famous Polish ballet dancer and director. "We had a few months in which to practice, before leaving for overseas in November, 1944."

Rosa Rollard, substituting for Tatiana Semenova, who was ill, has been overseas for three years on entertainment tours. A member of the Metropolitan Opera Company she has been doing classical ballet in New York.

Brown-eyed Grant Mouradoff, who was choreographer of "9 A.M." danced by Betty Burge, is a Metropolitan Opera star. His first summer in America was spent near Rutland, Vt.

One of the most amusing things that has happened to "Ginny" Richardson in ballet numbers was in her overseas version of "My Date." One of the soldiers would usually be taken for the closing embrace, and the response was "terrific."

A North Carolinian, Betty Burge has been dancing since she was six years old. Her latest performance was in Song of Norway.

U.V.M. Hoopsters Take Winooski Vets 48-34

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

Coach Fuzzy Evans' undefeated and untied warriors meet their stiffest opposition of young season, Tuesday, December 11, when they collide with powerful Clarkson Tech at Memorial Auditorium. Clarkson, always a tough nut to crack, will find Vermont squad long on spirit but short on experience.

Coach Evans will probably stick with the same lineup that turned back the Winooski V. F. W. five last week-end. This aggregation has Bob Jake and Ken Pierce at the forwards, lean Ralph Becker at center, and the smooth working Julian Levine and Howie Stein at the guard posts

Not much is known about the Clarkson lineup. Like Vermont, Tech abandoned all intercollegiate sports during the war. They, too, will be training their sights on the long hard comeback trail.

One thing is certain, however, a bitter struggle should result with the breaks (or lakes) determining the winner.

Vermont's first post-war basketball team came through with flying colors in its initial test Saturday evening. This is particularly pleasing since Coach "Fuzzy" Evans has stated his biggest fears were that the "squad may not be 'ready' during the early games."

The opposition offered by the Winooski Vets was probably far inferior to what will be expected later on, but Evans has a knack of having a powerhouse come February. Middlebury, St. Michael's and Norwich can attest to that. In each of his three previous years as head coach Fuzzy has guided the squad to a state title. This season his chances of making it four straight seem excellent. St. Michael's considered in pre-season ratings as the "team to beat" was barely able to beat the same Winooski team, 38-36.

Bob Jake, playing with an injured ankle and still garnering 19 points, was nothing short of sensational. Perhaps it's a bit early to cast judgment on the ex-Northwestern star, but potentially he seems ready to take his place with Larry Killick, Hank Beauchemin, Paul Corley, and Norm Beaulieu—great point makers of past U.V.M. teams.

The squad as a whole, while ragged in spots, showed something which could make a click—teamwork.. Often during the game chances for possible shots were passed up when the ball was relayed to others with a better shot at the net.

The only dark side to Saturday's game was the smoking done by some thoughtless but well-meaning fans during the game. The players, many making their collegiate debuts, had a tough enough job without having to wade through a smoke screen to get a shot at the basket. More important is the danger of a fire getting started and possible serious injury or death resulting. What say? Let's save those cigarettes for intermission and after the game.

Squad Shines In Opener, Shows Team Work

Paced by a big Bob Jake's 19 points, Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' first post war basketball squad opened the 1945-46 season with a smashing 48-34 triumph over the John Ryan Post Veterans of Foreign Wars at Memorial Auditorium Saturday evening. Some 600 fans saw the Cats jump into a 23-7 half-time advantage and then coast home to an easy win over a foe which never gave up fighting.

The Winooski boys, who had held St. Michael's to a close 38-36 decision the evening before, seemed unable to cope with Jake, a former Northwestern ace. Time after time the lanky Vermont forward pierced the vets zone defense for one-hand "lay-ups" and off-balance "bucket" shots.

Jake Plays Fine Game

Jake's performance became all the more remarkable when it was disclosed he was playing on a tightly taped ankle.

Helping Jake to put the Green and Gold in the unbeaten class were Ken Pierce with 12 points and Ralph Becker with 10 counters. "Julie" Levine contributed an outstanding floor game, while Vic Manjoney impressed with his scrap and fight

For a few fleeting in the last half Vermont's early lead appeared in danger, as Lynch, vet star with 12 points and "Poco" Larivee suddenly caught fire. The Green and Gold recovered their composture after a brief time out and came back to win going away

Winooski Fills in for Plattsburg

The Winooski aggregation had been signed as last-minute substitute for the Plattsburg Army Air Force, which was forced to cancel all remaining games. A few hours before game time orders came for all army personnel to leave Plattsburg for an undisclosed destination.

First Half

Both sides muffed numerous scoring opportunities as the game got underway. Then in a melee under the Winooski basket, tall Ralph Becker tapped in a follow-up for the first points of the new season. Jake dropped in a one hander from the corner seconds later and Vermont led 4-0. At this point Dick Clairmont converted a foul shot for the first Vet score.

Julie Levine quickly matched this with a foul of his own and put the Cats ahead 7-1 as he registered on a followup. Poco Larivee pulled the Vets back in the battle with a tremendous heave from the center of the court. Stein, Pierce and Jake registered in quick succession before Lynch dropped in a free throw for Winooski. Jake and Lynch matched foul shots and Vermont led 14-5 as the end of the first half drew near Lynch dropped in a set shot from near the foul circle to raise Winooski hopes. Vermont quickly dispelled these hopes with its greatest offensive display of the evening. Becker and Jake sank two field goals each and Pierce contributed a foul as the half-time score zoomed to 23-7.

Second Half

Winooski discarded their zone defense for a man-to-man set-up as they emerged from their dressing room. Becker immediately put this strategy to a test by sinking an overhead shot. Jim Hill countered with a foul and a long shot as

Outing Club Starts Season at Mansfield

Twenty-two stalwart skiers of the Outing Club initiated the skiing season with a trip to Mt. Mansfield last Sunday, December 2. Held up by the station wagon which refused to function properly, the skiers left the Waterman building shortly after 8.30.

While part of the group spent the day on the practice slope and the Toll Road, the others herring-boned to the Stone Hut near the top and arrived there ready for lunch. Two feet of snow covered the trails and skiing conditions were good.

Middlebury, Vt. Have Dance Meet

With little blue leotards and a spirit of cooperation instead of bitter words of rivalry, Middlebury and U. V. M. began the first of a series of get-togethers last Saturday afternoon when the modern dance workshop group drove to Middlebury. The afternoon was spent working with the similar group at the College on dance composition and body mechanics.

The following girls made the trip: Phyllis Edgerton, Nancy Dockstader, Betty Mansfield, Anne Hoos, Harriet Cohen, Jane Smith, Lee Church, Lynn Derrick, Cindy Smith, Mary Jane Fleming, Barbara Snetsinger, Crystal Malone and Tess Guzowski. The group was accompanied by Miss Euler, dance instructor

Vermont's dancers had supper and were shown dorm rooms and the campus in general. On the return journey, the station wagon received quite a mauling when it successively lost one chain, then another, then had a complete flat. The outcome of the evening is a secret, ask one of the modern dance girls!

From the Bench

For armchair sportsmen, our wholehearted sympathies, but there is a robust group of people who look to seasonal activity, living for the stimulant that open air and winter winds can give.

At present, all eyes are on an embryo which we hope will develop into what U. V. M. has known in the past as a formidable challenge to other leading ski teams in the northeast.

Dick Audette has outlined a tentative program for us, which is at least an introduction to the skiing activity for this season. Pete Mallet, acting captain enters a note of enthusiasm into our column by announcing that the turnout for the team has been encouraging, but the more the merrier.

We cannot be sure at this point, but there are indications that Everett Bailey, one of U. V. M.'s former co-captains, will be coaching the fellows on the mountain for this season's meets.

Thus far the memberships turned boasts 12, who are eager and ready to begin practice, and who will be given their chance to shine, as soon as all the minute details of sports organization are completed.

A preview of the line-up for this season's competition, brings about the first scheduled meet with Middlebury, December 18, 19 and 20. The next meet will be with N. H. February 16 and 17. Some of the other teams we will meet at West Point, Dartmouth, R. P. I., Williams, M. I. T., and Harvard.

If you have a skiing specialty, and are interested in the right kind of instruction from the right kind of a guy, let's go out and be a part of the U. V. M. ski team

Administration Reinstates Converse As a Men's Dorm

Dean Simpson Asks Women Living There To Be Ready To Move On Short Notice; Administration Expects Fine Cooperation

Plans to reorganize the rooming situation on campus to accommodate from one hundred to one hundred and fifty returning veterans are well under way. President Millis set Monday, December 10 as the deadline for definite information.

The Administration announces that Converse will be vacated for the incoming men. All coeds and nursing education will occupy other dorms. Roommates, particularly those in the freshman class, will be kept together.

At a mass-meeting on Wednesday, December 5, Dean Simpson explained the ensuing problem. She stated, confirming the rumors which have been circulating, that it may be necessary to vacate Converse Hall as there are not enough private rooms to house all the veterans. She advised these thirty-five students and ten Cadet nurses to pack their belongings and remain in a state of "suspended animation" until plans were definite. An attempt is being made to group the freshmen together whenever possible. Not only will such a move cause inconvenience to the Converse girls, but also to other groups on campus who will receive them. However, Miss Simpson hopes for the "fine spirit of Cooperation" shown in 1941 on the Redstone Campus when the girls vacated in two days to make room for the Army Air Corps men.

President Millis attributes the acute shortage of rooms to the fact that during the war a long list of private houses were closed to the students because of shortages and the increased number of war workers in Burlington.

Riggs Announces Increased Veteran Enrollment in Jan.

Housing Problem Rises Again, Married Vets To Live at Van Ness

Veteran enrollment at U. V. M., as all over the country, is growing like Topsy. Mr. Riggs has predicted that about 125 veterans will register in January, doubling the present number. Nationally and locally, veterans constitute one-tenth of the student body now, and after the next enrollment almost exclusively for veterans, the percent will be about one fifth.

Housing is the greatest problem, everywhere. For the immediate future, the 38 accommodations in the Van Ness Hotel should take care of the married veterans. Officials are still grappling with the Converse problem. If the veterans move in, where do the girls go? By summer U. V. M. may have a feeder relation with the Universities of Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Cornell, Oklahoma, Utah, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

The incoming veterans average about 25 years of age and about one-third of the group are former U. V. M. students. The enrollment is greatest in the Engineering College, second in Business, and third in order, Pre-Medical, Agriculture, and Arts. College credit is given for extra courses which were part of military training, for example, navigation and electronics. Mr. Riggs said that the all courses in accounting which the veterans entered were rejoiced courses particularly in mathematics. On the whole veterans find the first year of readjustment harder than students took it, but they do better the second year and even that because, said Mr. Riggs, "they are more mature and don't get lost or concerned on the side issues of college life."

Extra Transportation Planned For Holidays

Christmas vacation draws near and again we face the problem of how and under what conditions we will be transported to our homes.

According to reports from Vermont Transit Company and the Rutland Railroad there will be accommodations for taking U. V. M. students to their destinations.

The Vermont Transit Company has reported that there will be extra busses put on the routes which lead to Barre, St. Johnsbury, Rutland through to Montpelier and Montpelier.

It is reported by the Rutland Railroad that there will be extra cars to Boston and New York.

So next semi? students after your last exam there will be an available bus or train in which you can find a seat to rest your weary bones and be carried to your destination.

Vermont Takes Opener From Winooski Vets

Winooski broke into the scoring column. Pierce and Louie Merola exchanged baskets before Jake brought the crowd to its feet with two sensational one handed tosses.

A shot from the side by Lynch brought the count to Vermont 31, Winooski 14, Stein counted for U. V. M. on a fast break, but Merola dunked one from the side and Larivee dribbled half the length of the court for another two-pointer. After Pierce and Larivee exchanged fouls, Merola sank one from the side and Larivee dropped in two more field goals.

With the Green and Gold margin reduced to 34-25, Jake again took over with a one-hander from the bucket and a rebound from in front of the basket. Lynch and Hill added three points to the Vet total with a one-hander and foul respectively.

The next four minutes saw Pierce drop in three baskets for Vermont while Jake dropped in another. Lynch counted twice and Merola once for the Vets during that period. Ralph Becker rang down curtain with a short shot to make the final score read, Vermont 48, Winooski 34.

Administration Reinstates Converse As a Men's Dorm

Dean Simpson Asks Women Living There To Be Ready To Move On Short Notice; Administration Expects Fine Cooperation

Plans to reorganize the rooming situation on campus to accommodate from one hundred to one hundred and fifty returning veterans are well under way. President Millis set Monday, December 10, as the deadline for definite information.

The Administration announces that Converse will be vacated for the incoming men. All coeds and nursing education will occupy other dorms. Roommates, particularly those in the freshman class, will be kept together.

At a mass-meeting on Wednesday, December 5, Dean Simpson explained the ensuing problem. She stated, confirming the rumors which have been circulating, that it may be necessary to vacate Converse Hall as there are not enough private rooms to house all the veterans. She advised these thirty-five students and ten Cadet nurses to pack their belongings and remain in a state of "suspended animation" until plans were definite. An attempt is being made to group the freshmen together whenever possible. Not only will such a move cause inconvenience to the Converse girls, but also to other groups on campus who will receive them. However, Miss Simpson hopes for the "fine spirit of Cooperation" shown in 1941 on the Redstone Campus when the girls vacated in two days to make room for the Army Air Corps men.

President Millis attributes the acute shortage of rooms to the fact that during the war a long list of private houses were closed to the students because of shortages and the increased number of war workers in Burlington.

Riggs Announces Increased Veteran Enrollment in Jan.

Housing Problem Rises Again, Married Vets To Live at Van Ness

Veteran enrollment at U. V. M., as all over the country, is growing like Topsy. Mr. Riggs has predicted that about 125 veterans will register in January, doubling the present number. Nationally and locally, veterans constitute one-tenth of the student body now, and after the next enrollment, almost exclusively for veterans, the percent will be about one-fifth.

Housing is the greatest problem, everywhere. For the immediate future, the 38 accommodations in the Van Ness Hotel should take care of the married veterans. Officials are still grappling with the Converse problem: if the veterans move in, where do the girls go? By summer U. V. M. may have a trailer colony as do the Universities of Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Cornell, Oklahoma, Utah, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

The incoming veterans average about 25 years of age, and about one-third of the group are former U. V. M. students. The enrollment is greatest in the Engineering College, second in Business, and then, in order, Pre-Medical, Agriculture, and Arts. College credit is given for some courses which were part of military training, for example, navigation and electricity. Mr. Riggs said that the only changes in curriculum which the veterans required were review courses, particularly in mathematics. On the whole veterans find the first year of college work harder than students fresh from high school, but they do better than average after that because, said Mr. Riggs, "They are more mature, and they are less interested in the side shows of college life."

Extra Transportation Planned For Holidays

Christmas vacation draws near and again we face the problem of how and under what conditions we will be transported to our homes.

According to reports from Vermont Transit Company and the Rutland Railroad there will be accommodations for taking U. V. M. students to their destinations.

The Vermont Transit Company has reported that there will be extra buses put on the routes which lead to Barre, St. Johnsbury, Rutland through to Albany, and Montpelier.

It is reported by the Rutland Railroad that there will be extra cars to Boston and New York.

So rest assured students, after your last exam there will be an available bus or train in which you can find a seat to rest your weary bones and be carried to your destination.

ZOOLOGY TRIP

The annual zoology trip to the New York Museum of Natural History will probably take place on the weekend immediately following exams. As yet, exact dates have not been permanently established. Many students have already signed up for the trip.

NOTICE

There will be a University Convocation Thursday, December 13, at 10:00 a.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel.

As usual attendance is required of all students in the three undergraduate colleges.

The name of the speaker will be announced later.

E. Swift, Secretary.

Peace Again Sees Spring Festival On UVM Campus

Plans Include Parade, Prom and Spring Play

Edith MacLaren and Dick Audette were named co-chairmen of the Junior Week Committee at a meeting of the junior class on December 5. Edith a transfer is treasurer of Student Government and is a secretarial student while Dick, an Owl, is a liberal arts student who has always taken an active part in sports. His managerial positions consist of Outing Club promoter and ski team manager.

The meeting was directed by members of Student Government, who will also elect a subcommittee. At this meeting, tentative plans for the fete were drawn up. These include the traditional "Peerade," with floats sponsored by fraternities and sororities, the play, produced by the University Players, and the formal Junior Prom. Other plans include picnics, teas, and open houses.

The tradition of Junior Week, which was suspended during the war, is an old one at the University. The week has always been one of the gayest seasons in the college calendar.

Commencing on May 3 (Founder's Day), and continuing through the following Sunday, the program will consist of a variety of events, presented and sponsored by the Junior Class, but participated in by the entire school.

The "Peerade" will wend its way through the streets of Burlington on Thursday afternoon. The floats are judged according to originality and execution of theme, and a loving cup is presented to the winning group.

Friday brings the Junior Prom, a big name band, and a 2:00 a.m. night for coeds. Saturday afternoon, a baseball game, and on Saturday night the school play, followed by sorority open houses. The week is concluded on Sunday with picnics and teas.

A list of the various committees will be posted, and each member of the junior class is to serve on one. A number of sophomores will also be chosen as committee members.

Sigma Xi Forms Chapter at U.V.M.

At the annual Sigma Xi convention held in Boston Saturday, December 1, the Sigma Xi Club at the University of Vermont was voted into membership as a regular chapter of the society. The University's new chapter has the honor of being the first organization of its kind in the state. Installation will take place sometime in the spring. Vermont's representatives at the Sigma Xi convention were Professors Paul A. Moody of the Zoology Department and Fred W. Dunnihue of the College of Medicine.

The University's Sigma Xi Club consisted of members who had become members of the society at other institutions, and although they could exercise some of the privileges of Sigma Xi, they could not initiate new members. Sigma Xi is the research society of America and is the only scientific organization which embraces all the sciences, with the exception of the social sciences. The society has as its one purpose the encouragement of scientific research.

Christmas Season Ushers in Traditional Dinner, Caroling

The traditional University of Vermont formal Christmas dinner will be held on Wednesday evening, December 12, at 6:30 p.m. both in the Waterman rotunda and the Robinson dining hall. A gayly bedecked Christmas tree will be a feature at the dinners and the tables will be decorated with assorted red and green colored favors. The meal will consist of turkey and the usual trimmings. At Waterman the diners will be served punch and canapes in the soda fountain before the meal begins while because of the lack of space at Robinson Hall, the meal will be served entirely in the dining room.

Dean and Mrs. Swift, Dean Simpson and Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page will be the guests at the rotunda dinner, in addition to the girls living in the Allen House, Sanders Hall, and Phi Sigma Delta, cooperative dormitories. At Robinson Hall the invited guests include President and Mrs. Millis, Mr. and Mrs. Kehoe, and the girls of Claggett House.

The Decoration Committee for the formal dinner is headed by Mrs. France, house director at Alpha Chi, assisted by Mrs. Bacon of ATO and Mrs. Cole of Sigma Phi.

Caroling

Groups of students will caroll this Saturday night going to dorms and professors' homes. This tradition is carried out every year with several groups covering different sections of the campus. Last year Delta Psi was headquarters, this year students will meet at Waterman. There's a possibility that several band members will bring their instruments and accompany the singers, adding the specialty that Frances Donahue last year directed. Refreshments are planned at different houses along the routes.

All carolers are asked to come with the songs stored in their memories as there probably will not be enough song books to go around. Watch the bulletin boards for further announcements from the Pep Committee which is sponsoring this event.

Sorority Rushing Starts January 13

Following a Pan Hellenic meeting, November 27 and a special meeting held for freshman non-sorority girls on December 6, the following plans were decided upon to hold as rushing rules for the coming quarter.

No definite rushing rules as such were set down. Facts were moved to get away from the idea that there was such a thing as dirty rushing. Dirty rushing in the mind of one person might be considered friendliness in the minds of others. All were asked to use discretion and honor in their dealings with the future sorority girls. Following in line with the honor system, Pan Hellenic has decided to put sorority rushing on a basis such as to put forth by the system and girls will be asked to follow the honor system during rushing.

U. V. M. Needs More Concerted Effort In-Action On Student Reforms

[illegible]

Activity Must Include All Students

[illegible]

The Cynic Platform

1. Investigate fraternities with the purpose of abolishing quotas which deny membership to students for racial or religious reasons. Install a democratic system of rushing with more fraternity opportunities for those who desire them.
2. Rescind the drinking rule.
3. Make Student Government a representative body with publicity and restriction on petitions.
4. Coordinate Student Government and Student Union.
5. Install the Honor System.
6. Investigate student pleas for senior privileges.
7. Support world movements promoting Social Consciousness, War Relief, etc.

Real Purpose of the Honor System

The following is a two-minute examination for the Honor System.

Q. Wrong: you report a friend.

A. Yes, because in cheating he is undermining the system which belongs to me, [illegible]. Anyone who steals from me is not a friend. And, besides, I don't want to have enemies for friends.

Q. If the Honor System is so good, why is the Committee trying to railroad it through?

A. It isn't! The Committee is running a [illegible] campaign, but as yet it hasn't even set a date for voting on the System.

Q. Why do we need an Honor System. We have policemen, why not proctors?

A. Policemen are placed so that they can help people and direct activities. An instructor would serve the same purpose in exams. However, the analogy between policemen and proctors is not a good one. Policemen aren't constantly eyeing you with an air of suspicion. They don't assume that you will steal. Proctors do. Besides the abolishing of proctors will give to the student a feeling of being trusted, such a feeling will result in loss of a tendency to cheat.

Q. Isn't the Committee seeking political power through the installation of the system?

A. That is absurd. None of the committee members are even on the Student Court. They will have no more power or force in the running of the Honor System than will any other student. Besides, three of the committee are seniors. How much chance would they have to reap political glories?

Q. Why add another complicated constitution to the mess we have already?

A. It is certainly better to have your terms defined than to flounder around in the dark.

Q. Are the students mature enough for the Honor System?

A. We are no longer in high school. We are old enough to go away to school away from the protective guidance of our parents. Therefore we are old enough to have individual integrity. Certainly the veterans, who have been through so much, should be mature enough for the system.

Q. Why does Student Government take the responsibility of suggesting the system to the students.

A. In a recent issue of the Cynic an article told of the history of the Honor System on U. V. M. campus. This shows that it was both student and faculty interests which prompted the Student Government's action.

Q. What material advantages will the Honor System give me?

A. Complete freedom in exams as long as you don't disturb the room. You will be allowed to leave the room during an exam. You will be trusted. If you are sick you will be able to take your exam at home. If you have to be absent on an exam day you will be given the same exam at another time. No tough make-up exams. These are some of the material advantages.

Q. Can the Honor System work here?

A. It is a goal to be strived for. It has worked at other colleges. Are they any better than U. V. M.? The Honor System will work here also.

Clearing Misinformation

Q. Is the Cynic[illegible] private [illegible]?

A. [illegible] but it is University owned and University operated.

Q. Is the Cafeteria run for a profit?

A. No. If you now [illegible] are almost as high as food costs. What has expanding the board bills gone toward maintenance and overhead. There is no profit.

Q. Do student waitresses working 21 hours a week receive enough money to pay their entire three meal contract?

A. Yes.

Q. Are these salaries liable to income tax?

A. No, because they fall below the income tax level.

Q. Why are the food prices so high?

A. The food prices are exactly the same for separate items as they were last year and the year before.

Q. Are the meals served in the University operated dining rooms worth 50 cents?

A. Yes. A[illegible] one might a meal served in the cafeteria could be bought in the cafeteria for less than 50 cents. The total serving the next eight would cost approximately $4.25 in the cafeteria.

Q. Why is it that the soda fountain doesn't open until 10:00 a.m.?

A. Because student waitresses simply have not signed up to work there in those morning hours.

Q. Why must every girl living in a college dorm sign a board contract?

A. Because the college dining room has an atmosphere of gracious living that every student needs.

Q. Why can't senior women be privileged to eat outside the college dining room?

A. The leadership of those girls is necessary in a dining room where underclassmen eat.

Q. Wouldn't it be cheaper to eat outside?

A. No. The meals are planned so that a student may have a well balanced diet for the lowest possible cost. Of course in addition to actual food costs, the cost of labor, maintenance, and overhead must be taken into consideration in the calculation of student board bills.

Fraternity Evaluation

Can the fraternity system continue to exist in a [illegible] way to conform to the truest its democratic principles?

Democracy recognizes the equality of all men regardless of race, religion or creed. The Catholic quotas [illegible] the fraternity and sorority constitutions at least [illegible] against the American ideal of religious freedom. [illegible] the same idea is the general nonacceptance of Jews and [illegible] in Christian and Jewish fraternities respectively. [illegible] manner failure to recognize Negroes as prospective [illegible] members is inconsistent with a democratic principle. [illegible] fraternities cast out these inconformities with the [illegible] rules this will serve only to contribute to the [illegible] ness and intolerance which world leaders are [illegible] combat. Complete wiping out of these stipulations is the satisfactory answer to such discrimination. Merit [illegible] would be the rightful measuring stick for according [illegible] to possess those qualities of loyalty, honor, service, [illegible] amenability, cooperativeness.

Fraternities if guided by the same sound principles by which they were conceived, cannot fail to endure for these principles are indestructible perpetual forces. The whole system is [illegible] on brotherhood. They are, in their original intent, [illegible] for the joining together of congenial persons to the end of achieving certain worthwhile goals. They afford the opportunity to form valuable and lasting friendships. They [illegible] develop each member religiously, morally, intellectually and [illegible] really giving him occasions throughout the year to [illegible] leadership.

It may be observed that the worthwhile projects of fraternities include not only the backing of campus drives but [illegible] community welfare work and national and international [illegible] Fraternities are one of the first organizations appealed [illegible] backing of any constructive purpose.

The cut-throat rivalry of fraternities on some campuses is merely an unfortunate outgrowth of one of the most fundamental assets. Competition, as such, is valuable [illegible] as it fosters an incentive for continual improvement. It becomes dangerous when it operates to the total exclusion of [illegible] tion. We find this working in the form of "fraternity [illegible]" An individual fraternity or sorority, in an effort to [illegible] into office the leaders of their group, oftentimes do this to develop leadership in these persons, but rather to give [illegible] prestige to the name of the fraternity. Competition when along with cooperation is the keynote to a fair, constructive fraternity setup.

The fraternity system can continue to exist if the soundciples on which it is based are duly considered and maintained operate in their truest sense.

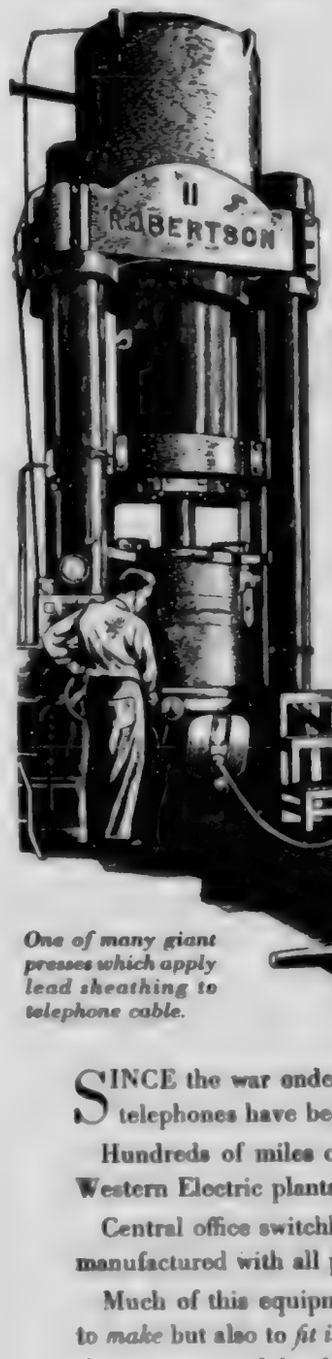
Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

The honor system as it is planned for application at U. V. M. defeats not only its own purpose, but also the primary objective of any institution of knowledge. As it is set down, it would steal all honor from the individual and transplant it into a variegated group. This statement is made on the following boulder of fact. The honor system, as proposed, would take place only in unproctored examination rooms. Therefore we shall confine our arguments to that.

The individual student is thereby elected to proctor all other students in the room, and report any person that he believed was cheating in any way. The mere act of making this report would steal more honor from the individual making it than it could possibly contribute to society.

The main purpose and function of a college or university is to mold and establish the individual, and therefore the "honor system" as proposed would prove to be detrimental to the institution by attempting to defeat the institution's primary objective.



Proctors in an examination room are referred to as policemen by the proponents of the honor system, and well they might be. I shall refer to them in a different interpretation of the same term. A "policeman" is not to be feared but he is to be respected. (What kind of an individual is it who fears a policeman?) He is to be respected for his experience, training and judgment in carrying out the duties of his position. Who of us can "honorably" say that he is as capable of carrying out the responsibilities of a proctor as an instructor or professor who has spent his life in learning that task as a part of his chosen duty? One does not go to a plumber to have dental work done, nor to a butcher to have plans drawn up for a great engineering masterpiece, but he goes to the person who is trained for and adapted to the respective tasks. So must we go to the professional to benefit to the fullest extent for our toil (and tuition).

The proctor must not be looked on as an insult to our integrity but as a flattering gesture as to our value on the part of the University. He is part of the die in which we as future Americans are being cast. He is an indispensable part of the die shaped through years of experience to produce a better product. And some people have the gall to bite the hand that feeds them. Are we going to trade that which we are fortunate enough to have for what the "honor system" has to offer?

The purpose of this article is to give

ADESTE FIDELIS

By Barbara Morgan

Adeste Fidelis—
Come today
All ye of faith.
Triumph, come!
And behold
The angel's King!
Come and adore—
Adeste! Come!

The song was born an aeon past
And man, in upward struggle, finds
The way is long and dark—
Grasping for the things
He cannot know, alone,
The goal is lost
In shadow, sorrow, fear
The centuries pass—
Their only constant, change.
Yet at one season, there is hope
As ageless songs of faith arise.
And looking upward
To a star, the song of triumph
Comes again:

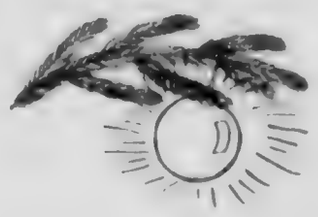
Adeste Fidelis!
Come! All faithful men,
Come, and believe, today
Adeste! Come!
Behold and sing.
Ye of all faiths,
In triumph, come!
Adeste Fidelis!

Spirit and Light

By Ben Bursten

He was cold as he sat there, a shivering bundle, lost somewhere in the depths of a time-worn overcoat. The white cane was covered by snow and the little army of mechanical Santa Clauses waded knee deep in the sparkling moss which fell from the sky like fate itself. Occasionally, he held out the empty cup and once or twice clanged a small metal rod against it. But the world was too busy to notice. Christmas was in the air—lights, gaiety, fashion, gifts. Cars barked their impatience as they picked their way through the busy street. People, half hidden with presents, slushed hurriedly by. Yes, the world was too busy to get a cozy home and a warm dinner to notice the Santa Clauses.

He could always tell when the children passed. Oh, he loved the children. The laughter, the shouting, the shuffling of footsteps. Christmas was for the children; they could afford to take time from the dull monotony of life to enjoy the season with a fullness of spirit. Theirs was a real joy of giving and receiving. It was a spirit of love and fellowship. And Christmas was for the aged, men like him—but not the Christmas of today. The past was theirs, the pure warmth of their childhoods—the faint memories of the ecstacies of turkey, plum pudding, candy.



The bells rang. The clear music flitted out over the thick sky. People who listened to the bells were too absorbed to buy his wares. But he was not angry. It did not matter if he sold the less. The bells kindled a fire inside. They gave him a warm, comfortable, almost well-fed feeling.

And even as he sat, quietly lost in a noisy world, he did not feel alone. For he heard the children coming. Their simple enthusiasm announced the approach. They were stopping nearby. He could hear the "s" of their excited whispers. Now a chuckle, now a howl of intense delight. And the swish of their feet as they ran around in the snow. Yes, this was the Christmas spirit. The children, so purely radiant, they were the real Christmas. The caroling of the bells,

Janie Clare and the Silver Ball

By Mary Jean Dunsmore

I wonder if perhaps some of you have been thinking in the last few years that you have outgrown the feeling of Christmas, that the magic, breathless wonder that you felt years ago has passed into the forgotten fairyland of your childhood, along with Winnie-the-Pooh and the Three Billy Goats Gruff. If you have reached this state of disillusionment, you could sympathize with Janie Clare, for Janie was nineteen and very disillusioned indeed. It wasn't only that she had lost the magic feeling, but she had at last truly realized, so she thought, that Christmas was nothing but a trouble and expense to her and a source of profit to store owners. You couldn't blame her really, for she had been hunting desperately through stores for weeks, and her pay checks seemed to disappear just as soon as she got them. And the only result of all this was a queer looking collection in her bottom bureau drawer, of socks and perfume and gloves and stationery and an ash tray with matches on it that lighted when you pulled them. Janie didn't even have the spirit to wrap them.

So this was Janie's state of mind about three days before Christmas, when she was walking home from work in the dim. The "dim" is Janie's expression, not mine. It means that sort of in-between time of day, when there's still a faint flare of color in the sky and yet it's time for the Christmas tree lights to be turned on in the park and for the bells in the church to start playing carols. It's an enchanting sort of hour, just the kind of hour for something very unusual to happen. And it did!

Janie doesn't know yet how it happened. She was walking up a side street, deciding definitely not to go home for Christmas because she was so tired, not even noticing the wreaths on the doors or the way the snow crunched under her feet, when suddenly she noticed a little shop window. At first she wondered why she was looking at it so intently because it wasn't very well lighted, but then she realized that what she was looking at was a fragile silver ball, right in the center of a group of Christmas tree ornaments. It was a very ordinary silver ball—you've all seen dozens of them—or at least that's what it seemed at first glance. But it was unusually beautiful, because it reflected the lights from the tree on the sidewalk and gave back hundreds of little pinpoints of color, red and blue and green and yellow. Even Janie, with all her cynicism, couldn't help admiring it. She was standing there staring at it quite frankly, when all at once the pin points of color disappeared—just disappeared! For a split second the ball was perfectly clear. Janie felt a queer desire to run away but realized that she couldn't. She had to keep gazing straight at the ball, for she was strangely certain that something was going to appear there. And then it did! The ball seemed to grow larger and larger, and right on it there was a picture—a little scene, really—of a window, and you could see the snow falling outside, and beside it was kneeling a little girl, a girl with light brown hair and blue pajamas, and she was looking out into the night.

"Why!" said Janie in amazement. "That's me! Janie Clare! Right up at the north room window where I used to watch for Santa Claus!" And she felt a tingling, shivery feeling of excitement, just as if she were really there.

And then the picture disappeared, but Janie couldn't look away. She just waited, on tiptoe with eagerness, and pretty soon the silver ball began to get bigger again. This time there was a tiny manger with a baby in it and a little girl kneeling beside it, a little girl angel with white crepe paper wings, and you could see that she was looking down at the baby, and singing.

"Why!" said Janie again, wonderingly. "That's me! When I was the angel in the Sunday School play, and there's Mary Carroll's doll in the manger, and I'm singing 'Silent Night'." And she could faintly hear the sound of the singing, and she felt the great contentment and peace steal over her just as it had before.

But after a moment that picture, too, disappeared, and Janie stood there, fascinated, wondering what to expect next. Again the silver ball grew larger, seem-

SNOW

By Carolyn Aronson

The magic of snow is a constant enchantment.
It comes to men a sweet message and tranquil.
From regions afar and from spheres of remoteness.
It falls upon hearts that are ready and waiting.
A spirit of wistfulness, lovely and graceful,
Now guides its soft nothingness into vague patterns,
The shapes of young dreams and of hopes yet to be.

Mr. Meredith's Christmas

By Joan R. Levin

Mr. Meredith stood at the window of his hotel suite room in the hotel and looked down on the street below. It was an ordinary snowy street overlooking some six or eight blocks—blocks in which blended the gloominess of the cozy room. Complete good old days and the shining modern moments of 1945. A commonplace city street. But tonight it was overlaid in a very special snowy sweetness.

Mr. Meredith looked up at the crisp, star-sprinkled blueness of the sky, gazed across the wall at the tall brightly lighted evergreen that stood majestically in front of City Hall, and at the gay neon "Merry Xmas" that gleamed at the head of the hill. Then he looked at his watch. "Six o'clock," he announced aloud, "and Christmas Eve or no Christmas Eve I need my dinner!"

Mr. Meredith seemed to take a funny little pleasure in being practical and matter-of-fact. Even about a subject like Christmas. He seemed to like to say a gruff "bah!" to holly wreaths, and tinsel, and red and green tissue-wrapped presents. He seemed to. But he really didn't. Truth of the matter was that Mr. Meredith was lonely.

He was staying in this town for one week in order to complete a business transaction. He wasn't happy about it. But when the cigar counter clerk had asked him the other morning whether he didn't mind being away from home for the holiday, Mr. Meredith had cleared his throat with great solemnity and said: "When you're as old as I am, young man, you'll realize that one does not put sentiment before business successfully!" Mr. Meredith was fifty-eight, but though his hair was grey, and his waistline not too slim, his heart—his secret heart—was still remembering college hops. Truth of the matter was that Mr. Meredith lived at a cold but dignified Club for men. He didn't have a home. Not really.

He took up his cane, walked out into the corridor, rang for the elevator, and waited. A solitary dinner on Christmas Eve, he thought sadly, is not a very festive occasion.

Out on the street Mr. Meredith found himself caught in the bustling jolly last-minute throng of people—shoppers, synthetic Santa Claus' clanging metallic but strangely melodious bells, children selling shopping bags and sprigs of mistletoe and tree ornaments. People stolid and cheerful and smiling contagious smiles. Mr. Meredith chuckled to himself. For no reason at all.

"Need some last minute trimmin's, mister?" He felt a tug at his sleeve and looked down into the freckle-covered face of a boy about ten. The boy wore a heavy, patched jacket that was much too large for him, and a grey cap covered almost completely with buttons. "Buy some tinsel, maybe?"

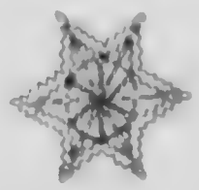
Mr. Meredith looked at him hard. He noticed the little boy's eyes. They were young eyes, and they'd been disappointed too many times. They were hurt. And they were hungry.

Mr. Meredith said a strange thing. He said: "Have you had your supper?"

"No, sir."

"Well," said Mr. Meredith impulsively pointing to a group of just-as-shabby boys across the street, "suppose you get some of the other fellows, and we'll see about getting rid of those decorations and getting some dinner!"

"Yes, sir."



Soon, [illegible] surrounded Mr. Meredith before he had time to say "I'm getting to be a sentimental old fool" to himself. Instead he said out loud: "Well, what'll it be? Hamburgers or steak?"

Steak got a unanimous vote. And so

RENEWAL

By Barbara N. Powers

A pendulum swings
From one Christmas to another,
Carving an arc eternal,
Where rests the height and depth
In souls' extent
Of elation,
Depression,
Golden mean.
It holds within, now fading,
Now gleaming light of good,
Evil shadows,
Seconds numbered priceless pearls,
Tears, their source impressioned,
Anguish . . . not forgetting,
Sorrow . . . remembering not enough.
An upward swing . . .
A momentary stillness rests upon the world.
A snowflake falls,
A chime is heard,
An idea is born anew . . .
Angel touch of things unknown,
Soft breath of mystic hope
Caress life-weary souls,
With peace out of time
Out of space,
In which, one has not to believe
In order to feel
The hope for man renewed.

OVERSEAS MAILING

By Barbara Morgan

I wish that I could send to you
The Christmases we used to know
The lake, sealed smooth with tragile ice,
Our sloping hillside, deep in snow . . .
The tree we always chose with care
("Is it too tall?" "Or branched too wide?")
And dragged so carefully down the hill
To stand gay, tinsel-trimmed, inside . . .
The warm sweet kitchen, where a host
Of gingerbread toys danced at night . . .
Popcorn strings and mistletoe—
A single, guiding, candle's light . . .
I cannot send these things I'd like
So 'till you come, they're waiting here,
While I can send you just the dream
Of Christmas home again, next year.

LARRY GARDNER

The little man with the soft gray hair and the glasses opened his tobacco pouch, filled his pipe and after lighting it, flashed a perpetual smile as he said, "There won't be any action on the Commissioner's job until the next Northern League." The speaker was athletic director and head baseball coach, Larry Gardner.

Thus Larry awaits with his multitude of admirers the decision on the next commissioner for the Northern Baseball League. The announcement should come late this month or early in January.

In chosen commissioner, Larry's duties will involve setting of player contracts, deciding final decision on all disputed games, dealing out fines to all deserving players and managers, appointment of league umpires, and re-scheduling postponed games.

The Northern League's last commissioner was Harold A. Mayforth, Sr., who is at present serving in the U. S. armed forces and will be unable to resume his duties.

The appointment of Coach Gardner would make U. V. M. the center of much of the league administrative function as Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans is business manager of the organization.

Coach Gardner joined the Boston Red Sox during his junior year of college at U. V. M. but returned to Vermont to receive his degree in 1909. Larry remained with the Bosox until 1917, when he was sold to Philadelphia. After one season with the Athletics, Larry went to Cleveland where he remained until the end of his big league playing days in 1924.

His first taste of coaching came as player-manager at Dallas, Tex., and for

Student Union Holds Holiday Mass Meeting

To U. V. M. students who are looking forward to a week of exams, the Student Union Mass Meeting on Wednesday night provided a brief preview of the Christmas festival to come. Held at 7:45 in the Union, the Mass Meeting program consisted of a variety of entertainment in the Union great Student Union members presented a pantomime "Trouble in the Cellar," with Carroll Mahle reading. Lee Zoll read a short Christmas story.

Music was provided by Connie Virgona playing several piano selections, and a few students participating in carol singing. A group of waitresses, who made merry during Hello Day festivities, sang "Joy to the World," "White Christmas," and "Silent Night."

Following the evening, cool, gal received cookies and candy wrapped as tiny Christmas packages.

Museum Murmurs

The Program Committee will [illegible] a series of special exhibits at the Fleming Museum dealing with various [illegible] [illegible] during December.

[illegible] from the Museum's collection will be shown as illustrative of the religious art of the Buddhists, Hindus, Mohammedans, Hebrews and Christians.

The exhibits will be changed each Sunday until the Christmas recess and the last exhibit will be Renaissance Art during the Christmas season.

The Museum hopes the students will take advantage of this opportunity to see these exhibits which illustrate the differences and similarities between these religions and the influence one has had upon another in the world's history.

STERNBERG EXHIBIT

Hans Sternberg now has an exhibit of silk screen prints in the gallery of the Fleming Museum. Most of these prints were exhibited last winter in the A.C.A. gallery, New York and aroused wide spread interest. His prints depict a number of contemporary artists and are done in the manner of the artist being painted. Sternberg was at U.V.M. last as leader at the student faculty ball session.

HUNGARIAN SWORD

In a previous issue the Hungarian sword on display in the Museum was mentioned. Since then, the coat of arms has been interpreted by Ella Chamer, a U.V.M. student, as the Hungarian order of the Knights of St. Stephen, admission to which is the greatest honor that can be achieved in Hungary as a reward for diplomatic or military service.

The cross of Lorraine is the standard of the Hungarians. It represents the cross given to St. Stephen by the Pope for bringing Christianity into the country. The mountains upon which the cross stands are the highest in Hungary and the lines are representative of rivers. The nine-point crown is that of the ruling class.

The Latin motto beneath means: "If God is for us, who is against us?" These words spoken in his sleep, saved the life of St. Stephen, for they frightened away a thief who was about to kill him. These words are well-known by every citizen, for they are famous in Hungarian legend.

This sword, with the crest described above, was presented to Count Széchenyi, a Hungarian statesman, at a time [illegible] his services to this country. The [illegible] comes from "The Museum of Masters."

TINTORRETO COMES TO MUSE

During the Christmas season the Fleming Museum will have an exhibit [illegible] on "The Adoration of the Magi" by the Italian Renaissance artist Jacopo Robusti, "Il Tintoretto."

Tintoretto was a master of the Renaissance in Venice. His great [illegible] his art was to unite Michelangelo [illegible] ure with Titian's glowing color. [illegible] art critic, Ruskin, has called him one of history's five supreme painters.

[illegible] Sixteenth Century masterpiece [illegible] were procured from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts through the Fleming Museum Association. The picture [illegible] must be shown at a preview to members of the Association. Students are [illegible] to become members for the coming year at the cost of $1.00. Members will receive invitations to special programs during the year and will be supplied with [illegible] of the University's most useful publications.

After the preview the picture will be on exhibit to the public. The Museum staff hopes that all the students will make it a special point to see this fine painting while it is on open exhibition.

GOLDEN EAGLE

A golden eagle with a 85-inch wing spread, weighing 10 pounds, was shot by Clement Thompson of Shelburne on November 22. Thompson had been missing ducks and roosters from his farm. He finally spotted a huge bird, which he [illegible] was a hawk, hovering over his pasture. The young pigs were in danger and the hunter downed the thief with one shot. He was to his surprise he found himself the possessor of a golden eagle, an extremely rare bird in this part of the country.

Mr. Thompson has presented his bird to the Fleming Museum. Mr. [illegible] acting director, reports that the eagle will be on exhibition in about two months.

WEDGEWOOD POTTERY

On special exhibit in the Marble [illegible] for the week of October 21-27 will be examples of English pottery of the Eighteenth Century: Wedgewood [illegible] enware and Worcester porcelain.

Student Govt. Sets Up Publications Board; Caroling

Meeting November 26

Ticket books for this year's basketball and baseball games are now obtainable at the Book Store for all who paid an activity fee.

A reminder was given about the necessary written excuses for absences from Student Government meetings.

The subject of the Publications Board was brought up and its purpose stated as being "to advise and protect publications." The matter of reviving this committee was laid on the table until more information could be brought in.

Discussion was brought up on the possibility of prohibiting individuals to post lost and found notices on the bulletin board. Also the suggestion of keeping a book in the bookstore for the sale of second-hand books.

Discussion was held on the use of the surplus funds of Kake Walk.

A suggestion was offered that we have more publication of our meetings and invite the students to attend and offer concrete suggestions and ideas. All Student Government meetings are open.

Meeting December 3

Under old business, a report was given from the Pep Committee. It was stated that the cheerleaders did not perform at the first basketball game because they felt they weren't ready and the necessity of procuring uniforms.

Under new business, the coming elections of a new Executive Committee were discussed. This election is in February conflicting somewhat with Kake Walk. A suggestion was made that the candidates for the positions of officers of the Executive Committee speak at a Convocation. Nominations are made by a nominating committee as stated in the Constitution. Further nominations may be made through petitions signed by 150 students. A committee of Rita McGarry, Dave Hackett, and Pete Mallett was elected to form plans for the coming election and bring them to the Executive Committee.

An appropriation to order 100 more handbooks, making the total 200, was made for the incoming freshmen.

A junior class meeting is to be held at 7.30 p.m. December 5 to appoint committees to form plans for the revival of Junior Week the early part of May.

Further information was given on the Publications Board. It is to keep up the publications, showing the new staff what to do, publish the college magazine. The Press Club sends information to hometown papers of individuals. The members of the Publications Board are the Editor and Assistant Editor of the Ariel and the Editor of the CYNIC and three faculty members. Student Government appointed Professors Dean and Kidder on this board.

A complaint was brought in that the cut file to which the CYNIC and Ariel could go to get cuts for their pictures is not kept up. A motion was made and carried that a recommendation be made to the Publications Board to see that action is taken about the cut file and the editing of a college magazine.

Suggestion was made to the Convocation Committee that the students should be reminded that the faculty are to leave Convocation first and the students leave by classes.

A discussion was held on freshman hazing. It was brought out that this would depend a lot on the attitude of incoming veterans.

A recommendation was made to the Pep Committee that it make plans for Christmas Caroling on December 15.

The question about who is to pay for the station wagon repairs was discussed. When definite neglect is shown, the individual organization is to be billed. A motion was made and carried that the bill for recent repairs be sent to the Faculty Advisor of the Modern Dance Group with the statement that we believe they should pay this bill as it was due to their carelessness that damage was done.

Y. W. C. A. Group Holds Religious Discussion

Statements such as "Scientific thought today is much more theistic than it was 25 years ago," kept the Monday afternoon Christian Faith discussion group, sponsored by Y. W. C. A., at a high tempo. Led by Max Webster, the group continued the discussion which developed the previous week.

Conflicting with the atheist point of view was the quote from Fosdick: "The absurdity of sheer chance of having all the atoms gather and make a Christ or a Michel Angelo . . ." The pros and cons of "Where there is no God, there is no man," continued as the hour passed.

Held in the religious life office, and open to all interested, the discussions are based on topics of interest to students. Following Christmas vacation the groups will be continued weekly, taking up chapters in Credo, by Thomas Kepler.

Pan-Hell Analyzes Sorority Set-up

"Take it or leave it," said Dean Simpson, as she summed up the sorority subject, in a speech to freshman girls at the Pan Hellenic meeting in the Student Lounge Thursday, Dec. 5, at 7.30.

Miss Hoffman, physical education instructor, began the program by stating the benefits of being independent. "Students still have group security and equal opportunity, even if they are not sorority, and it is not a personal affront if a girl is not pledged, said Miss Hoffman.

There are also some very definite limitations in sorority life. It is necessary to take the expense into consideration, and unfair of a girl to take the money away from a family need. There are certain obligations in the form of regular payments, operation of the house, and the extra burden of responsibility. Unpledged freshmen can have as glorious a time as those pledged.

Miss Simpson continued by saying that if the freshmen feel that they cannot go the whole way, they should not go at all. It is bound to encroach upon a girl and her personality and she isn't her own boss any more. Yet the University looks up sororities for its chosen leaders and good example. We as humans are naturally gregarious, and it is very important to choose the right sorority, the group in which one feels most at home.

Many colleges have given up the sorority system because it has broken up the campus into too many groups.

But Dean Simpson believes that at U. V. M. we have a very satisfactory sorority system. She will continue to be in favor of them as long as they are democratic and will take their responsibilities. It eliminates large groups and very small ones, because it overpowers them.

She ended by telling the group not to be dissatisfied about not getting in, or to think about it too much or let it get them down and make school work fail in the second quarter.

Honorary Presents Music Hour Friday

The Staff and Sandal Music Hour takes place every Friday at 4.30 in the third floor lounge at Waterman. The music is supplied by the music department and consists of request numbers of classical, romantic, and modern masters. The time is taken usually by one long number, symphony or concerto, and one or two lighter numbers. The music, which lasts about an hour, is presented by three Staff and Sandal members. All the classes are represented and the group is always varied.

Beethoven, Tschaikowsky and Grieg seem to be the most popular composers. Last week's Hour consisted of von Weber's "Invitation to the Waltz" and Tschaikovsky's "Sixth Symphony." These Hours will continue throughout the rest of the school year and everyone is cordially invited to attend and their requests for future selections.

Non-Jewish Group Might Join Hillel

Spirit of Brotherhood Is Purpose of Action

Traveling immediately in the wake of the Religion and Life Parley is the news that a group of non-Jewish students are planning to join Hillel, the Jewish organization on campus. The group is led by Jim Shadyac, who has already joined the organization.

The main reason for this action is the promotion of the spirit of brotherhood on the campus, according to Mr. Shadyac. However, he adds, the purpose in joining is not a test to show that it can be done. Rather it is a recognition of the Hillel activities and a desire to participate in them, especially the cultural and social ones.

Hillel is an organization whose purpose is to unite the Jewish students on campus and also to foster the spirit of brotherhood among all men. Its program consists of Jewish history and tradition, Jewish culture, and social and religious activities. The non-Jewish group realizes the need for a better understanding between different kinds of cultures, and it seeks to fulfill this need by joining Hillel.

This action comes at a time when the whole college is talking about change. The undergraduates are proposing the installation of an Honor System, the elimination of discrimination and quotas in the fraternity system, and non-sectarian chapel services.

This is not the first time that Hillel has had non-Jewish membership according to Rabbi De Keyser, director of the organization on the U. V. M. campus. Both he and Professor Hall, director of religious groups on campus, agree that the spirit behind the action is a good one. However, they add, the complications which might result from such membership must be realized. Hillel is essentially a Jewish organization; it must not lose its identity, says the Rabbi.

Professor Hall says further that the religious program on this campus is one of interfaith, rather than non-sectarianism. Each religious group must be strong within itself. It is not desired that the religions lose their identities and merge on this campus.

However, the spirit of brotherhood behind Mr. Shadyac's act and the subsequent plans of the other future non-Jewish members for joining Hillel is very highly commended by the religious leaders at U. V. M.

U. V. M. Co-eds Attend Northfield Conference

The Nature of God and the Divinity of Christ were the themes of the Connecticut Valley Conference at Northfield last weekend, to which Beth Drake, '47, and Joanne Goulart, '48, were U. V. M. delegates. In an informal atmosphere, the group of 30, led by Barbara Arnold, Episcopalian student worker, "Bill" Easton, professor at Massachusetts State College, and "Bill" Kirsten, Regional Student Christian Movement secretary, read and discussed Van Dusen's "Christian Answer."

With the delegates from Amherst, Smith, Yale, Dartmouth, Mt. Holyoke and the University of Connecticut, the U. V. M. girls debated ideas on religious parleys and other campus activities. A communion service and dedication ended the service.

Department--- Club Notes

SECRETARIAL DEPARTMENT

The National Education Association announces the reappointment of Miss Catherine Nulty, Professor of Education at the University of Vermont, as the director of business education for the state of Vermont.

The largest of the 27 departments of the National Education Association, the department of business education is concerned primarily with bringing professional aid to its members. The National business Education Quarterly is the official publication of this organization.

NURSING EDUCATION

The junior students in the Nursing Education curriculum presented a demonstration on the care of a cardiac patient at the meeting of the Nursing Education Club Tuesday evening in the Waterman Building.

Faculty members and students of the department witnessed the demonstration which was prepared by the girls themselves. Ann Davis acted as the patient. Rollande Clouatre, Nancy Caswell and Barbara Kilborn were nurses; Evelyn Olsen, head nurse.

Barbara Kilborn demonstrated the method for administering oxygen to the cardiac patient. Rollande and Nancy showed the correct procedure for making the patient's bed.

Evelyn Olsen, who is president of the Nursing Education Club, announces plans are still underway in the club to hold a welcoming party for the freshmen in the department.

ZOOLOGY DEPARTMENT

The Zoology Department of U. V. M. has been presented a fine collection of tropical butterflies by Herman O. Babbie of St. Augustine, Fla. Mr. Babbie, who was a student here during the summer of '45 collected the butterflies in the vicinity of Empress Augusta Bay in Bougainville, Solomon Islands, in 1944. The assortment contains many interesting butterflies among them are two specimens of the world's largest butterfly, Queen Alexandra's Winged Butterfly which has a wing spread of eight and one-half inches. All the butterflies have been mounted by the zoology department, but some still have to be identified. They are now being displayed in zoology classes. Plans are underways to have them exhibited at Fleming Museum sometime in the near future.

ENGINEERING DEPT. HAS NEW EQUIPMENT

The department of electric engineering at the University has added much new laboratory equipment to its facilities, through the cooperation of the Western Electric Company, the General Electric Company, the Leland Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric Corporation.

Of special interest are such items as an induction heating generator, an industrial X-ray machine, a precipitron, a resistance welder, pneumatic synchronizing equipment, three phase ignition rectifier, voltage regulator, meter controls, photo-electric controls, industrial electron tubes, and various accessories.

This equipment represents the latest types of industrial electronics equipment and it will be used as the basis for a new course in industrial electronics which will be offered as an elective in the electrical engineering curriculum.

The department, also, with the cooperation of Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., Salem, Mass., is conducting a research project on the measurement of radio interference from fluorescent lamps, and the investigation of means by which this interference may be reduced or eliminated.

This has necessitated the building of a screen room in the power laboratory of the electrical engineering department which will house the lamp and testing equipment and effectively shield the test circuit from extraneous interference fields.

Nuquist Opens Poli Sci Course in Barre

Dr. Andrew Nuquist of the Political Science Department opened a new course in the program of adult education Thursday afternoon, December 6, in Barre. The course concerns the Far Eastern situation and is held at Spaulding High School. This course was requested by teachers who need it for certification. Charles Taylor, superintendent of schools in Barre, made arrangements for the course.

Rev. Evans Is Chapel Speaker; Kinsley Dec. 11

In his Chapel talk on December 4, Rev. David Evans of Vergennes outlined a number of the points given by Henry Drummond in making decisions in life. These include prayer, careful thought, advice from a reliable counselor, living each day to the fullest, and holding to one's decision once one has made up his mind.

The Chapel speaker for December 11, Miss Doris Kinsley, is well known to many students on campus because of her fine work with young people throughout the state. She is now with the Vermont Congregational Conference as a full-time worker. Miss Kinsley recently led the Christian faith discussion group in its first meeting.

Book Store Odds and Ends

Shop Early

"Do your Christmas shopping early" seems to be the theme portrayed by the windows of the University Book Store. With gift suggestions and colorful home decorations as well as brilliant gift wrapping accessories, the displays proclaim the advance of the holiday season.

Gifts for every member of the family are to be found, and the painful thought of writing dozens of Christmas cards is brought sharply to our mind by the sight of the card shelf, devoted at the present entirely to cards for Christmas cheer.

The fact that the next month on the calender, by the way, a very short time, will see the great date shining forth only goes to prove that it is not too early to start that shopping list.

New Nature Jewelry

The unique nature jewelry which you may have admired in the bookstore is something quite original and exclusive and the U. V. M. bookstore is the only place in Vermont that has this type of jewelry for sale.

This attractive jewelry which is designed entirely from the seeds of nature was made by Eliot P. Beveridge of Camden, Me., a teacher of art and a successful painter. It all started when Mr. Beveridge made his wife a pin which the local gift shop saw and immediately asked Mr. Beveridge to make a few for the shop. The pins were a big success and this hobby is competing with Mr. Beveridge's profession as an art teacher.

Alder cones, hollyhock, lilac, spruce, bayberry, witchhazel, and beechnut seeds are all used in making various patterns of pins. Many of the earrings are made from beechnut burrs or acorn cups with maleberry centers. All the seeds except the coffee beans from Brazil are collected by Mr. Beveridge himself and with the aid of Mrs. Beveridge they are arranged and made into this popular New England nature jewelry.

U. V. M. Staff Members Plan December Trips

On December 7 and 8, President Millis and Professor Douglass of U. V. M. together with Principal Pearl of Burlington High School, will attend a meeting of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools at the Statler Hotel in Boston. From there, President Millis and his wife will proceed to Providence to spend the weekend as guests of President and Mrs. Wriston of Brown University.

Other trips planned include Professor Dean's speaking at the annual meeting of the Clinton County Historical Society in Plattsburg, N. Y., on December 10.

Proctor Page, assistant to the President and treasurer of the University, returned on December 6 from Atlantic City where he attended a meeting of the Eastern Association of College and University Business Officers.

Ah CHRISTMAS! Crowned with a wreath of mistletoe and reverently lighting bayberry candles before the Women's Supplement, the spirit of Student Union appears bringing glad tidings to all good little girls who have only 45 late minutes and 3 Cs[illegible] for washing socks in the bathtub. Her holiday gift to them includes the following permissions: Light 11:15's a week, opium smoking in all dorms after 3:00 p.m. preceding gentlemable quiet is mentioned, and ski pants the campus attire if they are rolled well above the knee.

In the spirit of giving let's present a few baubles decked and tinsel trimmed presages to our precious pets.

Morocco-bound 47 volume works of Voltaire for Professor Daggett in phonetic symbols.

For Professor Riker, red suspenders embroidered in green with LIBIDO on the left and ID on the right. Matching garters will read FREUD and JUNG.

Little black book of phone numbers to Professor Lohman. He can present them to the incoming maharajas.

True but terrifying department. Seems like Bunny Wolf may have to be married by proxy! The date is set for December 23 and the bride has a last minute exam! Under the honor system could she step out into the hall, promise to love, honor, and obey, and return to Education 397 exam having had no help from new husband, bridesmaids, or flower-girl as to the 17 steps of finger-painting?

Suggestions for slothful shoppers. For that sophisticated roommate have you considered a half-pint bottle of Ethereal Embrace ($35.00 the dram), or maribou lined stadium boots (handy for the day we get a stadium). If she's neat and methodical give her invisible ink—keeps a notebook so tidy!

Aviation Education

Air education among the youth of the country has increased to such an extent that at present a total of nearly 6,000,000 students will have access to aviation instruction. Figures show that 96 per cent of colleges and universities in the United States recognize aeronautics as an elective science, and that half of these accept it as a laboratory science for college entrance requirements.

Tau Epsilon Phi may now be on its way back into the realm of an active fraternity. With only one frater this term it has not been able to do very much. Two pledges, however, Teddy Irwin and Allan Karstein, along with at least one or two veterans returning in January will be a big help towards regaining a former stand on the hill.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The ceremony of burning manuscripts in the fireplace was held at the Alpha Chi house Friday night by the Bloodstockings.

Rae Giddings had a plurality in the house at one time over the weekend.

The bedspread which was raffled off at the Christmas Bazaar was won by Charlotte Bresnahan of Proctor, sister of Mary Bresnahan '47. The two door prizes were won by Mrs. Merrtham and Pat Brayton '47.

Alpha Chi House formed the setting for a bazaar on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 1. A Christmas atmosphere was produced by candles, Christmas lights, evergreens, and Christmas music by records. The alumnae had charge of a food booth and other booths consisted of stuffed animals, novelties, clothing, refreshments, and grabs. A game room upstairs provided entertainment for Canasta and Bridge hounds. Door prizes of writing paper and Christmas cards were won by Mrs. Merrihew and Pat Brayton. A hand crocheted bedspread was raffled and won by Charlotte Bresnahan. Connie Brownell was in charge of the bazaar.

Monday night after meeting, the first fireside chat of the year was held by the chapter. Professor Carpenter spoke on "Education in the United States in view of the recent Harvard studies."

Plans are being made by Sally, Midge, Dock, Dot and Peggy for a journey deep into the "Wilds of Brooklyn" for an evening of "fun and games" at Ruth Jandorek's on New Year's Eve. Refreshments will be served.

PI BETA PHI

A Christmas breakfast for Pi Beta Phi members will be held in the Pi Phi house Sunday at 9:00. Each girl will bring a ten cent gift which will be given to the Community Center. Sue Walthew and Beth Kelly are in charge.

The Pi Phis are now holding weekly open houses for all friends including upperclass girls and all men students. These are informal sessions where one may come and mingle, play cards, dance, and eat refreshments. They will be held Fridays from 4:30-6:00 p.m.

Community Concert Presents Baritone

Leonard Warren to Be Third Artist in Series

Leonard Warren, a leading Metropolitan Opera baritone and one of the most sought after artists in the concert and radio fields, will be heard here on Friday, January 11 at 8.15 p.m. in the Memorial Auditorium.

Warren, a native New Yorker, was preparing for a business career at Columbia University, when his hobby, singing, led to a three year engagement at Radio City Music Hall. Before this time he had not made any professional study of music.

In the 1938 Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, judges awarded him first prize among 700 contestants. This was followed by six months in Milan, Italy, under the great dramatic masters. During this time he absorbed seven operatic roles. On Friday, January 11, 1939, Leonard Warren made his Metropolitan début, as Paolo in "Simon Boccanegra." In seven years Warren has given concerts throughout this country and South America, and has also appeared as featured soloist and guest artist on the "Treasury Hour" with Andre Kostelanetz and the RCA Victor broadcasts. With the recording ban lifted, many of Mr. Warren's recorded selections will be on sale again soon.

Plans for Campus Drive Under Way

$3000 Goal For WSSF Campaign Starts Jan. 24

For the benefit of the newer students and also to refresh the memories of the older ones the World Student Service Fund was established in this country in 1937. Its activities were extended to Europe and Asia with the outbreak of war. The movement, backed by all faiths, is an emergency humanitarian agent of these organizations. Its officers consist of distinguished American educators. Its basic principles are: Impartial service to all students and professors in need, irrespective of race, religion or country; rehabilitation of university life; cooperation among students; promotion of self-help and cooperated efforts. In 1944-45, $96,860.00 was sent to student prisoners of war in Europe, $10,958.00 to prisoners in the Far East, Canada, and United States, $1,850 to students in Russia.

The coming drive for $3,000 begins January 24. The committee is confident that this sum can be easily reached.

DEAN SIMPSON HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Last December 26 as Dean Simpson was returning from her home in East Craftsbury, the automobile in which she was traveling skidded backwards off the road into a post. Miss Simpson's ankle was broken and her shoulder wrenched.

Miss Simpson will hold office hours at her home, 61 North Prospect Street, Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:00 to 12.00 a.m., and 2.00 to 4.00 p.m. She expects to be back at school by February 1.

Health Council to Sponsor Vic Dance On Saturday Night

On Saturday, January 12, the Health Council will sponsor a dance in the Student Lounge after the basketball game. The music for the informal gathering will be on records and cokes will be served during the evening.

Professor and Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Cummings will be chaperons.

Harriet Barron '46, and Dorothy Whaley '47, president and vice-president of the Health Council respectively, are in charge of the dance aided by the following members: Joyce Colby '47, and Kathryn Eaton '49, refreshments; Lila Toomin '49, music: Beatrice Bickford '47, and Phyllis Wright '47, tickets, and Flora Miller '49, posters.

Admission for the evening will be 25 cents a couple and 15 cents stag. A large group is expected at the second social function of the new quarter.

Rev. Myers Speaks On World Problems

With a criticism which made U. V. M. students at Tuesday's chapel services take notice, Rev. Skillman E. Myers of Burlington's Unitarian Church pointed out that American students are apt to have a passive attitude toward world problems.

Only a sensitive conscience, he said, can realize that we must share in the care of the world's people. In addition to being alert to smaller and more personal matters, it is necessary to keep a will that never wavers, one which may not have immediate influence, but which may eventually determine social policies.

Reverend Myers, who led several of the Sigma Phi Sunday night discussion groups last year, told students that only through devotion to God and an honest belief in His love, can our lives be made better in the coming year

150 Returning Vets Bring Back Pre-War Spirit to Vt. Campus

By Rita McGarry and Virginia Donaldson

Hail to the veterans who are returning and bringing back the old Vermont pre-war spirit. Old faces and new are appearing above the ruptured ducks on campus. We two inquiring co-eds attempted to make a brief survey of the happenings in the lives of a few of the vets.

From a certain vet at Converse who is also a former U.V.M. student we hear that the German frauleins were all right —unquote. There are those who left U.V.M. and found prettier women and then there are those who balance the other side. Harry Bolwell, who was here with the Air Corps in '43 liked it so well that he chalked one up for Vermont and returned here after his discharge in October '44. Harry is a native of Kearney, N. J., and is enrolled as a Frosh in the Mechanical Engineering Course. His roommate, Bob Hunziker, is a sophomore pre-medical student, having previously studied at the University of Colorado and U.V.M. He was overseas one year with the 95th Infantry and saw action in France, Belgium, Holland, and Germany.

Norwich Grad Challenges

The Air Corps seems to be more than holding its own around here. Two former buddies—Ed Doyle, a second quarter vet, and Wally Martin, a graduate student enrolled for this quarter, ran into each other last week and proceeded to discuss their "various" ventures in Africa, Corsica, Sicily, Malta and Italy. Wally has a B.S. degree from Norwich and we gather that his heart still belongs over there since he is willing to bet any stout-hearted Vermont man that Norwich will trounce U.V.M. in the forthcoming basketball game. Challenges will be accepted at Fort Ethan Allen, where he and his wife are now living.

Bill Flanders of Vergennes, Vt., and Mitchell Carey of Ludlow, Vt., are two more Air Corps rooters, the former a bombardier and the latter a navigator. Certainly is a small world—Bart Barry, a former U.V.M.'er who returned to college last quarter was Carey's instructor at navigation school in Texas.

Praise for U. V. M.

Another Brockton, Mass., fellow and a Phi Delt pledge is Lincoln "Butch" Bailey who returned to enroll in the business course after serving three years in the Navy. While we're on the subject of the Navy we'll introduce you to Miss Alice Plumridge who was in the WAVES for two years. Alice studied medical technology while in the service and liked it very much so decided to continue in this field after the war. U.V.M. was recommended to her as one of the best colleges in the country offering this course, so to Vermont she came.

From the home of one of our rivals hails "Dusty" Miller who is returning to the Business Curriculum after leaving in '42. Dusty comes from Hanover, N. H., and served with the Army Medics in the ETO.

Frank Eklund, a former Phi Delt brother in the class of '45 says that the biggest difference he notices about the campus is the overwhelming (?) abundance of women. Do you really mind, Frank? He is living at Converse along with the multitude and says that it isn't too bad.

The only interviewed vet who served in the CBI theater was Larry Ballou who comes from Chester, Vt. He was with the Army's Military Intelligence Department for three years and is enrolled in the pre-med course.

Another Phi Delt, Dick Flynn, originally of the class of '44 has resumed his endeavors toward a degree in Political Science. He now places himself in the class of '46 or so. Dick served in the

All Sororities to Rush New Girls on Campus This Term

Sorority rushing will start officially Sunday, January 13, when eligible freshmen and transfers will visit open houses. The girls will be divided into eight groups, each group starting at a different sorority and spending a half hour at each of four houses, taking in the remaining four the following Sunday, January 20.

Informal parties will be held January 26 and February 2. New Pan Hellenic rules state that invitations are to be sent on penny post cards, that parties will have no central theme, that there will be no decorations except name tags, and that the entertainment must be of a sort in which rushees can participate, except for the singing of sorority songs. Of course there will be neither entertainment nor refreshments at the open houses.

February 3 is the date for the last open house. At this time all houses will be open, rushees may go to as many as they wish between the hours of 2.00 and 5.00 p.m. Formal parties will be held February 4-12, omitting Sunday, and pledging will take place February 14.

In view of the anti-sorority talk which has spread over the campus Pan-Hellenic Council voted to having an open rushing system. Every woman student on the campus eligible for rushing regardless of race or religion will be rushed. The eight sororities on campus will each entertain mixed groups instead of last year's system whereby only six nights were allowed for final parties.

Constitution of U.V.M. Students May Be Amended

Candidate Platforms To Be Presented at Special Convention

Officers for the Executive Committee of Student Government will be elected the second Monday in February instead of the third, which the Constitution now stipulates, if the amendment which the Committee undertook Monday, January 7, is passed. Rita McGarry, '47, chairman of the committee on reorganizing the election procedure, reported that as long as elections for officers are held the third week in February they are apt to conflict and share student attention with Kake Walk.

In accordance with the constitution, the student body will discuss and vote on the amendment in a forum one week from tonight, January 18. No other proposed changes in election procedure conflict with the constitution. While the new rules have not yet been formulated the principal change is that no student may sign more than two of the four candidates' petition for junior and sophomore representatives, or more than one of the two freshmen.

In an effort to clean up the bulletin boards, all present notices of lost and found articles will be removed and in their place Student Government will post one sheet divided into "Lost" and "Found," on which students will write in their notices. Dick Aulette, '47, was appointed to change the sheet every week, and students wishing to continue a notice must write it in again. Mr. Kingsley has set aside a board near the main entrance of Waterman for notices about second-hand

Sunday Heralds Opening of Rushing

Metropolitan Star Will Appear in Burlington

Community Concert Presents Baritone

Leonard Warren to Be Third Artist in Series

Leonard Warren, a leading Metropolitan Opera baritone and one of the most sought after artists in the concert and radio fields, will be heard here on Friday, January 11 at 8.15 p.m. in the Memorial Auditorium.

Warren, a native New Yorker, was preparing for a business career at Columbia University, when his hobby, singing, led to a three year engagement at Radio City Music Hall. Before this time he had not made any professional study of music.

In the 1938 Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, judges awarded him first prize among 700 contestants. This was followed by six months in Milan, Italy, under the great dramatic masters. During this time he absorbed seven operatic roles. On Friday, January 11, 1939, Leonard Warren made his Metropolitan debut, as Paolo in "Simon Boccanegra." In seven years Warren has given concerts throughout this country and South America, and he also appeared as featured soloist and guest artist on the "Treasury Hour" with Toscanini Kostelanetz and the RCA Victor broadcasts. With the recording ban lifted, many of Mr. Warren's recorded selections will be on sale again soon.

Plans for Campus Drive Under Way

$3000 Goal For WSSF Campaign Starts Jan. 24

For the benefit of the newer students and also to refresh the memories of the older ones the World Student Service Fund was established in this country in 1937. Its activities were extended to Europe and Asia with the outbreak of war. The movement, backed by all faiths, is an emergency humanitarian agent of these organizations. Its officers consist of distinguished American educators. Its basic principles are: Impartial service to all students and professors in need, irrespective of race, religion or country; rehabilitation of university life; cooperation among students; promotion of self-help and cooperated efforts. In 1944-45, $70,000.00 was sent to student prisoners of war in Europe, $10,958.00 to prisoners in the Far East, Canada, and United States, $1,850 to students in Russia.

The coming drive for $3,000 begins January 24. The committee is confident that this sum can be easily reached.

DEAN SIMPSON HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Last December 26 as Dean Simpson was returning from her home in East Salisbury, the automobile in which she was traveling skidded backwards off the road into a post. Miss Simpson's ankle was broken and her shoulder wrenched.

Miss Simpson will hold office hours at her home, 61 North Prospect Street, Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9.00 to 12.00 a.m., and 2.00 to 4.00 p.m. She expects to be back at school by February 1.

Health Council to Sponsor Vic Dance On Saturday Night

On Saturday, January 12, the Health Council will sponsor a dance in the Student Lounge after the basketball game. The music for the informal gathering will be on records and cokes will be served during the evening.

Professor and Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Cummings will be chaperons.

Harriet Barron '46, and Dorothy Whaley '47, president and vice-president of the Health Council respectively, are in charge of the dance aided by the following members: Joyce Colby '47, and Kathryn Eaton '49, refreshments; Lila Toomin '49, music; Beatrice Bickford '47, and Phyllis Wright '47, tickets, and Flora Miller '49, posters.

Admission for the evening will be 25 cents a couple and 15 cents stag. A large group is expected at the second social function of the new quarter.

Rev. Myers Speaks On World Problems

With a criticism which made U. V. M. students at Tuesday's chapel services take notice, Rev. Skillman E. Myers of Burlington's Unitarian Church pointed out that American students are apt to have a passive attitude toward world problems.

Only a sensitive conscience, he said can realize that we must share in the care of the world's people. In addition to being alert to smaller and more personal matters, it is necessary to keep a will that never wavers, one which may not have immediate influence, but which may eventually determine social policies.

Reverend Myers, who led several of the Sigma Phi Sunday night discussion groups last year, told students that only through devotion to God and an honest belief in His love, can our lives be made better in the coming year.

Junior Week Will Feature Name Band

With the return of many old acquaintances and old traditions, the University is proud to welcome back Junior Week, an age old tradition, to be ushered in on our campus, Founder's Day, May 3.

The program for the week consists of a variety of events which will be sponsored and presented mainly by members of the Junior Class, but with aid given by members of the other classes. Among the events will be a P Rade consisting of floats which will be judged and awarded various prizes, the Junior Prom consisting of a name band of your choosing and a 2:00 night. Other events will consist of a play, various house parties and picnics.

Committees have been drawn up during the past weeks and chairmen and their committees will finally be voted upon Thursday, January 10. The committee will consist mainly of Juniors, with assistance from sophomores. A list of committees will be posted after the meeting.

All Sororities to Rush New Girls on Campus This Term

Sorority rushing will start officially Sunday, January 13 when eligible freshmen and transfers will visit open houses. The girls will be divided into eight groups, each group starting at a different sorority and spending a half hour at each of four houses, taking in the remaining four the following Sunday, January 20.

Informal parties will be held January 26 and February 2. New Pan-Hellenic rules state that invitations are to be sent on penny post cards, that parties will have no central theme, that there will be no decorations except name tags, and that the entertainment must be of a sort in which freshmen can participate except for the singing of sorority songs. Of course there will be neither entertainment nor refreshments at the open houses.

February 9 is the date for the last open house. At this time all houses will be open and girls may go to as many as they wish, between the hours of 2:00 and 5:00 p.m. Formal parties will be held February 4-12 omitting Sunday and pledging will take place February 14.

In view of the anti-sorority talk which has passed over the campus, Pan Hellenic Council stated, "Having an open rushing system, every woman student on the campus regardless of race or religion will be rushed. The right to participate in campus will each entertain mixed groups instead of last year's system whereby only six nights were allowed for final parties."

150 Returning Vets Bring Back Pre-War Spirit to Vt. Campus

By Rita McGarry and Virginia Donaldson

Hats to the veterans who are returning and bringing back the old Vermont pre-war spirit. Old faces and new are appearing above the ruptured ducks on campus. We two inquiring co-eds attempted to make a brief survey of the happenings in the lives of a few of the vets.

From a certain vet at Converse who is also a former U.V.M. student we hear that the German frauleins were all right —unquote. There are those who left U.V.M. and found prettier women and then there are those who balance the other side. Harry Bolwell, who was here with the Air Corps in '43 liked it so well that he chalked one up for Vermont and returned here after his discharge in October '44. Harry is a native of Kearney, N. J., and is enrolled as a Frosh in the Mechanical Engineering Course. His roommate, Bob Hunziker, is a sophomore pre-medical student having previously studied at the University of Colorado and U.V.M. He was overseas one year with the 95th Infantry and saw action in France, Belgium, Holland, and Germany.

Norwich Grad Challenges

The Air Corps seems to be more than holding its own around here. Two former buddies—Ed Doyle, a second quarter vet, and Wally Martin, a graduate student enrolled for this quarter, ran into each other last week and proceeded to discuss their "various" ventures in Africa, Corsica, Sicily, Malta and Italy. Wally has a B.S. degree from Norwich and we gather that his heart still belongs over there since he is willing to bet any stout-hearted Vermont man that Norwich will trounce U.V.M. in the forthcoming basketball game. Challenges will be accepted at Fort Ethan Allen, where he and his wife are now living.

Bill Flanders of Vergennes, Vt., and Mitchell Carey of Ludlow, Vt., are two more Air Corps rooters, the former a bombardier and the latter a navigator. Certainly is a small world—Hart Barr, a former U.V.M.'er who returned to college last quarter was Carey's instructor at navigation school in Texas.

Praise for U. V. M.

Another Brockton, Mass., fellow and a Phi Delt pledge is Lincoln "Butch" Bailey who returned to enroll in the business course after serving three years in the Navy. While we're on the subject of the Navy we'll introduce you to Miss Alice Plumridge who was in the WAVES for two years. Alice studied medical technology while in the service and liked it very much so decided to continue in this field after the war. U.V.M. was recommended to her as one of the best colleges in the country offering this course, so to Vermont she came.

From the home of one of our rivals hails "Dusty" Miller who is returning to the Business Curriculum after leaving in '42. Dusty comes from Hanover, N. H., and served with the Army Medics in the ETO.

Frank Eklund, a former Phi Delt brother in the class of '45 says that the biggest difference he notices about the campus is the overwhelming (?) abundance of women. Do you really mind, Frank? He is living at Converse along with the multitude and says that it isn't too bad.

The only interviewed vet who served in the CBI theater was Larry Ballou who comes from Chester, Vt. He was with the Army's Military Intelligence Department for three years and is enrolled in the pre med course.

Another Phi Delt, Dick Flynn, originally of the class of '44 has resumed his endeavors toward a degree in Political Science. He now places himself in the class of '48 or so. Dick served in the

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

1945 has passed out the door and "Kid Ac" has inducted it what baseball writers prefer to call the "new golden age of sports." But with "Fuzzy" Evans the basketball future looks anything but golden. "Happy New Year" proved to be the shocking news that court ace Jake would be ineligible for the balance of the season.

Jake, studying medicine under the Army Specialized Training Program will have two more years of college eligibility left when he is discharged in April, since service playing does not count as a player's record. As a result Jake may be teaming up with Larry Killick next winter to give Vermont one of its strongest teams in history.

For the present season Coach Evans will be forced to revamp his lineup drastically. The entire offensive setup had been built around the lanky forward. Unless there is an outstanding star among the newly enrolled freshmen, Coach Evans will probably switch Co-Capt. Howie Stein from the guard position to a forward spot. Ken Pierce is a fixture at the other forward spot.

Ralph Becker, "Dusty" Weatherby, and Veteran Bob French will battle it out for the center post. In the rear court Julie Levine and Dick Mahoney loom as possible starters, with a former U.V.M. player, Tommy Vermont ready to step in.

Along the national collegiate front, Wyoming stamped itself as one of the nation's top teams by cleaning up the best the East had to offer. Notre Dame proved to be as tough in basketball as it perennially is in football by edging DePaul 15 points and then coming back to edge the westerners 43-42.

Yale stepped into the No. 1 spot in New England with its fifth straight win last week. Bunched right behind the Eli are St. Michael's with four triumphs and Holy Cross with three unbeaten tilts. Next in line and boasting an unbeaten record in two contests is "Fuzzy" Evans' U.V.M. outfit.

Catamounts Battle Grenier Field Squad at Auditorium Sat. Night

First Five Still a Secret; 6 of 14 Varsity Men Over 6 Ft.; Kittens to Tackle B.H.S.

Coach Dana Evans closed his eighth and ninth game with Grenier Field here to be the toughest opponent on the 14-game schedule. Tomorrow night at the Memorial Auditorium gives a taste the Bees against the Combat Field Squad. Since they downed the Catamount five early in December the Lowmen have added two more victories to their belt, one by the powerful Hyde Athletic Club, and the latest by a hard fought contest with Norwich. Both of these teams have been given battle by many of the 2nd and 3rd varsity men of the present Catamount squad.

With the return to the vets also comes the return of some height on the squad. Six of the 14 varsity men are over the six foot mark while in the first two games only two of the hardwood pounders hit the six foot notch.

First Five Not Yet Picked

From the mentor's perch on the bleachers comes the word that anything may happen in the way of a line up before the game tomorrow night. Battling it out for the pivot spot are Stretch Becker starting center in the first two tilts; Bob French, a six foot two vet from West Springfield, Mass., and Dick Dixon, a St. Albans boy who hits the six foot three mark.

In the guard spots will probably be "Hammy" Livingstone, another St. Albans vet, and "Cal" Parrow, a six footer from Winooski, with "Dink" Mangoney and "Johnny" Levine, both former U.V.M. performers as reserves.

Howie Stein, who kept his activity mostly in the back court in the initial tilts has been switched to one of the forward spots and if he recovers from his illness sufficiently he will see action tomorrow night. Ken Pierce is still holding down his forward position and will be on the floor a good share of the time. Another contender for the forward berth is "Sonny" Houston a Barre man who can keep the net hot.

Art Collier, a new face on the squad is claimed by Great Neck L. I. and is another possible for the starting five. Art hits the six foot one inch notch and can use his height on the boards.

Two Burlington boys, Tom Clermont and Ted Stafford have made the squad and will be held in reserve with another West Springfield boy, Bob Forester.

The advance dope on the Grenier Field quintet is not in at the time of this writing but it is known that they have put a powerful two on the floor in all their previous games. Tonight will see if Mikes tie off against them and the outcome of this game will be a good indication of what the Cats will meet in Saturday night's battle.

The Evansmen will go into the fray with little experience after the changes in the line-up and after playing only two games before vacation while their opponents come to Burlington with an experienced team which has seen quite a bit of action in the season already.

J. V's in Preliminary

The Kittens under the coaching of Art Andy Landa will meet the Burlington High five in the preliminary tilt.

OUTING CLUB WILL SPONSOR SKI TRIP

Plans were completed at the Outing Club Council on Tuesday, January 8 to sponsor a trip to the Middlebury Carnival on January 19. A "no-reservation" Waterman will be posted for all who are interested in making this trip. Members are asked to sign immediately. A sign-up list for the ski trip to Stowe on Sunday, January 20, is also posted.

A membership drive for Outing Club members will be held Monday and Tuesday, January 14 and 15 from 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. At this time the newly arrived Outing Club emblems can be bought for 25 cents.

An Outing Club "Hay Ride" is in the offing for Friday, February 1. Plans for a skating party in combination with this "Hay Ride" are under discussion.

For the future, a revival of the annual "Mountain Day," a long tradition of U.V.M. in which the whole college treks up Mt. Mansfield is planned late in May.

At the Outing Club ski movies held at the Fleming Museum, the first membership booth of the Outing Club membership drive, was set up and membership tickets and emblems were sold.

Action again in the U.V.M. Bowling League. Tuesday night the Women Independents, the first spot club, took on the fourth place Pi Phi's and split the six points of the match, taking the high single and high triple honors. On the other alleys the Tri Delts split with the Alpha Chi's by taking the high team total by eight pins.

A. Beattie, 111; M. J. Little, 106, and Rae Giddings, 106, took away the high single honors Tuesday night and Giddings, 304, and Beattie, 301, also walked away with the high triples of the evening.

Standings of the eight teams going into this quarter are:

Women's Independents	38
Alpha Chi Omega	25
Men's Independents	25
Lambda Iota	24
Kappa Alpha Theta-Pi Beta Phi	19
Tri Delta-Sigma Gamma	15
Vets	15
Phi Sigma Delta	7

Last night the Men Independents met the Owls and the Phi Sigs took on the Vets but the scores were not known in time to beat the deadline. This corner picks the Vets and the Independents to take away most of the honors.

Watch the Tri Delts-Sigma Gamma both Independent teams, the Kappa Alpha Theta-Pi Phi combination and the Owls this quarter for the top berths.

Weather Detriment To Ski Practice

U.V.M. Ski Team to Meet Midd. Jan. 19

Vermont's veteran ski team, of which much is expected this year, saw its hopes for a last minute practice, before invading Middlebury for the first meet of the year, blasted last week-end. Fifty-five degree temperatures at Stowe forced abandonment of a team trip to the Green Mountain state's winter sports citadel.

Every member of the squad, however, did some practicing during the recent winter vacation. Dave Patch, Rod Galbraith, and Bob Lanou were in Stowe, while the other hopefuls practiced at or near their respective home towns. Patch showed up as potentially an ace jumper and downhill man. Galbraith looks good in downhill trials, while Lanou's specialties are downhill and slalom.

Showing up especially well in recent drills has been Ed Crane, a veteran of last year's powerhouse outfit. Crane is an ace slalom and downhill man.

Newcomer Larry Fagan, a veteran and formerly ski patrolman at Rutland for several years, has also impressed Coach "Ev" Bailey.

Another vet, Chuck Plumley, became the first casualty of the training season when a cable snapped and he hurt his hip on a downhill run. The injury was not serious and Plumley should be in top shape for the Middlebury meet January 19. The rest of the squad report nothing more serious than a few bruised hips and aching muscles.

"Tell all those newly enrolled veterans to come out for the squad. We can use them," comments Capt. P. Mallett.

Ski Experts Speak To Eager Sportsmen

Wednesday night in the Fleming Museum a large crowd saw a Ski Movie presented by Sepp Ruschp. This technicolor movie showed the ski centers of the east and west: Stowe, North Conway, Franconia, Sun Valley and many others.

Sepp Ruschp and "Ev" Bailey both spoke. Mr. Bailey is the new coach of Vermont's ski teams. He also is a member of the Ruschp Ski School.

This movie was sponsored by the Outing Club to build up ski enthusiasm at U. V. M. The club is sponsoring trips to Stowe as well as giving instruction.

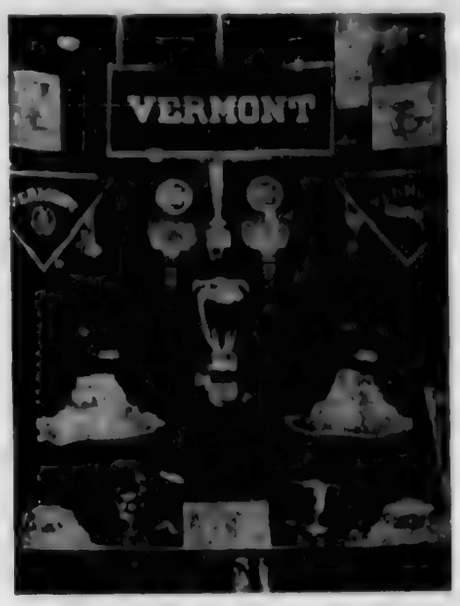
Forum Jan. 18 for Const. Amendment

An amendment to the student constitution as proposed by student government will be discussed and voted on at an open meeting Friday, January 18, in the Student Lounge at 7.30 p.m.



As stated in the constitution the elections of the four officers of Student Government are now held during the third week of February. The committee wishes to amend this to read, "the elections of the officers of the executive committee of Student Government be held the second week in February." The committee feels that this change is necessary to avoid confusion and confliction of interests with the Kake Walk elections which are held in the third week.

The constitution states that if half the student body is present at the meeting a majority of those present is needed to pass the amendment. If the meeting is attended by less than half the student body a two-third's vote is necessary for passage of the amendment.

Two nominations for each officer of Student Government are made by the nomination committee composed of Boulder, Mortar Board and the Deans of the College. These will be announced on the 20th of January. Petitions for additional nominations may be secured by the managers from the information booth in Waterman on January 21. They must have at least 100 signatures and must be turned in to the information booth one week later.

Campaigning will take place between the 28th of January and the second week of February. During the campaign period a convocation will be held which will give an opportunity for the presidential candidates to lay down their platforms. These elections are among the most important during the college year so careful thought should attend the nominations and elections.

Plans For Peacetime Kake Walk Revive Traditional Masquerade

KAKE WALK PRIZES

"Reconversion" Set As General Theme

Under the title of "Reconversion," the Kake Walk Committee of 1946 has begun its campaign to have the biggest and best Kake Walk in the history of the forty-eight held at the University of Vermont. Production chairmen, Douglas G. Parizeau and S. Robert Pulleyn, and financial chairman, Jean B. Hamilton, have issued the names of committee heads, and the rules for entering "Walkin' Fo' de Kake" and the Stunts.

The first in order of events as now scheduled is the Masquerade Dance held in the gymnasium, Friday night the twenty-second. Dress is to suit the theme of Kake Walk, the individual's own originality, or one may dress formally. Saturday evening the Father son, Mother daughter Banquet will be held at Waterman. All parents of students will be issued individual invitations. Immediately following will be "Walkin' Fo de Kake." Stunts, and presentation of awards in the Memorial Auditorium. Sorority open houses will be held Sunday afternoon.

Those heading committees for the first peace-time Kake Walk in four years are as follows: Dance, Dale Conley; Publicity, Sally Merwin, Kake Walk King and Queen, Bette Mansfield; Balloting, Boulder Society; Awards, Pearl Weissbard; Kake Walking, John Reagan; Ushering, Sophomore Aides; Stunts, John Lantman; Program, Robert Rosenberg, Assistant to Financial chairman, Leslie Bell; Sculpturing, Millicent Mandel and Harriet Barron; Banquet, Mortar Board and Boulder with Nancy McNamara in charge; and Douglas Parizeau as Master of Ceremonies Saturday night.

Stunt Rules

1. There are ten fraternities, eight sororities, and the Independents who are eligible to have competitive stunts at Kake Walk time.

2. The above are required to submit a complete plot in detail together with a complete statement of all proposed properties and lighting with an explanation of their use to a committee composed of three judges on or before February 12, at 12 o'clock noon. No changes in the original stunt as written will be allowed without the approval of the committee.

Vet Social Debut Takes Place Sat.

Marking its debut on the social calendar of the Winter Quarter, the Veterans' Club will play host to all U. V. M. students at a semi-formal dance to be held in the Rotunda, Saturday night, January 19. With its ranks swollen by the new group of incoming veterans, it is expected that some 300 veterans will attend.

Against a background of military color, Bernie Kriessel and his seven will supply music for dancing. Dress for the occasion will be semiformal. The men can leave those tucs and tails in the moth balls with business suits the accepted fashion. While the girls may choose between evening gowns and afternoon dresses.

Tickets selling at $1.20 per couple may be bought anytime from Dale Conley, Rich Harper, John Gillmore, or Phil Johnson. There will also be a general ticket sale in the main hallway of the Waterman Building on Thursday and Friday prior to the dance.

Victory Is Waiting on You to Sacrifice and Get More Bonds

Sororities to End Discrimination as Rushing Commences

With sorority rushing beginning on campus Pan-Hellenic Society has adopted in its new rushing system the objectives of the Greek Letter Reform movement. At a meeting for freshman and transfer girls on Thursday, January 10, at the Waterman Building the Pan-Hellenic Society announced the new liberal policy in rushing.

Henceforth, all sorority rushing will be on a basis of no racial or religious discrimination towards any girl. The Greek Letter Reform announced that an overwhelming majority of sororities on campus have announced their intentions to discard all discriminatory acts, either written or traditional, in their chapters. Most of these sororities were unanimous in their opinion that these discriminatory acts should be removed and that a more liberal rushing policy should follow.

Therefore, according to the new rushing system, all girls, whether Protestant, Catholic or Jewish will visit all sororities regardless of racial or religious distinction, and the bidding of these new girls is to be on a basis of no discrimination in any overt form. The Greek Letter Reform movement, which began at the end of the Religion and Life Parley in November, has considered this an overwhelming example of progress in the right direction.

All fraternities will adopt these objectives.

U.V.M. ENROLLMENT REACHES 1200 MARK

Although official figures are not yet available, student enrollment at the University for the quarter just beginning is already well above the 1,200 mark, Director of Admissions Heath K. Riggs said today. With late enrollments continuing on through Saturday, January 12, it will go considerably higher, he believes.

Of the new students enrolling at this time, about 160 are veterans, which brings the number of veterans on campus to approximately 325. Nearly 50 of these are former U. V. M. students, returning to complete their work.

Last year's enrollment figures showed 1000 students on campus.

Tea Dances Given For New Students

Thetas and Alpha Chis Entertain over Weekend

The ex-servicemen who have just entered U. V. M. are receiving the heartiest of welcomes from the girls on campus. The sororities are making these men feel right at home and collegiate once again.

Kappa Alpha Theta had a get acquainted tea dance in honor of the veterans Friday, January 11, from 4.00 to 6.00 p.m. During this time an estimated 100 men crossed the Theta threshold. Soft and sweet melodies played on the vic while the girls and their guests sipped punch and ate cookies and cake. During intermission and change of record time, everyone nibbled on peanuts and the oldtimers from way back, talked over past and present situations. Aileen Nichols, '48, and Mary Hageman, '48, were in charge of the tea dance. Acting chaperones were Professor and Mrs. Carpenter, Jeanne and Bob Pulleyn and Miss Selfe, Theta housemother.

Alpha Chi Omega entertained 125 veterans at their tea dance and buffet supper Saturday, January 12, from 4 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. The house was quite crowded, yet the vic kept on playing and the couples continued dancing. Sandwiches, coffee and cake were served as the girls gave the new men a preview of their life at U. V. M. Those in charge of the affair were Alberta Read, '46, Olive Morris, '46, and Rosemary Barry, '48. Professor and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter, and Mrs. Jane Bruce, housemother at the Alpha Chi house were the chaperones.

The veterans have shown an interest in social affairs such as these and more are planned for the future.

President Appoints Three To Membership in Faculty

Faculty appointments have been announced by President John S. Millis. Clarence J. Douglas, recently retired from the Army with the rank of Colonel, has been appointed assistant professor of civil engineering; Ernest W. Hartung, Jr., has been appointed instructor in zoology; Robert H. Kroepsch has been appointed an instructor in the English department.

Professor Douglas graduated from the University of Vermont in 1929. Before entering the Army in 1940, he occupied positions in industrial engineering. His service was with the Engineering Corps, both in this country and in the Pacific theater.

Ernest W. Hartung received his A.B. from Dartmouth in 1938, and his A.M. and Ph.D. from Harvard in 1940-42. He has held posts as a teaching fellow at Harvard and at Radcliffe, and has had experience as a laboratory technician at Flushing Hospital, New York. From 1942 to 1945 he was with the Army Air Force as an instructor in aviation physiology, retiring with the rank of captain.

Robert H. Kroepsch, recently retired from the Army with the rank of captain, will coach University dramatics as well as instructing in the English department. A graduate of Bates College in the year 1933, he took his Ed.M. at Harvard. He has held teaching jobs in high schools in Melrose, Mass., Glens Falls, N. Y., Pembroke, Mass., where he was principal, and has also been a member of the Harvard Summer Session faculty. Entering the service in July, 1942, he was attached as security advisor to the Pacific headquarters of the Army Airways Communications system, which provided all radio navigational aids to aircraft in flight for both the army and the navy. Captain Kroepsch's terminal leave expired on January 6, and he assumed his duties at the University on January 7.

WSSF SEEKS $3,000 TO HELP STUDENTS OF OTHER NATIONS

Members of the Steering Committee of WSSF met Thursday to discuss the WSSF drive and appointed the following committee chairmen: Publicity, Joan Parkhurst; Special Events, Dick Audette; Treasurer, Betty Reed; Listing, Marilyn Mills. The drive for $3,000 is to be opened at the January 24 convocation by a special speaker. This drive will continue for three months. One person is to be appointed for every ten students to canvass dorms, faculty, and employees. The art classes, under the direction of Mrs. Mills, are to make posters for the campaign. Events already planned are a faculty auction and a dance, which will be held in place of the one scheduled for Newman Club on January 26. Displays of photographs will be shown in the bookstore window to show the conditions which this organization hopes to improve, and the work it has already done.

Spirit of the Times

As well as the tangible realities like chemistry 124 and advanced Spanish conversation, meetings that seem to fall three deep for the same hours of the same day and a little pink card that says "You are under warning," there is present on all college campuses an intangible something which is just as vital to the college as the professors, the students, and the deans. For want of a more definite name, this intangibility has been classified generally as school spirit, campus spirit, or just morale.

What is Campus Spirit? Is it, as the easily influenced think, the act of cheering for the team even when you feel like sobbing for their loss? Is it the force behind the students who support the Honor System, the Greek Reform Committee and the Student Union By-laws? Is it lacking when students report that their books, wallets and mittens have been "permanently borrowed" by an elusive cloakroom poacher? Is it lacking when meetings are unattended—when the Chapel speaker faces rows of sparsely filled pews?

There could be as many definitions for Campus spirit as there are students at the University. And yet, each individual definition represents a committee of one which is personally responsible for the maintenance of the very thing he has defined.

There's geometrical proposition about the whole being the sum of its parts. Campus spirit could well be substituted for that proposition—the spirit of U. V. M. will be just as good as each student wants to make it. Perfection would be organizations with 100 percent support of the members —classes in which students ceased to be "intellectual sponges"—criticism that is constructive, rather than universally destructive. The ideal is justified by the opening lines of the Vermont pledge: "Because we believe in Vermont."

So, Campus Spirit becomes an individual matter. It exists everywhere there is a person who cares about his college—who is willing to do all he can, actively, to make the Vermont campus alive to the community, the nation and the world of which it is a part. In this way, campus spirit becomes a reality and ceases to be an intangible.

Action

By Joan R. Levin

Way back in our sweet and carefree high school days — remember? — our geometry teachers worked hard and patiently to impart to us the fact that the whole is equal to the sum of its parts. It's a simple axiom, and we memorized it, and with the knowledge of it, we solved geometric problems more easily.

We're hearing that very basic axiom again today—and not only from mathematicians. Our churches, our scholars, our politicians, our newspapers, our thinkers are shouting it: "the whole is equal to the sum of its parts."

It is a universal truth. It's unavoidable. And most important, it is applicable. An organization is as good as the members which comprise it. Its strength and potency depend upon the strength, the interest, and the wisdom of every single one of its members.

Living in today's world is a challenge and a privilege. Into our hands has been placed the all-important duty of molding from an abysmally chaotic holocaust, a harmonious and happy world. And the successful execution of this duty requires that each individual achieve an attitude of sobriety, objectivity and intelligent, balanced thoughtfulness. Is there anyone so selfish or so slothful as to deny these obligations, when the peace—indeed, the very existence of the world—depends upon their fulfillment?

Yes, the individual is the fountainhead. And the mutual and whole-hearted cooperation of individuals is the vital issue. Liberty and union must be one and inseparable.

So is it with the world. So is it with any central body, with any league or organization in which there is participation of various elements. So is it with our University.

Make no mistake. The University of Vermont is you! It is every member of the administration, faculty and student body. It is as good, as fine, as outstanding as you are. Without your ardent interest, it is weak. Without your participation it will deteriorate. Without your support it will fail. But with these things it will flourish.

There have been complaints that U. V. M. is dominated by certain cliques and specific individuals. There is no denying that these protestations are, to a degree, well-based. But stop for a moment and examine. Who composes these cliques and who are these individuals? The very ones who exhibit an active interest and a sincere willingness to work constructively! Does it not follow, then, that if more of us were to assume the responsibility that our very presence here entails, more of us would have the privilege of leadership and influence?

It is fallacious to assume that any member of our campus community is inconsequential or insignificant. Your place here is what you make it. Make it important!

What was that axiom? The whole is equal to nothing more or less than the sum of its constituent parts. If we learn that and learn it well, we will find that the solutions to our problems—large and small—are simple beyond belief.

NOTICE

Last quarter many of the veterans who returned to school after a considerable lapse of time told me that they found it difficult to study and their work was suffering on that account. The administration realizes that this will undoubtedly be the case with many of the veterans who entered at the beginning of the winter quarter and wishes these students to have as much help as possible.

Prof. Britten Riker of the Department of Psychology will give a lecture on "How to Study," Friday, January 25, at 4.30 p.m., in Room 27, Williams Science Hall. Attendance will be required of all veterans who entered at the beginning of the winter quarter and have not previously been students at the University of Vermont.

The University Store has ordered a book, "Learning More By Effective Study," which may be obtained by veterans as part of their regular textbook equipment. We suggest that veterans get this book at the University Store to aid them in acquiring good study habits as soon as copies are received.

Other students who wish to attend Professor Riker's lecture will be at liberty to do so. E. SWIFT, Secretary.

Reporter Interviews Ormsby, Clarifies Strike Situations

By Ben Burston

Colonel Ormsby has a way of getting around. He's the type of person who is liable to turn up anywhere. Take, for example, last Christmas vacation. Ormsby, British investigator extraordinary, found himself in Stamford, Conn. The occasion: a one day work stoppage of all Stamford's industries in a sympathy strike with the workers of Yale and Towne Co. (makers of Yale Locks).

According to Ormsby, there were 20,000 people massed in front of the town hall. Many factories were represented by workers who paraded through the city carrying placards showing their sympathy with the Yale and Towne workers. This was the sentiment of the posters: "We licked the Axis; we can lick Carey." (Carey is the owner of the plant in question.)

Speeches were given on the town hall steps. Representatives of other unions pledged their support of the strikers. A speaker from Hartford said that Carey was trying to starve the workers into yielding (the strike had been going on for eight weeks), but, he said, collections are being taken up in other cities so as to ease the burden of the strikers.

In the city courtroom, labor and management were battling it out. There were two main issues in the strike: The question of having a closed shop, and that of increased wages. Monson, representing Yale and Towne, said that the company's policy was to allow the workers to have their own choice as to union membership. The company proposed a [illegible] creased take home pay," [illegible] torney Sturm pointed out [illegible] this. If the workers work longer [illegible] more money. This, he said, [illegible] really a raise. (He added, that [illegible] Yale and Towne were not [illegible] provide for a living, especially [illegible] times of higher costs.)

I asked Colonel Ormsby [illegible] thought of the matter. He turned [illegible] and very disgustedly said, "It [illegible] a show the boys put on. They [illegible] negotiating a contract in there [illegible] bickering, hurling insults, making [illegible] and trying to impress themselves [illegible] their own importance. Neither [illegible] willing to give in. It was a [illegible] farce.

"If this is representative of [illegible] management meetings, I have [illegible] for the country in the near [illegible] added. "If labor and management [illegible] only get together in good faith and [illegible] estly try to work something [illegible] the representatives would forget [illegible] themselves and not sling personalities [illegible] at one another, I am sure that the [illegible] and length of the strikes in the [illegible] would decrease."

With those words and a [illegible] "cheerio!" Ormsby slipped through [illegible] crowd and rushed to a Western Union [illegible] Office (they weren't on strike [illegible] time) to wire an urgent message to [illegible] land Yard.

Letters to the Editor . . .

Letters to the Editor of the CYNIC:

Spike said, "If you'd like to write an article on anything other than the Honor System, Annie, we'd be glad to print it."

Well, most of you know, by now, that I can't resist an opportunity to shoot off my face. This is my Swan Song. I am leaving for reasons I consider adequate. No, I didn't flunk out. So, here's my parting thrust on my pet theme.

Take this business of "maturity." That word has been thrown around so much in the Honor System fight that I think the true meaning of it has been lost in the shuffle. Webster says: "Mature; ripe; full-grown; ready for application or use."

Seems to me the first definition with all its connotations from the point of view of pure slang is the only one applicable to some of the adolescent arguing and knifing that has been going on. That applies to me too, and not only on the Honor System.

Maturity

None of us are "full-grown." Many of us never will be. It's a pretty high goal. "Ready for application or use," is a sensible and realistic definition of maturity that we can hope to believe. But only if we work at it.

Dave Hackett is right. It does take maturity to live under an Honor System. Ready maturity. Applicable maturity. First, you have to know what honor is. Then you've got to make it your own. Not a mirror image of what some one else thinks it is. Not what Dave says it is. What you, yourself, after deliberation, believe in, live by, and find as indispensable to everyday things as God or your own right arm.

There are too many carbon-copy brains in this world. Too many people who quote Shakespeare, Professor Evans, "Ma" Henderson, Father Divine, Aldous Huxley and myriad others.

Doesn't matter who they quote as long as they don't have to think for themselves. I call them intellectual parasites. They latch on to a clever or philosophical phrase—plagiarized—and flash it around in the manner of a "nouveau riche" with a hundred dollar bill. It's all very well to learn from others but crimers, do you have to learn verbatim?

Reasoning

It is, I suppose, useful maturity to hold your liquor well, flirt with the boys without getting into trouble, get an A in Chemistry without cheating or have a 41-inch chest expansion that positively drives the girls wild. However, take it from one who knows, that gets awfully dull. Intellectual maturity is the only maturity that is truly applicable and useful your whole life through.

Was the boy who yapped at [illegible] night outside the Bookstore becaus[illegible] views on the Honor System mat[illegible] said he thought it was "a good [illegible] Of course, he wouldn't turn in [illegible] for cheating! But it would be a fi[illegible] for others and he therefore int[illegible] vote for it. I spent half an hou[illegible] to make him see that was not hon[illegible] it was adolescent reasoning. Tha[illegible] being dishonest with himself an[illegible] to his fellow students. He c[illegible] me for saying in public what he [illegible] believed. The only difference [illegible] I have sufficient intellectual inte[illegible] to care to force on others what [illegible] not have for myself.

I am not free to say in how ma[illegible] fields I have found numerous [illegible] priggish, selfish and bigoted in[illegible] maturity of their designs for l[illegible] the shoe fits—

Convictions

You say the faculty treats us [illegible] Miss Whosits in the Whatsit[illegible] ment, pats you on the head [illegible] "Now you are three." When [illegible] through with my course I will [illegible] five." Mighty white of her. [illegible] She expects you to think as [illegible] You fight for awhile and then [illegible] order to pass her course. I [illegible] Form your own opinions. M[illegible] they are well-grounded and that [illegible] believe in them. Stick with [illegible] you've been proven wrong. Yo[illegible] a dozen a week, but the practice [illegible] the courage of your convictions [illegible] valuable. It will do more to m[illegible] take you farther along the r[illegible] the goal of being ready to l[illegible] Honor System, than removal [illegible] from the examination rooms. [illegible] you've reached the goal for [illegible] and useful intellectual maturity [illegible] need an Honor System. Try it [illegible] lating and it's fun.

U. V. M. Campus Life Changes With the Time

Redstone Campus History Keeps in Step With World

REDSTONE AS A PRIVATE HOME

Maybe you have wondered why co-eds have come flocking to live at Redstone or why they are willing to forfeit proximity to Waterman in order to be an inmate of that outpost of our campus. Ask U. V. M. girls these questions and you will probably receive various answers.

Some may say that they love the view across it gives something to write home about. On one side you see Lake Champlain, Champlain Valley, and beyond the Adirondacks, and on the other what seems to have prompted the designing of the Vermont State seal.

Or others, who may not have time for sightseeing, may say that ever since they were freshmen Redstone has seemed the center of things. They will tell about the time when the girls first lived there, about the time when they had to park up and townsmen leave in favor of the army, and about the present regime and its slow return to normal.

But none of them ever tells you about Redstone before the girls came for probably none of them ever bothered to find out about it. But, everything has a beginning and Redstone's beginning is particularly intriguing.

Redstone 55 Years Old

In 1890 or 1891 Mr. A. A. Buell laid the foundations of what is now Redstone campus. That is all the stone buildings and one small wooden one. Mrs. M. C. Twitchell, daughter of its founder, lived there from its beginning until it became a part of the University in the spring of 1921. Now she lives down at the end of South Prospect Street on a plot of land once a part of the Buell estate. From here she has seen her home become what it now means to U. V. M. co-eds. Many changes have taken place as are obvious from her description of Redstone as it was when her family owned it. She tells us that the stone for Redstone and the Lodge came from what was then Willard's Ledge and is now known as the old stone quarry. Soon the same type of stone was discovered on the estate itself. So the stone for Redstone and the front wall was blasted out south of where Southwick now stands. This quarry is still there but now is mostly grown in.

Despite structural changes, Mrs. Twitchell thinks that the greatest difference in Redstone 1921 and 1945 is in the present lack of flowers, shrubs, trees, etc., not just around Redstone itself but in the surrounding landscape.

Then you could see the Old Mill Tower and much more of the lake and mountains than it is possible to see now that Burlington has grown older and larger. People used to drive into the back driveways to view that landscape.

In the path through the woods, now the favorite spot of co-eds, they cultivated ferns and wild orchids; on the back road near the Whiting Houses was a magnificent rose garden from which they used to cut two market baskets full daily.

And then there is Robinson Hall which originated in the Buell stable. This was, of course, entirely made over after the University took over by the conversion of the carriage house into the dining hall and the removal of the hay loft and chute.

Of course Southwick and Slade were not there at all then. Where the latter now stands was the vegetable garden in those days.

Before the Waterman

The University obtained from this family Redstone, the Lodge, the Stable, and the caretaker's house. To this they added Slade and Southwick. From then until the present era of Watermanian domination which began early in this decade, Redstone was the center of college life—the scene of dances, teas, Mortar Board formals, governor's receptions, and senior proms. The gym provided recreational facilities but the suggested polo field never materialized. Then came '43 and the Air Corps and the girls moved into fraternity houses. Now for a year the movement has been back again to the tune of "Indicate the Way to Redstone."

MUSEUM MURMURS

By Kay Marcott

Although English potters tried for many years to discover the secret of true, transparent porcelain, it was not until the Eighteenth Century that any real progress was made.

In the middle of this century Josiah Wedgewood, inspired by the neo-classical taste of the era, succeeded in producing several fine glazes which be used for the most part in earthenware imitations of ancient Greek vases.

At this same time the porcelain-works at Chelsea were in full swing and much of their output followed the style of the highly ornate French Sevres porcelain.

The factories at Bow, Derby, and Worcester produced porcelain in the so-called "Chinese style" and also in the fashion made popular in Germany. Dainty but usually over-ornamented statuettes of shepherds and pastoral scenes were used in candelabra, clocks and similar objects.

Bristol porcelain, in vogue about 1770, was the first hard natural porcelain made in England. Although unusually transparent, Bristol porcelain has no special artistic merit. As with most English wares, the best pieces are copies, usually of Eastern china.

Today Staffordshire is the chief center of English pottery manufacture. Large quantities of their peculiar deep blue were commemorating American historical events have been avidly collected by our ancestors.

A penny's worth of electricity (at average household rates) will perform any of these jobs: Brew 20 cups of coffee, vacuum-clean 10 large rugs, extract the juice from 240 oranges, make 48 slices of toast, run a sewing machine all afternoon, light a 50-watt lamp for 6 hours, cook a meal for one person, run the washer for 6 tubs of clothes, iron 20 table napkins, run a clock for a week.

Witty Signs Adorn Kappa Sigma Barn

A passerby at the Kappa Sig barn recently observed and couldn't quite decipher the sign on the front of white paper. It seemed that in the good old navy fellow-man was the password while in the U. V. M. jungles the Kappas have coined signs of their own.

The sign referred to the Kappa Sig barn being "full to capacity and Queen's Chest-crushers [illegible]." After having interpreted this gesture and restored the building, a second glance at the sign revealed the words "Ow" and "Pink" in this manner. It had referred to the above mentioned "Overnight Guests." Depend alone and "A Kiss a Day Keeps the Ow" away.

Things like this all go to brighten up the ordinary humdrum life in a fraternity house.

Friends of Late Alumnae Collect Funds to Equip Room in Infirmary

Friends and classmates of Peggy Fake Halverson, '44, and Anne Squire Hayer, '39, U. V. M. alumnae who were drowned in a sailing accident over last Labor Day week-end, are accumulatung a fund to endow a room in the Wasson Infirmary as a memorial to the girls. Anne, Peggy, and her husband, Ray Halverson, were working together on a government project in under water explosives at the Oceanographic Institute, Woods Hole, Mass., and received a citation from the government.

Of Mrs. Hayer, Dr. Paul Cross, director of the Institute said, "I consider Anne as the most competent woman scientist with whose work I have been associated." In college she was a member of Sports Club, and was active in Outing Club, Basketball, Baseball, Field Hockey, Swimming, Y. W. C. A., and W. A. A. She graduated a physics major and a Phi Beta Kappa.

Mrs. Halverson was a Sigma Gamma, a member of Goodrich Classical Club, an active in W. A. A. Basketball, Badminton, Archery, Y. W. C. A., Student Government, and the John Dewey Club. She was a News Editor on Cynic, and took the Kirby Flower Smith Latin Award at the end of her second year. She graduated a mathematics major and a Phi Beta Kappa.

The girls worked together here at U. V. M. teaching physics to the Air Cadets.

Mrs. L. S. Rowell, assisted by a committee of Sigma Gamma, is treasurer of the project. It is hoped there will be enough funds to supply a room indefinitely with such items as linen, chairs, curtains, and decorations.

QUIZ TO CO-ED

By Katie Crocker

Cried, why did you come to U. V. M.?
What made you choose our state?
What gentle fancy led you here,
What merry twist of fate?

Foster child of warmth and sun,
Knowing not of frost or snow,
Tell us why you love it here,
Why naught on earth could make you go.

It's the peaks of your great Mt. Mansfield
It's the waves of your Lake Champlain.
It's the smell of your fresh clear air,
What brings more peace than pain.

I'm a child indeed of warmth and sun,
Of draught and heat and hill-less land.
Fill my heart with your sweet cold rain,
And rest your snowfall in my hand

I'll handle you in my winter clothes,
And as you fall I'll laugh at them—
With [illegible] your winds and icy blasts,
We met with us at U. V. M.

Original Globe Is In Wilbur Library

The Wilbur Library of the Fleming Museum now owns one of the oldest globes, perhaps the oldest, made in America. The date on the wooden standard is not clearly legible, but appears to read 1811. James Wilson, whose name is inscribed on this globe, was the first man known to have made "terrestrial and celestial" globes in America.

Wilson was a New Hampshire man, born in Londonderry in 1763. Later in 1778, he moved with his family to Bradford, Vt. While farming there, he was shown a pair of English globes and became interested in making them.

The workmanship of his imitations of the English globes were soon preferred to those of the old country. Wilson and his sons set up a globe manufacturing business in Albany in 1815. Their popularity increased and in 1826 Wilson was selling three different sizes.

The base of the globe, purchased from an Underhill woman, bears this inscription: "A new American terrestrial globe on which the principal plans of the known world are accurately laid down with the traced attempts of Captain Cook to discover a southern world. Constructed by James Wilson, 1811."

VETERANS SOUGHT FOR U.V.M. CHOIR

The University Choir and University orchestra invite veterans and other men to become members of their group.

Choir members wishing college credit will rehearse both Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and will occasionally sing at chapel services Tuesday mornings with the mixed choir (the women's choir sings at other services) and at the monthly Sunday vesper services. They must pass a simple tryout, and should see H. G. Bennett, director of the choir, for an appointment. The credit is one hour per semester, no one may receive more than 9 hours credit for choir or orchestra or both.

The University Orchestra rehearses Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8.45 p.m. and plays at the concerts on February 7 and April 7, in the opera, and at Commencement. Men interested should see Professor Pappoutsakis, the conductor, and attend the rehearsal on Tuesday, January 15.

Library Has New Checking System

Recalling past diatribes in the [illegible] on the circulation system in the [illegible] Library, it is interesting to note [illegible] new procedure for taking out [illegible] replaced the complex, multiple [illegible] tem; books from the stacks are [illegible] the circulation desk where the [illegible] signs his name on a date-due [illegible] on a permanent file card. A permanent revamping [illegible] der consideration by the Senate [illegible] Committee, but nothing will be [illegible] further for at least another year.

Mr. G. D. Smith, director of [illegible] sity Libraries, said, "No major [illegible] tions have been or will be made [illegible] library service. Sometime in the [illegible] I hope next year, there will be [illegible] extensive alterations in the U. V. [illegible] brary."

Aside from the moving of some [illegible] used books into storage in the [illegible] Building, there has been no actual [illegible] arrangement of material. The only [illegible] acquisition is the fluorescent light [illegible] the circulation desk.

Following are the important [illegible] regulations:

2000 See Skyhawks Defeat U.V.M. Quintet

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

The repeated pleas of the athletic department for volunteers to carry out the very necessary duties as scrubs for the managerial posts of the various athletic teams remain unanswered. With many returning veterans swelling the student ranks once more the call is renewed. This time we hope it will be answered. Unless it is, the entire Green and Gold sports program will bog down. Certain phases of it might even have to be abandoned.

At the moment Manager Vic Serino and Assistant Manager Jean Hamilton are carrying nearly the entire student burden. At times they have aid from freshman or sophomore assistants, but this is only spasmodic. Coaches Larry Gardner and "Fuzzy" Evans, remaining members of a skeleton-crew coaching staff, are now doing much of the work to help the badly undermanned managerial crew. Coaches can't be everywhere and they are being paid by the University to produce representative sports' teams.

Before the war the managerial staff was composed of a senior manager, two junior assistant managers, and eight scrubs—four sophomores and four freshmen. The senior manager regularly made trips with the teams and was awarded a letter the same as team members.

A very democratic election method was used to name the senior manager. The team members and the retiring manager cast their ballots. Their choice was worth one vote. The athletic department voted for their man with the entire department having one vote. A competitive managerial examination was also given with one vote awarded to the high man. Thus a total of three votes was possible. A total of two votes would give the election to the successful candidate. This elective system will be re-adopted as athletics return to normalcy at U. V. M.

The competitive managerial examination spoken of earlier deals mainly with planning all of the intimate details involved in taking an athletic trip. The costs of transportation, meals, lodging, etc., must be compared with the guarantee given by the host team. The juniors taking this exam will have had previous help to plan trips so will be in an excellent position to make a good showing on the exam.

Now that you have all the dope on scrubbing and the chances for advancement, come on freshmen and sophomores! Let's flood Larry Gardner with applications right now. You will be warmly received.

Burlington High Tops J. V. 43-28

Burlington High School's powerful Seahorses, an odds-on favorite to capture the Vermont state basketball crown continued their winning ways Saturday evening as they topped Sgt. Andy Landa's Junior Varsity 43-28 in the preliminary to the Vermont-Gremer Field tilt.

Both Landa and Buck Hard, Burlington mentor, substituted freely throughout and used their reserves during the entire first half.

Snow, Hays, and Quinn led the schoolboys' attack, while Susslin, Flanders, Baldwin, and Thomas were outstanding for Vermont. Flanders in particular shone as he contributed half of his team's point total.

From a Burlington viewpoint it was quite a "snowstorm." The lanky center dropped in shots from all angles and played a sterling defensive game.

The Jayvees now set their sights for Cathedral High whom they trounced last month. This game will find the Little Indians as hosts and primed for an upset tonight.

H. Livingston Is High Scorer With 10 Points

Vermont Takes Lead In First Minutes of Play

Gremer Field's powerful Skyhawks living up to all advance press notices crushed a game, but badly outplayed U. V. M. quintet, 43-21 before 2000 shrieking spectators at Memorial Auditorium Saturday evening.

In defeat Coach "Fuzzy" Evans uncovered a potential star and logical successor to the ineligible Bog Jake in the person of Hammond "Hammy" Livingston. Besides playing an outstanding floor game Livingston led the rather impotent Vermont attack with a total of ten points.

By their one-sided win Gremer thus completed a clean-sweep of Vermont collegiate competition, having stopped St. Michael's the previous evening 48-34. Gremer Field now boasts a very impressive record of 11 wins in 12 starts.

For the Green and Gold the dreams of an undefeated season came tumbling earthward in the first six minutes of play as the soldiers swished in shots from every angle to build up a 13-2 edge.

Only in the third quarter, when Vermont suddenly came to life to outfight and outscore the stunned soldiers, did the Catamount aggregation appear to be in the ball game. With the score Gremer 34, U. V. M. 18 at this point the Skyhawks took time out, recovered their composure and were in command the rest of the way.

First Quarter

Before the huge crowd had barely settled in its places "Hammy" Livingston put the Vermonters in the lead for the first and only time during the evening with a brilliant shot from the side. Dan Bennett tied it up a minute later with a tremendous heave from the center of the court. Vern Cox followed with a foul and a field goal from the side. When Bennett came back seconds later with another heave from the center stripe, the rout was on. In quick succession Cox and Nat Naideck sank twin-counters and Naideck and Eddie Rathjen contributed fouls. Livingston and Ken Pierce ended the parade with a field goal and foul respectively as the quarter closed with a 13-5 Grenier lead.

Second Quarter

Rathjen opened the second stanza by dropping a foul shot. Cox followed with a layup and Wayne Haanstead dunked one from the bucket to increase the margin to 18-5. After a Livingston foul Rathjen dropped a foul and a backhander. Livingston came back with a great heave and Pierce contributed a foul but Naideck and Schroder connected to give the Skyhawks a 26-9 half-time advantage.

Third Quarter

Pierce opened the last half with a nice one-hander. After Rathjen and Livingston swapped fouls Naideck sank two fouls and a setshot and Bennett dropped a foul to give the fivers a 32-12 advantage. Then suddenly beginning to click Livingston, Becker and Pierce hit the nets in rapid succession. As pandemonium broke loose Rathjen broke Vermont's back with two quick heaves. Naideck sank another as the quarter ended Gremer 38 Vermont 18.

Fourth Quarter

The pace slowed down considerably during the final ten minutes. Rathjen dropped a foul and Dave Kornowa and Naideck connected from the side before Art Collier scored his first collegiate point on a foul for U. V. M. Ex-G. I. Tommy Clairmont completed the Vermont scoring with a long shot from the center circle a few seconds before the final gun.

Sorority Notes . . .

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Burlington alumnae entertained junior actives at supper on Wednesday, January 9. Following the supper Ruth Bushnell spoke to the group on her experiences in the Philippines before the war.

A proud wearer of Sigma Chi sweetheart pin is Gwen Rutherford, who is still gloating about her Christmas gift from Larry Van Patter, that handsome senior at Middlebury.

Christmas vacation found Jane Weerts, Irene Reed, and Thelma Williams breezing the winds in Hyde Park to visit Anne Smith.

New Year's Eve wreaths of mist, Rae Goldings entertained Chief Petty Officer Bill Mills, happy memories of the Bell Lowery Squadron 5 in Burlington, and Betta Reed welcomed home Sgt. Wendell Reed who was stranded in a plane over the middle of the Atlantic for days.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

Wedding congratulations are in order for Bunny Weil and Lew Mechanic who tied the connubial knot and joined last December 28. Pete Bunce almost missed the wedding, thanks to her exam schedule. The newlyweds are somewhere in Florida and are expected back shortly.

Dot Goetz had a wonderful Christmas vacation! She saw "Mel" and now has an Alpha Omega pin attached to her sweater pin. A E Phi was well represented at Romey Finsburg's New Year's Eve party.

Mrs. Judy Mann held a tea at her home in New York during vacation for the members of A E Phi. She is the province director for the New England chapters.

ALPHA XI DELTA

Aroused at 8 o'clock in the morning from a sound slumber and demanded to give all news, past, present and future, of her sorority, what could one Alpha Xi do other than murmur sleepily.

But it's so early in the morning to think! Thus it the notes from Alpha Xi are not too copious, one can only blame the insistent early morning reporter.

Alpha Xi Delta was represented on the Zeta trip to New York by some of its members.

In the not too distant future there will be an Alumnae Tea held for all the Alpha Xi alumnae.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Tri-Delts are expecting a visit from their traveling secretary, Miss DePuy, who will stay with them from January 10-14.

Sunday the 13th, they will entertain all the girls in the chapter at a Sunday night supper.

Norma Prescott and Betsy Kipp, celebrated New Year's in Boston, Mass., while Edith McLaren spent her vacation in Rutherford, N. J., as a guest of Eliza beth Conklin.

Mary Louise Pierce spent the latter part of her vacation in Providence, R. I.

Dorothy Hollender visited Georgia Husen, former '47, in Short Hills, N. J.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

After their meeting Monday night, January 7, members of Delta Alpha of D PHI E gave a shower for their apartment at 189 Summit Street, which they occupied about a year ago. The articles given for the girls' pantries were all for household use.

Next week D PHI E will begin a raffle for a cigarette lighter, donated in gold and black. Citations may be purchased from any members.

Mrs. Phyl Fine Freeman, graduate of U. V. M. in 1944, is back in Burlington and will make her residence here.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Here we are again! Back with our brawn and not losing it. Our two Brunswicks namely "The Breeze" and Hat have moved in bag and baggage but the latter is still very unsettled.

Ann Nisbet came back with a diamond which we are sorry to say is still at the jewelers.

PI BETA PHI

Back with New Year's resolutions galore and many fond vacation memories Pi Phis straggled in one by one with Nancy Mac and Rita being the last to arrive after a gay week-end in North Conway N. H. Cap Bell and Mac entertained with tales of their social skiing parts at Stowe and we hear that Barre is quite the place on New Year's Eve!

Mrs. Moore started the quarter with a bang by fracturing both wrists but every setback has some advantage. Most of us have found a latent ability for nursing while one little girl—name withheld—has taken over complete responsibility for Jeffie, our mascot.

Flash! Flash! And we'll be getting chocolates next meeting from one of our dignified seniors. Genny Coffman has announced her engagement to Bud Allen, a U. V. M. grad and a Sig Phi.

We're still holding forth on our weekly open houses on Friday afternoons. Come one—come all—friends of Pi Phi.

SIGMA GAMMA

Felicitations to Merle Hayward, '48, who became Mrs. Robert Houghton during Christmas vacation. Fran Earle, ex-'45, is back in college this quarter and expects to graduate with her husband in June.

Barbara Law, '46, and Alice Miller, '46, have left the fields of Claggett House to spend a few weeks in the Home Management House.

Pat Sheffert, '48, certainly had a strenuous vacation but she is back as of Wednesday and is in good condition once more.

Mary Brisbin's twenty-first birthday was duly celebrated on January ninth. Her mother sent a large cake, and ice cream was on the house.

Susan Haskell, '48, and her husband are living at the Hotel Van Ness. Vern is now a student in the College of Agriculture.

Pan-Hell Starts Liberal Rushing

A glimpse of sorority life was shown the freshmen and transfer girls last Sunday afternoon. All sororities held open house to groups of girls under the supervision of Pan-Hellenic. Each group visited four houses, staying one-half hour at each where they met sorority girls and listened to their songs. There was no planned entertainment nor were refreshments served.

A change from last year's procedure was initiated by the Greek Letter Reform group, whose suggestion made it possible for every group to visit both Jewish and Christian sororities.

ALPHA CHOLERA

Ardent Alpha Choleras have firmly established the "Barefoot Boy" tradition on the U. V. M. campus. Chartered directly by Max Shulman, the Beta Chapter of Alpha Cholera was formed in the spring of 1945. Its officers, Asa Noblesse, Yetta, and Shylock, have scheduled a pledging and initiation ceremony for early spring at Red Rocks. The exact date has not as yet been released. Alpha Choleras were reluctant to disclose any facts of their secret ceremony, but they did say that "burning grits will be served."

Would anyone on campus who knows of the whereabouts of two cunningly hinged sidewalk blocks or an old worn-out smudge pot which, unfortunately, have been mislaid in the general campus reconversion, contact Shylock, the treasurer."

U. V. M. Students Announce Slate

HIGHLIGHTS

Lee Feinberg

Following along with the question of sorority and fraternity rushing, we find the Greek Letter Reform still in session and headed toward bigger and final things. Letters have been sent to national chapters to determine their policies and the movement toward breaking down the religious barriers has now started. The next meeting is this afternoon at 5.00 o'clock.

"Oh—where oh where has our little Vic gone?" such is the chant of Staff and Sandal. To have or not to have a musical hour—that is the question? It seems that with the moving of the girls gym up to Southwick, the record player formerly used for the Staff and Sandal Musical Hours on Fridays, has also moved its location to Southwick. What to do for a record player? Is there anyone who can solve this problem?

"Hand me my thermometer, it must be AT LEAST one degree below zero today." Yes, it's the age old question of when and when not to wear slacks. Who's to tell us when it's below zero weather. By the time the report's come from the Dean's office, it's warmed up considerably and we find ourselves, illegally wearing slacks. It's really getting to be quite difficult to tell how many men are back on campus, male and female—they all dress alike!

Soft and dreamy, or even something hot and jazzy—played in the style of Jimmy Lunceford and his orchestra. It seems practically all U.V.M. turned out in full representation—a fact that clearly shows we can still get our studying done and enjoy the music of a famous orchestra—(something of a novelty in Burlington.)

Talking about dances and dreamy music—and who isn't, don't forget the Vets' Formal. It's really quite an occasion—and gives the Vets a chance to show what they can do.

Another weekly Mortar Board meeting was held Sunday evening in joint session with the faculty.

NOTICE

There will be an important meeting for all U. V. M. students tonight at 7.30 p.m. in Room 140 for the purpose of amending the Constitution of U. V. M. Students.

ADMINISTRATION APPOINTS TUTHILL, DAHL TO FACULTY

The appointment of two new members to U. V. M. administration has been announced.

Orville Dahl, recently retired as lieutenant in the U. S. Navy, will be director of a new department of Student Personnel at the University of Vermont, and director of veterans' education.

Lieutenant Dahl will arrive on February 4 to develop the new department, which will integrate the following student personnel activities: The veterans' office; the admissions office; the recorders' office; housing for men; the testing bureau; the vocational guidance office; and the placement bureau. The creation of the new department of Student Personnel, and the election of Dahl as its director, were both decided by the University Board of Trustees at its December meeting.

The other new appointee is Arthur F. Tuthill of Bolton Center, Conn., who will be an instructor in the mechanical engineering department. He will be engaged in teaching mechanical drawing.

Tuthill received his B.S. from Carnegie Institute of Technology in 1938, and his M.S. from the University of Wisconsin in 1939. He did graduate work at Columbia in 1941-42, and from 1939 to 1942 was instructor in mechanical engineering at Cooper Union.

World Relatedness YW Meeting Theme

The YWCA of the University of Vermont has been an active organization for over thirty years and only now has a constitution been prepared for presentation before the members. This constitution includes the purpose of the organization; qualifications for members and officers; duties of the cabinet, commissions, and advisory board; provisions for meetings and amendments; and the by-laws of the organization. This constitution is an important milestone in YW history and three-fourths of the membership is necessary for ratification. Credit goes to Barbie Powers, Betty Reid, and members of the cabinet for compiling the constitution.

All members are asked to attend the meeting Friday night, January 18, 8:00 p.m., in the student lounge. The main theme will be "World Relatedness" and YW members will find a personal interest in families of other countries. Costumes of all nations will be displayed and refreshments will be of foreign flavor. Dixie Dockstader and Dot Hansen are in charge of the program. Games of other lands will be played.

The dorms on campus will be divided into teams, each one making up individual boxes of food and clothing to be sent to families in France, Holland, Germany, and Spain. These names are being provided by the American Friends Service Committee and the Socialist Committee of Spain. Letters will be written to students in foreign lands to gain first hand information on conditions in their own countries. The program of the World Student Christian Federation will be explained in full detail.

Fraser, Mallett Named For Vice-Presidency

Seven members of the undergraduate body constitute the roster of students running for student government offices to replace the present executives. Rich Harper '48 and Dale Conley '48 are the two candidates for president while Paul Fraser '47 and Pete Mallett '47, are competing for the vice-presidency. Elizabeth Conklin is the nominee for treasurer. Sydelle Sherman '46 and Lynn Derrick '48, are the aspirants for the office of secretary.

Rich Harper's home is in Albany, N. Y., and he is a transfer from Hamilton College where he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. A recently discharged veteran, Rich was a First Lieutenant in the Fifth Infantry Division and has five years of service, nineteen months of which were spent overseas. He is enrolled in the business curriculum and lists as his activities dramatics and the Choir.

Housefather to the boys at the Phi Delt House, Dale Conley is a member of the class of '48 (accelerated). Dale saw service as an intelligence sergeant with the 172nd Infantry "Flying Victory" division and was in the Guadalcanal, Rendova, and Munda campaigns. A native of Windsor, Vt., Dale is an "Aggie," member of the Cynic, president of the Veterans' Club and a member of Lambda Iota.

Peter Mallett, a member of the Student Government Executive Committee this past year, holds many positions on campus. A veteran, Pete is president of I.R.C. and Outing Club, a feature writer on the Cynic and a member of the Greek Letter Reform Committee. He is also on the ski team.

Outgoing Student Government Officers Present Opinions On Main Functions of Organization

"More votes—better representation—better student government" is the watchword of the present Student Government Executive Committee. The majority of the committee and its officers feel that although they are not a really representative body, they hope to make Student Government more representative by an extensive program of campaigning for better government and all out voting in the February elections.

Earle Calls for Participation

The president of Student Government is Wendell Earle who has made it his policy to push the principle of better representation in Student Government to its greatest heights. Wendell says that too many students think that the Student Government Executive Committee has nothing to do but listen to and do something about all the individual "gripes" of the different students. This, he believes, is not the main function of Student Government.

The important function is to foresee needs of the student body and provide capable administration. What is more, Student Government is helpless without the support of all the students and a look at the figures of the last election will show that the students have not given their interest to something which should be vitally important to them. The administration and faculty does not take Student Government too seriously because it doesn't represent the opinion of the majority of students in the school, and therefore it carries no weight of any importance behind it.

Wendell Earle has outlined the plans for Student Government this quarter, and some of these include: An all out campaign for the Honor System and the revival of interest in this important topic; the clearing up of the situation of college dances with especial reference to the place and time these are held, and also to the fact that a policeman is required to watch over the activity which, it believes, is not in need of any police protection; a straightening out of the bulletin board problem in order that more neat and efficient bulletin boards can be maintained instead of the confusion which we now have concerning them; a program of assistance to veterans in order that they might become acclimated to University life; and above all, plans for the coming Student Government elections in order that they may be orderly, fair and show a greater turnout than they have in the past.

Wendell Earle

Dave Hackett and H.S.

David Hackett, Vice-President of Student Government Executive Committee, has had the honor system as his pet interest on Student Government. Heading the Honor System Planning Committee he has done much to see that this

Spring Quarter Will Usher in New Homes for Veterans

A new and brighter light now shines on the acute housing shortage for the U.V.M. veteran and his family. The Federal Works Agency has recently approved a provision for 50 trailers to be installed by the opening of the spring quarter. Mr. P. H. Page, treasurer of the University, has announced that this installation will occur within a few days. Army engineers will come from Boston to complete these plans and give approval.

Mr. M. D. Powers, assistant librarian of the University, now working on this problem, said that this adidtion of 50 trailers would take care of the future housing for the married men returning to continue their education. Mr. Powers also stated that at present there are about 80 veterans with families enrolled. Some of these families are living outside of the city, while the husband is living in Burlington. He added that there are 30 to 50 new veterans with families enrolled

CONVOCATION GUEST TO SPEAK ON WSSF

One of the first to speak to U.V.M. student body on the World Student Service Fund, the organization which provides direct relief for students and professors in war torn countries will be Dr. Huntley Dupre, University Secretary of WSSF, who will speak at convocation on January 21.

Dr. Dupre experienced with the European situation through his work with the European Student Relief after the last war and his active association with the World's Student Christian Federation, is to present the work and purpose the WSSF has for hungry and sick students the world over.

Following the end of the first World War, and his return to the United States, Dr. Dupre became Y.M.C.A. secretary at Ohio State being promoted a few months later to national student secretary of the Y.M.C.A. serving in Czechoslovakia. There he was director of the Studensky Domov, a great international student union with a self governing membership of 27 nationalities. This union housed the offices of the European Student Relief and the Czechoslovakian, German, Ukrainian, and Russian Student Christian movements. He was one of the founders of the first three of the above mentioned movements which soon became affiliated with the World's Student Christian Federation. From time to time, during interregnums of administration, he

Have you ever been appointed as a committee of one to beg, borrow, or steal the permission for use of a room in Waterman for a dance? After accepting the commission one wonders which alley of the administration to turn to for the quickest line of red tape, which will be encountered on all sides.

Last year the Student Lounge was used successfully for this purpose since the student body was smaller with a larger percentage of girls, but with the return of the veterans a more spacious room must be found.

The first suggestion of the administration is always our bleak and barren gym, which would provide an excellent atmosphere for a boxing bout, but loud music at all for a formal dance.

The best place and only available one seems to be the Soda Fountain and Adjoining Rotunda, which was always used in pre-war days. However, upon asking for this room one is sent from the custodian of the building through umpteen channels until the President himself is involved, which seems to me a very trivial matter to be taking up his valuable time. After floundering around from person to person you may luckily obtain the permission the day before or the very day of the engagement. The exorbitant price charged to the organization for use of the rooms would involve an essay in itself!

It is time for action! Student Government is now trying to remedy the situation. BACK ITS EFFORTS TO BREAK THE TAPE!

ELECTION BRIEFS

When the [illegible] Last year two hundred students voted on the Executive Council, the "representative" and governing committee of the whole student body, while this article is being written [illegible] vote for Prom Week King and Queen. In each case apparently enthusiasm was important enough to vote twice.

[illegible] of the student apathy, a certain entertainment group of people have work the machinery of student government. Without their assistance the students will have the opportunities to remedy this situation. In the second week in February the students are to vote for the officers of the Executive Council. During March they will vote for the remainder of the council. How many of you will vote?

Up to this year the campaigning for Executive Council positions has been concentrated while much time and space has been devoted to publicity for Prom Week elections. We suggest ending some of your enthusiasm for nonessential matters which will affect you not only on Prom Week day but throughout the entire school year.

These are your representatives. Make it your business to know what they stand for. Then know that enthusiasm behind those whom you think will best serve you. Let's have real student government, one that will reflect an intelligent and interested student body.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor of the Cynic:

What about some pep at U V M? There's been plenty of criticism about the cheering since the Gremer Field game last week, most of it being helpful to the cheerleaders. But we'd like a little co-operation, too. We can't do all the yelling by ourselves. It really isn't entirely our fault that you didn't know all of the cheers. They were first introduced one afternoon and evening in the student lounge when only a few showed enough interest to come and learn them. Then cheer sheets were handed out again at the Clarkson game when there was a good opportunity to show the team that we were all behind them.

From now on we'll try to get all the Vermont rooters to sit on the side with the teams and have a real cheering section. The band will be playing at most of the home games, too.

Any other suggestions about new cheers or ways of improving them will be helpful, and we hope that by getting the pep committee, band, cheerleaders, and entire student body backing up the team college spirit at games will be stronger this year than ever before.

So come on, support your team, and yell for all you're worth next time our boys go out on the court.

PAT BRUSH
BETTY KELLEY

Dear Editor:

This is an open challenge to sororities on campus. We are all watching the inauguration of the policy of non-sectarian "rushing" the first of its kind in the history of the University of Vermont. For our sororities, this is a natural development of the awakening to recognition of democratic principles, principles that have long been buried in student apathy.

So, we congratulate the sororities for their "open rushing" parties. But this is only the preliminary to real achievement. This new found democracy will be meaningless if pledging results in continued racial and religious distinctions—if only Christians are accepted by Christian sororities and if only Jews are accepted by Jewish sororities. And if Catholic quotas are still effective.

The Greek letter Reform group has made considerable progress and many sororities have cooperated fully with the progressive movement. However, one specific sorority with one of the most liberal pledging records is still shackled by alumni pressure and tradition to maintain a Catholic quota. This is a vicious stroke against the basic principle of non-discrimination by religious creed in America. Likewise, another specific sorority

Thirst For Knowledge Appeals G. I. Bill of Rights Provides

Stan Golden

The saying that the quest for knowledge is never ending can well be substantiated by the fact that three of the veterans who have registered for classes this quarter are far advanced in the age of the average college student, and have not been in contact with formal education for many years. The three veterans, Mr. Lawrence Terry, Mr. Harry Miele, and Mr. Lynn Greene, range in ages from 35 to 46 years, and have decided to continue their education after a recess of many years.

Navy Spurs Ahead

Topping the age list is Mr. Lawrence Terry who is 46 years young. Mr. Terry has had the advantage of not starting out after a recess, but continuing his education which to him is never-ending. Mr. Terry left Greenville Illinois College in 1917. Yet he has been on the University of Pennsylvania roster and has been studying chemistry and the related sciences for many years. Before going into the Navy, Mr. Terry was a research chemist and has had a hand in such special research work as that on nitrogen fixation and the development of artificial penicillin. For nine years he did special chemical research which is his major field. Mr. Terry took advantage of the Navy's educational program and has taken courses at many schools, including an extension course in English from the University of Ohio. Upon being asked if he found studying hard, Mr. Terry replied that his grasping of the work has been made quite easy because of the interesting way in which his professors and instructors teach. Mr. Terry's view on the future is one of science and government. He hopes to secure a job as a professional chemist and scientist in the service of the government, and feels that more people should take a closer, more personal attitude towards the government than they have done in the past.

The second veteran continuing his education is Mr. Harry Miele. Mr. [illegible] 35 years old and graduated [illegible] school in 1928. That was the last [illegible] in school until now. Entering [illegible] man at U. V. M., Mr. Miele [illegible] get a general education in liberal [illegible] He always wanted to start [illegible] for certain reasons could not. [illegible] travels around the world and in the [illegible] Mr. Miele met people who [illegible] ways to ask the question "Are you a college man?" which showed the importance of a college education. Mr. Miele says, "Even at this age I can be expected to get a great deal from college." His favorite courses are English and zoology, and, though he found studying a "picnic" he was surprised to find how easily he got back the swing of things. Mr. Miele is a resident of Randolph, Vermont and is living in South Converse Hall.

G. I. Bill Aids Future

The last, but by no means the least, of our veterans is Mr. Lynn Greene. Mr. Greene, a resident of Burlington, graduated from high school in 192[illegible] ambition had always been to go to college, but he too, didn't enter for certain reasons. He is married, and [illegible] before he entered the service. Now the G. I. Bill has made advanced education possible, Mr. Greene has resumed studies in the pre-dental curriculum. His favorite subject is mathematics. He hasn't found studies too difficult, but but expects that they will become in the near future. Mr. Greene is [illegible] years old.

In all three of these men we have a cross-section of many men of the [illegible] who are able, now, because of the G. I. Bill, and because of the growing realization of the importance of education, to resume and continue their formal [illegible] in hopes of gaining a better standard of living in the future.

General Motors on Prices

Perhaps it will not be too bad an idea to do away with price control. Judging from the recent full and quarter page ads of General Motors, I am convinced that they must think so too.

"We believe in high wages! But we also believe that when wages are already high, the question arises whether further cost reductions—may not be used to lower prices."

If prices are to be lowered, as General Motors would like us to believe, then there is, to my mind, no need for any price regulation by O.P.A. It is strange, however, that when the O.P.A. investigated 1942 auto prices to determine how they should be altered to 1946 conditions, found that the only company charging in 1942 prices too high for the 1946 was General Motors, and all [illegible] were granted price increases [illegible] eral Motors who now claim to [illegible] wage increases so that "further [illegible] ductions may be used to lower [illegible] Something is crazy here and I [illegible] it is the General Motor's [illegible]

Skiing Is Here Again—Let's Go

Lessons Offered to Ski Enthusiasts

The Women's Athletic Association has announced that arrangements for the coming skiing season are nearly complete. The Ski Club will offer skiing lessons to all women students, under the instruction of Everett Bailey. The Country Club slope classes will begin on Tuesday, January 22, skiing conditions permitting.

"Ev" Bailey is an able member of Sepp Ruschp's Ski School in Stowe. He attended U. V. M. and was first approached by Mr. Ruschp while participating in ski competition as a member of the U. V. M. ski teams.

There will be two classes held on Tuesday afternoon from 2.00 to 3.15 and from 3.15 to 4.00., Each class will consist of 20 pupils. The program will include five lessons at the price of five dollars. In addition, the students who wish club credit will be required to attend two out of the five conditioning classes in the gym at a time to be announced later.

"Cap" White, '47, manager of the club, has stated that signing up for lessons took place on Monday morning and Thursday noon in the main hall of Waterman and that students who missed these hours, and who wish to take ski lessons should contact the gym department as soon as possible.

In cooperation with the Outing Club, members of W. A. A. particularly urge the beginners in the freshman and sophomore classes to partake of this opportunity in order that they may continue instruction later on, as a member of the girls' ski team which is also to be coached by Mr. Bailey

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

The first game of the new year left Green and Gold rooters with little to cheer about. Grenier Field proved to be all it was hailed as—and then some. We can take heart, however, at the fighting spirit Coach Fuzzy Evans has instilled in his men. Without the amazing raw courage the team showed when it became apparent to even the most rabid Vermonter that the cause was lost, the Skyhawks might well have piled up 60 or 70 points instead of a bitterly contested 43 markers.

There were other signs which had a tinge of optimism also. Hammond Livingston, getting the feel of the basketball court again after a sojourn in the armed forces, was all over the floor—breaking up Grenier scoring passes and still finding time enough to pace the U.V.M. attack.

Likewise Ken Pierce is improving with each tilt, while Ralph Becker is attaining the badly needed experience which hampers his effectiveness at the moment. Captain Stein, Levine, Parrow, French, Clairmont, Stafford, and Manjoney are all good men who may start clicking at any time.

Tomorrow evening the Horsemen of Norwich invade the Auditorium for the opening state collegiate tilt. Perhaps the Cadets are smacking their chops in anticipation. A win over Vermont always satisfies their hunger. The department feels duty-bound to warn the soldiers to eat heartily before departing for Burlington.

Yale and Holy Cross continued to share the New England basketball leadership as the Eli maintained its mastery over Ivy League opposition. The Crusaders gained national recognition by topping a good Bowling Green quintet. Cornell and Colgate likewise impressed. The Ithaca aggregation remained in the unbeaten class, while the Red Raiders sprang the greatest upset of the season to romp over Glenn Davis and company of Army, 70-43.

Elsewhere West Virginia, Wyoming, Navy, Tulane and Notre Dame swept aside all opposition on the road to a possible national championship. Despite their impressive records to date, the odds seem to be against these clubs maintaining their unblemished slates during the last half of America's first peace-time court season in five years.

From the Bench

By Bob Wool

Sparkling tablends usually announce well filled berths, and so we hope this will be the case at Middlebury this weekend when the prowess of our ski team, captained by Pete Mallett tussles with a vindictive lot of six from Norwich who will be playing for a win over last year's championship team from U.V.M. U.V.M., if you will remember played host to a crowd who considered the 45 meet the greatest staged during the war years.

Questionable are the members who will take their places at the ski meet this week-end, but we do have a group of boys who are apt at this sport and will undoubtedly make the showing we expect from them. Everett Bailey coaching both of the teams will Saturday be able to sit back, the complacent prof, and watch the boys of both teams provide a "darn" good show.

This event as you know, compared to the Dartmouth Winter Carnival, is one of the biggest attraction meets in New England. Thousands of people, who yearly look forward to these unique ski meets will be on hand to lend moral support to the teams of both sides.

Pete Mallett, the only remaining member of last year's team, will serve as the driving force of the team, lending his past experience as a valuable aid to the team. Through Manager Dick Audette, the following men have been presented to Coach Everett Bailey as potentials: Bob Lanou, formerly on the Burlington High School team will fall into place with Chuck Plumley, Ed Crane and Bill Montgomery, and Larry Fagan, former member of the Pico ski patrol.

Coach Bailey, is planning a great show of the four events which will be the meet's feature attraction. Familiarize yourself with them and then get behind a promising group of guys who are out there to win. DOWNHILL—CROSS-COUNTRY — JUMPING — SLALOM. O.K.—Let's go!

Traditional Rivals Meet Saturday Night

Catamount Hoopsters Undaunted by One Loss

Fuzzy Evans' once beaten court quintet takes the first step in defense of its state title when it comes to grips with an always dangerous Norwich aggregation at Memorial Auditorium Saturday evening at 8.15 p.m. It will be the initial state tilt with the traditional rivals. For the winner a first place tie with league leading St. Michael's is in the offing.

The Vermont starting lineup is still indefinite. Coach Evans stressing the need for a scoring punch has shifted his lineup many times during the past week in an effort to find a winning combination.

Capt. Howie Stein and Ken Pierce seem to have the forward spots clinched at the moment but are meeting stiff competition from Sonny Houston and Bob Stafford. Stafford reported for practice for the first time Monday and has already impressed Coach Evans as being an outstanding prospect.

The center spot is Ralph Becker's for the time being. The lanky vet has had the benefit of long weeks of practice under the Evans' system. Bob French and Gene Dixon are pressing Becker for a starting role and one of them may push Becker from his slot if they continue their rapid improvement.

Hammy Livingston's outstanding play against Grenier Field, plus his impressive showings in recent practice sessions, has assured him of a starting berth at one of the guard posts.

Cal Parrow and Dave Collier are battling it out for the remaining spot. Collier, originally a forward, was shifted to guard earlier this week and has impressed.

Norwich remains an unknown quantity. Jack Jones, a basketball and football star before the war, has returned to spark the cadet attack. Around him the Horsemen are expected to build their offensive.

If possible Coach Evans plans to give his entire squad a workout under fire Saturday. The squad of fifteen men must

MOONLIGHT RIDERS TAKE TO SADDLES IN REVERE SPIRIT

The midnight ride of Paul Revere was no more astounding than the moonlight ride of three Redstone Campus girls. Marge "Shorty" Cutler, 47, Lydia Smith, 46, and Edith Robbins, 47, were seen after dark near Robinson Hall and Redstone on horseback the night of January 15. There was a thick covering of snow and a bright full moon and the thermometer was well on the negative side. This last factor had no effect on the riders. They were fully prepared for such weather. No details of clothing shall be given but the girls resembled skiers (or shall we say North Pole Expeditioners?) rather than horsewomen.

The ride lasted from 6.30 p.m. to 8.00 p.m. and other than the difficulties they had in mounting, no misfortune befell upon Shorty, Smitty or Edie. They weren't even cold when they dismounted. (The cold air could not penetrate through their infinite layers of clothing.)

According to the girls this was the best ride they ever had. They should be good judges on the subject; since they go riding every Sunday at 10.00 a.m.—rain, snow, or shine—and any other time they have the money.

for the next semester beginning March 30.

Mr. Page did not know what type of trailer would be rented to the University. He stated that some of these trailers were now used by the army. These new homes have a living room, bedroom, combined kitchen-dining room and a small toilet. These rooms are divided by partitions similar to venetian blinds.

The University will have to install a sewage system and facilitate a water supply for these new houses.

Prof. A. D. Butterfield, present director of the veterans education, said that the arrival of these new trailers would aid the University in finding adequate homes for the men who wish to enroll here at U.V.M.

be cut to eleven for next week's Massachusetts trip. The Green and Gold will collide with Gronier Field and Mass State at that time.

A preliminary contest starting at 7:45 p.m. between the Vermont Junior Varsity and the local Y. M. C. A. will precede the main bout. Kotter Coach Andy Lazola is expected to use the same lineup which lasted to Cathedral High School earlier this week.

The tentative starting lineup is: Pierce, rf; Stone, lf; Becker, c; Livingston, rg; Parent or Gilbert, lg.

Due to the basketball game on Saturday night, the Veterans' Dance will be informal instead of semi-formal.

Dorm Entertains

The girls of Redstone Dormitory will entertain some 150 veterans of U. V. M. at a tea dance, Saturday, January 19, from 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. Patricia Speight is chairman of the committee which includes Camilla Van Vleet and Barbara Anderson, and Nancy Sherman.

men plan of student-school relationship would be carried out and prove its success. He was the extensive campaigner, known widely as "H. S. for U. V. M." Dave's opinion on student representation is analogous to that of Woodell Earle's, and he claims that if more people went out to vote that Student Government could produce more satisfactory results than could be hoped for.

Secretary McLaren

The Secretary of the Committee is Edith McLaren who has recently been appointed co-chairman of Junior Week. She is in complete accord with the plan for widespread representation and hopes to see a strong election campaign to arouse the interests of the students. It is hoped that the veterans will actively participate in the new elections and it is believed that they shall lead the rest of the cammpus is going to the polls for better government.

Treasurer Espies Lack of Interest

In the treasurer's chair we find Wanda Hopkinson who was last year's head of the Student Government Finance Committee. Her personal opinion is that there have been many complaints about Student Government, but no one seems to show any definite interest in it. "Student Government meetings have always been open to the public, but people just don't bother to come!" This sentiment was expressed by all the members of the committee. It is hoped that students will watch the Cynic and bulletin boards for notices of Student Government meetings, and make it their business to attend.

is forced to maintain by a ruling aimed at Catholic students. These sororities need the support of not only the Greek-letter Reform group but also the entire campus in their effort to smash this fascistic policy.

This is an issue that concerns every one of us, administration, faculty and all students, regardless of Greek letter affiliation. It is an issue directly involved in the war we have just won, whose victory is yet to be evaluated. We of the University of Vermont have an immediate responsibility contributing to the direction of this evaluation.

National Chaplain of Newman Clubs to Address Students Here

A Pattern For Peace Is Subject of Talk

The National Chaplain of Newman Clubs, Father John J. Dempsey will speak to U. V. M. Newmanites and others who wish to attend on "A Pattern for Peace" Thursday, January 24, at 8.00 in the Student Lounge. Long before his appointment Father Dempsey was working with young people, as a teacher and frequently as an athletic director. He taught Apologetics and Psychology and Ethics at college level. In his interest in public affairs he was a charter member of the Kiwanis Club at Kenmore, N. Y., where he was directing the activities of the Junior Holy Name in the American Legion and civic athletic leagues. There also he conducted a series of radio programs over a local network on "Heroes of the Cross."

Father Dempsey was appointed to Catholic students at Buffalo State Teachers College, and in 1941 twenty Newman Clubs between Albany and Buffalo, the Central New York Province, elected him chaplain. Part of next week he will be at Cornell University as Catholic representative during Religious Emphasis Week, a program similar to U. V. M.'s Religion and Life Parley.

Rev. John Dempsey

THREE CLUBS JOIN TO SPONSOR DANCE

Another in the series of weekly dances will be sponsored Saturday, January 26 by the Newman Club, W.S.S.F., and the veterans who have join to give a dance to be held at 8.00 p.m., in the Waterman Lounge.

Newman Club is to be in charge of the refreshments with Nancy McNamara serving as chairman of the committee. W.S.S.F., is to be in charge of the publicity, while the veterans will take charge of running the dance in general.

There was difficulty in deciding whether the dance would or would not be formal, but it was decided to have an informal on the pattern of the Veterans' Dance held January 18. The orchestra for the evening will be Bernie Kriesel, while chaperones have not yet been decided upon.

Benjamin Franklin advanced the single-fluid theory of electricity in 1746 and proposed the plus and minus designations.

ROTUNDA SCENE OF COLLEGE DANCE SATURDAY NIGHT

The Veterans' Club sponsored a very successful dance in the Soda Fountain and Rotunda of the Waterman Building last Saturday evening, January 19. Approximately 175 couples attended the event. The evening began at 8.30 although the majority of students arrived a little later after the basketball game. Rich Harper '48, chairman of the committee, and John Gilmore '49, were in charge of taking the tickets with the assistance of Nancy Ahern '47. Rich presented each veteran, upon arrival with an American flag as a lapel recognition pin.

Along both sides of the Soda Fountain there were double rows of tables. At the right of the entrance there was a booth at which cokes and cheese and crackers were served to everyone. The decorations consisted of reproductions made by Rich Harper, of insignias of diverse branches of the service which hung on the walls and pillars of the rooms. The dancing itself took place in the Rotunda.

Bernie Kriesel's band, in which Marvin Aaron '49, played as saxophonist, furnished the music. Jeanette Soulis '48, Anita Smith '47, and Bill Cook '46, composed a trio which sang several popular numbers. Mr. and Mrs. Wingate and Professor and Mrs. Long were chaperons.

The Veterans' Club hired boys and girls from Burlington to act as waiters and to check coats and hats.

Other members of the committee were Philip Johnson '49, Julian Levine '47, and Katherine Marcott '46. The music ceased at 11.45 p.m., so that the floor could be cleared by 12.00.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of all non-fraternity men who are interested in participating in either the Kake Walk skit or walking, Wednesday afternoon at 5 p.m. in the Student Lounge. Independent men, this is your opportunity to enter into Kake Walk activities and prize competition.

The Prom Committee of Junior Week is making arrangements for the band which will play for the big dance. In order to satisfy the wishes of the U. V. M. students, the committee is sponsoring a poll to be taken at the Thursday, January 24 convocation. The object of the poll is to decide whether a local band (Collins, Weeds, Williams, etc.) or a big name band (Lou Armstrong, Bob Chester, Hal McIntyre, George Paxton, etc.) is the choice of the student body. The cost of a local band will be $1.25 per person, tax included while a big name band will cost $2.50 per person, tax included.

Plan Name Band For Kake Walk

Big plans are being made by the Kake Walk dance committee headed by Dale Conley. They are trying to get a big-name band but they aren't disclosing the name. Aileen Nichols '48, has been chosen head of the Chaperon Committee. Mimi Lipman '46, and her staff of decorators are busy thinking about where they can find a crystal ball to use suspended from the middle of the ceiling.

Rules Announced

The Kake Walk Committee has announced that the stunts and sculptures will be judged as follows:

Stunts

- Originality, 25 points
- Teamwork and smoothness, 20 points.

- All around appearance at night, 12½ per cent

Build A Grassmount in Greece With Your WSSF Contribution

By Marilyn Mills

Imagine yourself an exchange student at the University of Athens. You are one of 8,000 studying for the betterment of a war-torn Greece. Your dorm is named Grassmount, one of the better houses on the outskirts of the city.

This Grassmount has no charming reception hall replete with winding stairway. There is even no handrail on the stairway. The smoking room is a study where perhaps 30 can sit at unplaned, unfinished tables. No lively bull sessions are carried on by keen, alert students. Your lounging attire may be pajamas, but only because you are saving wear and tear on clothes. There are beds in the next room with two blankets each and no sheets. One room for six people has two chairs. One nail near each bed suffices for your entire wardrobe. No matter—there is a complete lack of laundry facilities.

Women students never complain about needing a diet. The one meal a day provides 2,000 calories. Standard food dished out to you from a common plate consists of beans cooked in olive oil. One out of every ten of your dormmates will soon succumb to tuberculosis.

Back at the University of Vermont, you find the World Student Service Fund pursuing its campaign for raising money for your unfortunate fellow-students. You realize the dire need and can appreciate the work of W.S.S.F. in foreign countries. Twenty-five dollars paid your tuition at the University of Athens. Fifteen dollars paid for your meager meals.

You not only want to do all you can for your foreign friends, you feel honor bound. You support the W.S.S.F.; you give all you can, and more besides.

Project Provides Relief To War-Stricken Students

Phyllis Edgerton is Chairman; Reid, Mills, Parkhurst and Audette Are Committee Heads

The drive for the World Student Service Fund on the U. V. M. Campus will begin on Thursday, January 24 at convocation, and will continue for the next three months. In this drive, American students are uniting with students of 13 other countries to assist in service and rehabilitation of conditions in 18 lands. The enterprise is conducted on a non-sectarian, inter-racial, international, and non-political basis.

Phyllis Edgerton

Phyllis Edgerton '46, is the chairman of the U. V. M. drive, which has $3,000.00 for its goal. Committee chairmen are Joan Parkhurst publicity; Dick Audette, special events; Betty Reid treasurer; Marilyn Mills listing. Students, faculty, and employers will be canvassed.

The World Student service Fund was established in the U. S. in 1937. When war broke in 1939, the activities of this organization were extended to Europe and Asia as an emergency agent for students. The efforts consist of distinguished American educators who are familiar with the situation.

In 1944-45, $96,840,000 were sent to student prisoners of war in the Far East, Canada, and United States and $1,850 to students in Russia. It is hoped that this sum will be exceeded in the drive commencing January 24.

The need for this fund is found in figures which state that 40 Chinese students have been known to use one book, over 70 per cent of the Dutch students need hospitalization before returning to universities; and Greek students live on one meal per day. The educational and cultural program maintained by the W.S.S.F. aided 6,000,000 prisoners of war of all the belligerent countries of 40 different lands. Plans have also been made to aid Nisei students in the U. S. during the readjustment period for their families.

Dr. Huntly Dupre, University Secretary of W.S.S.F., will open the drive on this campus with a convocation speech on January 25.

Benefit Bridge for Russian Relief Held Friday Eve.

One hundred and seventy-five dollars was raised by the housemothers for needy Russian children at the Bridge party Friday, January 18. About 52 tables of bridge were set up in the third floor Waterman Lounge. Townspeople, members of the faculty, and students were well represented. Games were played from 8.00 p.m. until 10.45 p.m.

The downtown stores donated many prizes. A chocolate cake, gift of the Federal Bakeshop, was the door prize. President Millis, assisted by Miss Power, awarded the prizes. Most of the prizes were received by the townspeople. However, Professor Douglas, newly appointed to the engineering department, captured a smoking stand. Virginia Hamel '48 and Dot Hollender '47, set a new low score record which warranted the award of prizes. Punch and cookies were served by Redstone Campus girls.

Miss Jefferson was in charge of the bridge assisted by Miss Gutchell and Mrs. Towne.

Prizes were donated by the following concerns: Abernethy Clarkson Wright, Inc.; Abraham's Druggist; Agel Corman, Bero's; Coty; Federal Bake Shop; Old Bee Hive; Gove the Florist; Hall's Furniture Store; Morrison's; McAuliffe's; Harry Neeley; O'Halloran and Son; O'Neill's Hat Shop; Preston's Jewelry Store; Vermont Mattress Company; Lawrence and LeClair; Verret's, and Louis Pine.

Amendment Added To Constitution

Seventeen U. V. M. students gathered in room 140 at 7.00 p.m., Friday, January 18, to amend the amendment to the Constitution. At 7.04 p.m., Wendell Earle '46, president of Student Government, arrived. He read the proposed change, moving election for officers of the Executive Committee up a week, and asked for discussion. As there was none, Jan Commanday '46, moved that the amendment be accepted. There were several seconds to the motion, and it was passed unanimously. Wendell Earle spoke very briefly about the coming elections. He predicted a hot contest, and asked that everyone vote himself, and urge his friends to. At 7.10 the meeting adjourned.

Petitions for nominations for the executive offices of Student Government, President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer, should be turned in by January 24.

The Why of WSSF

WSSF is an organization unique in itself, as it emphasizes in an active and practical way the bond that exists between students of every nation. The realization that others across the sea are working toward the same goal as we are makes us part of a united international brotherhood. Support of a project like WSSF is, then, not just a gesture of sympathetic relief, but a real fraternal action.

Like any of us, a student in Greece or China or France has certain aims—the acquirement of truth and knowledge to make for himself and others a richer, finer life. The conditions under which he must labor to reach this goal are, however, distinctly different from our own. For an American college student, every facility for learning is at hand. Stocked libraries, nourishing food, friendly surroundings are commonplace accompaniments to his process of study. With every assistance to aid and abet him, only his own apathy can prevent him from gaining the values of college life. In the war-devastated parts of the world, though, another story exists. Thousands of eager prospective students find their ambitions thwarted by desolation and want, famine and disease. There is will to learn, but pitifully little way.

This then is the set-up, and in the case it presents to us there are two important considerations. One is the thankfulness that our own universities were freed from the scourges of war. The other is the further realization of that strong tie of brotherhood, for who can understand better than one student the position of another.

Of course we want to help—and fortunately the means will be at our disposal when WSSF opens its drive this week. The case has been presented—THE SOLUTION IS UP TO US.

Exam On Rules Is Headache to Weary Juniors

Many a plaintive cry broke from the [illegible] women last week. By Wednesday night the rules had become a bore. "Do we have to go through that again?"

That was the Women's Student Union exam for juniors. So Wednesday night at 7:45 girls were to a frazzle by two o'clock years on the U V M campus gathered together once again to undergo the tortures of a revised exam on campus social rulings.

Some bright souls, who had studied the rules, dashed off the answers in twenty minutes and went their merry way to the Flying Saucer or some other den of iniquity, secure in the knowledge that they had signed out for 10:30 and that they could roll before 10:00 and make it an 11:15 [illegible]. Sorta—you look it up. That put the exam under the label of a "social evening." Shenanigans must be scrolling.

The rest of the not-so-enlightened creatures struggled over the problems of quiet hours on Saturday night and smoking privileges on Sunday.

The final question, "Give the procedure to be followed if you wish to spend a week-end at Dartmouth," brought forth varying replies from "First get your books into a Dartmouth man" to "Get me an invitation and let me learn from experience."

The proctors tell us that everyone finished the exam by 11:00 p.m., but it's rumored that two Juniors from Grassmere got out just in time to grab a cup of coffee before an eight o'clock class on Thursday morning.

MUSEUM MURMURS

By Kay Marcott

It seems to be the general idea of most people that a small museum is destined to work forever alone, receiving small gifts and loans now and then from various kind souls who hope they can further to some extent the usefulness of the local "home of the Muses."

However, recent cooperation between the Fleming Museum and the Museum of Fine Arts at Boston successfully refutes the old idea of the small, struggling underdog who is thrown only a bone and that at rare intervals. This time the Fleming Museum, through the efforts of its staff and the newly-formed Fleming Museum Association, has gotten hold of two very choice dishes.

The first dish was served up when the Museum obtained on loan for its Christmas exhibition the "Adoration of the Magi" by Tintoretto from the Museum of Fine Arts, a masterpiece of the Italian Renaissance valued at some two hundred thousand dollars. This magnificent canvas was on display for almost three weeks and during that time over twenty-six hundred people made a pilgrimage to the top of the hill to worship for a time at the throne of Art.

In the second place the Fleming Museum can now proudly announce that it will contain in the course of a few months a completely new and rejuvenated Classical Collection for the use of the Classical, History and Art Departments of the University. Dr. George Edgell, Director of the Museum of Fine Arts, and Dr. George Chase, Curator of Classical Antiquities, have made an indefinite loan to the Fleming Museum of a dozen original Greek vases, several bronze figurines, a dozen terracotta and stone statuettes, and several important reproductions.

When the representative of the Fleming Museum thanked Doctor Edgell for his interest and kindness, the director replied, "It's the policy of our Museum to help smaller museums and I have always felt a very personal interest in the Fleming Museum."

It is expected that the new Classical Collection will be open to the public before the end of the Spring Quarter and the staff of the Fleming Museum sincerely hopes that the students of various departments will use the new facilities of the University's museum to the greatest possible degree.

Heavy cream, prepared by a new method utilizing a germicidal lamp, will stay fresh at room temperatures for more than a year.

Three Campus Groups Sponso Military Conscription Forum

By Stan Golden

Should the United States adopt post-war military conscription? This question which has been debated back-and-forth for months now will be the topic of a discussion sponsored by the Sigma Phi discussion group at the Student Lounge on Friday, January 25. The forum will be made up jointly of the Sigma Phi discussion group, the International Relations Club, the Veterans Club, and all interested members of the faculty and student body.

The moderator for the forum, Rich Harper, will introduce the pro and the con speakers, and will conduct the question-ing and discussion period which will follow. The discussion will be lively, because 80 per cent of the veterans, in a recent vote taken at one of their meetings endorsed universal military conscription, while a great many members of the faculty and student body are against it.

Taking the pro side of the argument for military conscription will be answered. He will have many arguments to back him such as General Eisenhower's statement to Congress in which he said, "We must be prepared on M-Day—the day the enemy strikes—or we may never be prepared to avert the defeat at the hands of an aggressor who uses against us the weapons of the future." The military men of the country feel that in another war attackers wouldn't give the United States time to prepare and arm, but would attack this country first. As for the atomic bomb making the conscription unnecessary, the militarists say that a citizen army will first have to be used as rescue squads and detonation squads after the atom bomb [illegible] then they would be used in the attack on the enemy. Advocates could knock out the atomic-bomb racks, and the enemy cannons are a few of the problems which will be discussed on the affirmative side of universal military conscription.

Taking the opposition will be Raymond A. Hait, long an opponent of the idea of universal military conscription who has had many opportunities to speak on the subject. A few arguments backing this side are the atomic bomb question, to the effect that the atomic bomb war would make a draft army both unnecessary and unwanted. A great advocate for the opposition, a large majority of the educators in the country. They feel that in the future education would be of much greater benefit for world peace than universal military conscription. One German scientist interviewed by Americans after the surrender said that time and time again Hitler told him that his policy of taking the cream of colleges and technical laboratories was detrimental, and that had the opposite policy been extensive education, he was confident that they would have won the war. Arguments such as this, instituted by educators all over the country, are some of the greatest opposition to the military conscription proponents. The arguments of militarism replacing the American civil life, and armament leading inevitably leading to war are some of the other arguments against this idea.

The Sigma Phi discussion group extends a welcome invitation to all students, professors and townspeople interested in this problem which confronts us.

Dorm Notes . . .

SLADE HALL

Without much effort, Slade girls have been busy keeping up their record of always being the "late dates" on campus. All we can be thankful for is the fact that Waterman clocks are usually five minutes slower than ours.

"Gig" Moodie hit a 118 in bowling last week. Since she just began the sport last quarter, we thought she did all right. We'll let you come and look at her for a quarter.

Edie Robbins, Lydia Smith, and our ex-Slade girl, "Shorty" Cutler went riding in the moonlight last week. Hearing it straight from Shorty, they weren't cold when they returned and they had a wonderful time.

REDSTONE

The beaming faces seen at Redstone this week belong to Nancy Dorman and Betty Ingalls. The reason? Telephone calls from "Clair" and "Laurie" respectively. Both are going home, naturally. Do we envy them? And how!

"You • • • $, you trumped my ace."

"My finesses never work." Such exclamations as these rebound from the walls of our "serene and sedate study room," as the bridge tournament shifts into high gear. The winner, who will write a book divulging the secret of her success will be announced later this month. The fortunate holder of the booby prize will be allowed the honor of publishing this great book of higher learning. Autographed copies will be sold in the bookstore, you lucky people!

ROBINSON HALL

Did people go around calling Marion Marshall a poker face last week? Did they get angry at her and claim she only half-smiled at her friends?

Maybe you were one of the contributors to the boxes which Jane Atwood, Lillian Tucker, and Gladys Clark are sending overseas to France. Nice people around Redstone campus gave everything from sweaters, skirts and shoes, to condensed milk and money, enough to pack three welcome boxes for some hungry French families.

DELTA PSI

Aileen Nichols is with us again, after a week in the Infirmary with a "code id da node."

We welcome with enthusiasm, three new additions to the dorm, from the dispossessed of Converse . . . Nancy Tobey, Marie Gerdon and Mary Matthews.

"Y" Team Defeats J.V. Quintet 40-32

Bill Flanders is High Scorer With 14 Points

A surprising Y.M.C.A. team, boasting many ex-Burlington High School stars, turned on the pressure in the last half to to turn back a stubborn Vermont Jayvee Five, 40-32 Saturday evening in the Memorial Auditorium opener. It was the third straight loss against a single win for the luckless Vermonters.

Once again Freshman Bill Flanders kept the Landamen in the fray as he dumped in 14 points with a brilliant display. Hal Sikora, a star on Burlington High's 1937 "wonder" team, broke the Kittens back by dunking four quick baskets in the third period. These proved too great a handicap for the desperate Vermonters who peppered the basket from all angles during the final eight minutes.

Burnell, Johnny White and Williams also played outstanding ball for the "Y." Johnny Manchester, Burlington Free Press sports writer, turned hoopman for an evening and contributed a fancy heave to swell the winner's total.

Shining with Flanders in defeat for the Jayvees were Cy Elmore and Al Fitzgerald in the forecourt and Guard Chuck Costantino who continually set up Vermont scoring plays. Newcomer Billy Bister likewise impressed in his brief appearances on the court.

The Kitten squad is now slated to rest up until January 28, when a return battle with the "Y" is scheduled. Coach Landa may have more lineup changes at that time.

Vermont ..... 28 24—52
Norwich ..... 15 9—24

Striking with devastating swiftness in the opening minutes, Vermont's Green and Gold took a long stride down the state championship road by swamping a hapless Norwich quintet 52-24 before some 1,500 delighted fans in Memorial Auditorium Saturday evening. The win hunted the Cats into a first place tie with St. Michael's in the state hoop series. Each team has won its only league tilt.

In chalking up its third win in four starts, Vermont was led by Ken Pierce with 13 points and Capt. Howie Stein with 12. Jim Seivwright with eight markers and Les Sussman with seven were the backbone of an important Norwich offensive.

Coach "Fuzzy" Evans again substituted freely as he gave his reserves a good workout. This merciful gesture kept the score down, but there was little doubt after the first five minutes that Norwich was in for a rough evening. Even the subs continued to pile it on Bob Stafford, making his collegiate debut, and Bob French, in particular looked good for the reserves.

Norwich's highly publicized Jack Jones failed to put in an appearance as the Cadets floundered badly from the floor. At the foul circle the Horsemen were no better, chalking up but four of 15 attempts. This was by far the sorriest performance seen in the Auditorium this season.

First Half

"Ham" Livingston, continuing the blistering pace he set a week ago, opened the fray by dropping a two-pointer from way out. Stein followed with a layup and foul shot, and Pierce connected from the side to put Vermont ahead 7-0 in the first three minutes of play.

Jay Cohen broke the ice for Norwich with a long heave from the center, but Pierce registered for U.V.M. with a foul and a shot from the side. Seivwright, an ex-teammate of Ken Pierce at Montpelier High School, found the range to drop in two fast field goals and Gil Maurielo made his lone score of the evening to raise Horseman hopes. Seconds later Pierce and Maurielo exchanged fouls to make the count Vermont 11, Norwich 9. That was to be the closest Norwich was to come during the remainder of the night.

Captain Stein dropped in a long shot, Bob Stafford a one-hander and French tapped in a rebound before Cohen finally

Get Set NOW for the "Victory World"

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

During the past few weeks this department has devoted much copy to basketball, football and bowling, and perhaps, has unintentionally relegated winter sports to the background. It's about time we take a look at this very popular side of the campus scene.

Friday Vermont's highly rated ski team blew the lid off the 1946 season as they journeyed to Middlebury to come to grips with such powerhouses as Dartmouth, Army, New Hampshire, Tufts, McGill, St. Lawrence, Rensselaer, and the Black Panthers. Six players—Larry Fagan, Pete Mallet, Bob Hawley, Dave Goodell, Heath Bourdon, and Reg Worthen made the trip. All except Captain Mallet were Freshmen getting their first taste of intercollegiate competition.

The team was not at full strength for the meet. Chuck Plumley's injured hip did not respond to treatment as was expected, and the promising vet had to be left behind. Ed Crane, of last year's squad was also forced out of action at the last minute.

Earlier the girls' squad was dealt a crushing blow when illness sidelined Skip Lewis. Mary Greene, W.A.A. president, and Louise Jordan were at Breadloaf to represent the Green and Gold against co-ed squads from Vassar, Mount Holyoke, Skidmore, Syracuse, St. Lawrence, New Hampshire, McGill, and Middlebury.

While skiing interest was mounting, a favorite individual sport made its reappearance in the U.V.M. scene. For the past few weeks, under the combined sponsorship of the W.A.A., Outing Club and Athletic Department, a huge skating rink has been constructed behind the men's gymnasium. Cold weather and many floodings in recent days have put the ice in close to top condition. Lights have been installed for night skating and the cage has been offered for students for changing into their skates. All that's necessary now is a good cold spell to keep the rink in top shape.

Although it's a bit early to plan on it, Vermont possibly might be able to field a hockey team next winter. The last attempt was in 1940 when an informal squad represented the University. Often called the fastest of all sports and known among sports writers as "mayhem on ice," the sport should prove very popular with U.V.M. fans. The chief obstacle to such a team being formed has long been the lack of suitable playing facilities. The new ring is plenty large enough to handle playing surface for any game which would be scheduled for Burlington, where the spectators would stay remains the one big rub.

A situation like this might be funny but Man Alive didn't achieve any decent humor. The principals involved in the picture, Dane Clark, Pat O'Brien, and Rudy Vallee deserve comment.

Dane Clark shows what a big he-man he is again in "San Antonio" but he didn't convince anyone including this commentator. The story had something to do about ranchers, blackmailers, and a saloon "Dancing Girl" with Alexis Smith playing the heroine. "San Antonio" has nothing on regular cowboy and Indian movies which I thought were not permitted in the Flynn theater's policy.

In the way of cowboy and Indian thrillers the Strong is showing Gene Autry the horse propelled crooner, in his latest offering, "Guns and Guitars" which has just enough plot to hold it together. It's an ideal picture for fans of my Bang-Bang Department.

World Relatedness Stressed at First YW Mass Meeting

Opening the first YWCA meeting of 1946 President Barbara Powers '46 proclaimed the "World Relatedness" theme Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the East Lounge to about 60 YW members. She stressed the fact that now, in the formative days of the UNO, young people with connections and high ideals should make themselves felt as a political force in their own spheres. In this connection she spoke of the World Student Christian Federation. The WSCF is an international organization uniting students. It provides funds where they are most desperately needed, and sponsors summer work camps. Although the chapter is a member it does not include private memberships.

Dot Hansen '47, read and explained the new Constitution, which Betty Reid helped the cabinet draw up. Since ratification requires 75 members, those present voted and the others will be contacted by mail.

Betty Reid spoke about one of her favorite subjects, relief for Europe. She suggested that individual dorms adopt some family in Europe, for which she can provide names and addresses, where food could be sent regularly, either weekly or monthly. After a report from the Community Projects Commission and the newly established World Relatedness Commission from Lois Stevens '47, and Dot Hansen '47, the president announced that the Federation Day of Prayer will be February 17. The first student conducted chapel will be held the last Tuesday in January.

Hansen to be Delegate

Dot Hansen will represent Vermont at the national convention in Atlantic City March 2-8 where every chapter in the country will be represented. Nancy Hall, chairman of the Social Action Commission, announced a Forum Wednesday, January 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the East Lounge, on Labor. There will be a CIO representative from town, to present the organization's side of the question.

The entertainment which Dixie Dockstader '46, arranged, started with group singing of songs from Mexico, Hawaii, Canada, Italy, Australia, Czechoslovakia, Palestine, and America. Dot Hansen did a dance to the strains of Hawaii's national anthem complete with a real grass skirt and authentic gestures. National costumes of Japan, Mexico, China, Flanders, Norway, Sweden, and Germany, then were modeled as Jij Donaldson '47, Lee Zoll '47 and Liz Concklin '47 passed cookies and tea.

SIMMONS GRADUATE TO EVALUATE DIETS

The staff of the nutrition project being carried on under the direction of Dr H. B. Pierce at the U.V.M. College of Medicine has engaged Miss Susan B Merrow, a graduate of Simmons College in 1939.

In an effort to determine the causes of malnutrition, Miss Merrow will evaluate diets of children, and take their nutritional histories several times a year to get a seasonal picture.

Following her graduation from Simmons College, she was with the Boston Dispensary Food Clinic as a graduate student dietitian, and at the Children's Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa., where she established food clinics in the out-patient department.

Returning to Boston with the Visiting Nurse Association, she took a master's degree in education at Boston University.

4-H Club Meeting

Former 4-H members met in the Student Lounge, Friday, January 18. The 20 members present played games and sang around the piano. Betty Whitney '48, Ruth Mason '49, and Mary Hard '48, were in charge of entertainment. Refreshments of cake and chocolate milk were sold by Millicent Vaughn '49. The next meeting will be February 1. Miss Pauline Rowe and Mr. E. L. Ingalls were guests.

Life is not dull at Delta Psi, what with jive sessions on the second floor due to a borrowed victrola in Room 1. All this during quiet hours, of course.

Now we will ramble to the Alpha Tau Omega where we hear a demerit system has been established so as to help keep quiet hours quiet. The penalty for noise is one demerit and after obtaining six demerits your social nights are taken away for one week. This, however (and everyone is probably letting up a low cheer), is being abolished soon. . . . Arrabel "Butch" Sutter, who was a whiz on skiis in Switzerland, has joined the ski team . . . . Also, Anne Tuttle has her sister Carol Snyder, an alumna of Pine Ridge College, up for a visit over the week-end . . . Fraternity Second Quarter Rushing Starts February 4

Sororities to Hold Informal Parties This Saturday For Rushees

Rushing for fraternities will begin with a Waterman open house on February 4, 1946 at the Waterman building. Prior to the formal rushing, an orientation talk on fraternities will be given by Prof. J. P. Carroll at 5.30 p.m. on Friday, February 1, in Room 239, Waterman.

Rushing will follow much the same plan as it did in the first quarter. On February 4, beginning in the evening, there will be a general open house for all men interested in joining fraternities. Each fraternity will have its own room in Waterman where it can welcome and get acquainted with the new men.

On Tuesday and Wednesday nights, rushing banquets will be held, and the meeting halls will be designated by each individual fraternity. No individual rushing will be permitted all day on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday. Rushing will only be permitted on the nights and at the designated places named above. Thursday will also be a closed rushing day with bids turned into Professor Carroll's office between 12.30 and 5 p.m.

Sorority Rushing

About 120 Frosh women and transfers will be rushed Saturday, January 26, at the first of a series of two informal rushing parties.

Pan Hellenic has made rules forbidding the use of elaborate invitations. Postcards informing the rushees of the time, place, and sorority giving the party will be used instead. There will be no decorations at the affairs, nor any major theme, or costumes.

On the Saturday following this one, the second and last informal party will be held, and on Sunday, February 3, a formal open house will be given. This is the last final before the final parties. This year, the open house rushing system will be used and the freshmen will be divided into eight groups. These groups will rotate from house to house in a specified order and will be "shooed out" after a half hour.

American Welding Offers Cash Prize

Davis Undergraduate Welding Award, which will consist of four cash prizes totaling $700 to be presented annually to authors and publications for the best and second best articles on welding published in undergraduate magazines or papers during the preceding year. Any undergraduate of a college, university, or institute of technology in the United States or Canada is eligible, but the paper must be published in an undergraduate publication. Judges selected by the Educational Committee of the American Welding Society will select the winning paper in July of each year on the basis of originality of the work and thoroughness in which the subject is covered. The awards will be as follows: $200 each to the author of the winning paper and to the publication in which it appears, and $150 each to author and publication for the second best paper.

Carrigan Speaks To Pres. Truman

As Governor Proctor's representative, Dean Carrigan, and the governors from 30 other states had an interview with President Truman in the White House last Wednesday, January 16. The purpose of the interview was to obtain support for legislation now in Congress to make available more heavy equipment for the Soil Conservation work being carried on in the states. The President indicated that he was very much interested and would do all that he could to help in the subject.

Dean Carrigan said that the President shook hands with all the men individually and was very friendly throughout the interviews. He impressed the Dean as being a very sincere and likeable person.

After leaving Washington, the Dean went to Schenectady where he spoke on purchasing farms at present high prices over the WGY radio station.

UVM Co-ed Band Will Play For 1946 Kake Walk

As February rapidly approaches the student body begins formulating serious plans for Kake Walk and the band as in past years, starts preparing an appropriate program of music.

This year the band will include in its Kake Walk program selections by outstanding American composers. "Snow Land" by George Kemp, "Dancing in Blue" by George Gershwin, "Begin, the Beguine" by Cole Porter, "Desert Song" by Sigmund Romberg, and "Babes in Toyland" by Victor Herbert.

New Recording of Cotton Babes

Some time ago a new recording was made of "Cotton Babes," Vermont's traditional Kake-Walk Theme Song. It is a new rendition of this ever popular song.

Ex-Servicemen Join Band

The band this year has been strengthened by the return of veterans. Conductor Lechnyr, speaking also for the members, expressed the wish that other ex-service men and women would become members of the band. Several of the new members of the G.I. group were former members of the R.O.T.C. Band under Conductor Lechnyr.

Rehearsals are held each Monday and Wednesday at 5 o'clock in the "Old Art Building" where the entire top floor is used as band headquarters.

He started trumpet at the age of 12 he was already working and more than 2000 arrangements. Two years later Randy joined the Ina Ray Hutton radio program. At 18 under the tutelage of Bunny Berigan Randy Brooks joined Hal Kemp's orchestra. Shortly after he joined the new Claude Thornhill band at Glen Island Casino in New York.

With the finest background possible Randy Brooks and his Orchestra are taking their place with the foremost orchestras of all time, in addition to setting a new record in regard to length of stay at New York's famous Roseland Ballroom. The band was booked for [illegible] days at the famous Manor Park in Madison Square Garden previously used as a one week stand in the careers of Charlie Spivak, Jerry Wald, and Gene Krupa. Besides the two New York show places the band played for the patrons of Frank Dailey's popular Meadowbrook in New Jersey. Recently very favorable reports were heard from the Middlebury Carnival at which they played.

NEWMANITES HOLD RETREAT AT TRINITY

Over 25 Catholic students at the University departed from the busy campus routine over the week end and made a Retreat at Trinity College in Burlington. The Retreat which began on Saturday afternoon and ended Sunday evening was conducted under the direction of the Rev. Gerard Duford, S.S.E. The Newman Club sponsored the Retreat in cooperation with Fr. M. Cleary, Dean of Trinity College and the Club advisors Dr. Katherine McSweeney and Catherine E. Reilly.

Father Duford lectured twenty three times in the course of the conference. Eight Sororities On Hill Agree To Join In Greek Letter Reform Against Discrimination

A unanimous vote of the eight sororities on the hill against discrimination on the campus has resulted this week in a drive against quotas, backed by the Greek Letter Reform Movement. Sororities voted three weeks ago to rid their chapters of written or traditional policies of discrimination against students for racial or religious reasons. These eight organizations also agreed to back each other in efforts to sway any opposition to their cause.

In the CYNIC of January 11 you [illegible] ... the dance committee ... the dance ... one would think that the president of the ... Organization had not engaged at all ... for entertainment. Quite ... [illegible] ... and the ... [illegible] ... the ... [illegible] ... of the general committee in arranging the many problems that come forward in the ... As well as that, three weeks before the engagement was made Student Government ... we feel that the editor of the CYNIC should be responsible if the [illegible] candidates will be using the school name to their advantage. One of the most important parts of a campaign is the part of having the candidate's name and platform established in many places by speeches. In the same story one of the "candidates" has been given all the credit that is due him for his work on the [illegible] while the other is split in two and that by putting a large part of the [illegible] has not been mentioned. This may seem minute to you and possibly to others but we think that ... [illegible] ... recognize the fact that it might have an influence in the voting so [illegible] if you will see our point. We do not wish to accuse the paper of making a stand for any one candidate this year in the race but we would like to know just in the future the editor will be [illegible] in regard to the ... in the paper that might concern either or both of the candidates.

We realize that the article seemed perfectly harmless to you at the time of publication and that the credit was not given to Mr. Conley probably as a result of those conflicting [illegible] headline situations that come up ... newspaper writing.

[illegible] of the CYNIC

"Examination Rules Is Headache to Weary Juniors." Thus ran the headline of the article about the Student Union Rules Test. The headline on this article might be "Student Union and Its Rules are Headache to Weary Student Body."

Why a Student Union? We, the students of U.V.M., have a governing body, Student Government. Is it that the administration and whomever else is concerned don't think that Student Government is capable of handling women? That hardly seems possible, inasmuch as the potentialities of Student Government extend to power to "handle" the whole student body, including the women on academic and school issues. Why not on moral issues such as now late the coeds can stay out at night and will the [illegible] rule extend to next year.

In other words, Student Union seems to this writer, to be a mass of superfluous red tape. And what is more, it is very undemocratic in function. Every coed who attends the University is automatically a member and must abide by the rules. Now the defenders of Student Union will say that the women are notified of their becoming members before [illegible] and if they don't like it they can go to another school. All that is good and fine, but do the women know beforehand just how this organization works, or what its rules are?

Four times a year, the women are herded together at a compulsory meeting. Very few women are really say that anything is accomplished at these meetings. However, if you're a bad little girl and don't attend the meeting ... pretty soon you will not have to only attend the meeting, but also sit with your hands ... you will get punished.

Why can't the women join the University. Why can't Student Government govern the coeds? Why can't the Student Court judge the violations of the rules?

And speaking about the rules, it is perhaps time that they were gone over with a fine tooth comb and the ultra-foolish ones weeded out. Student Union is theoretically, government by the women students, but how much of what it says is direct parroting of what the administration wants? Aren't the students old enough to have a say in what their rules should be?

It is the opinion of this columnist that the people who hold the high positions on Student Union should forego the doubtful honor of being an officer of that organization and should actively participate in dissolving it. There are at least three ways by which that could be done: 1. By student petition; 2, by other forms of protest, and 3. by the officers resigning and no one's being willing to take their places. Without officers, the organization in order to function would have to be governed directly by the administration. This would show up the organization as it really is and pressure could probably be brought to have it transferred to Student Government where it belongs.

A great step will have been taken when Student Union and the "air of gracious living" in the rotunda are tied up and heaved bodily out of this University.

They were also responsible for building docks and warehouses, unloading ships and making certain that the Japs did not break through behind the lines in a counterattack.

Hoopsters To Travel Interstate Circuit

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

This department is pleased to report one of U. V. M.'s most versatile and promising lettes. Dale Conley, is able to resume his place on the campus sport scene—completely covered from the serious illness which has plagued him for over a year and which was responsible for his discharge from the army.

Before entering the service Dale made his bow in the athletic picture as a star hooster for the West Charleston, Vt., semi-pro basketball squad. There, using his foot plus frame to good advantage, he caused opponents no end of grief with his aggressive play.

Then deciding to get into sports on full-time basis, Dale joined Al Venturi's shows as "second" for boxer, Young Charles. After serving his apprenticeship conditioning principals of "cauliflower row," Conley decided to enter the ring himself. Dale had a few amateur fights under his belt when the call from Uncle Sam came.

As a member of the Headquarters Company, Third Battalion of the 172nd Infantry. Dale did plenty of boxing at Camp Blanding, Fla. His fight record, practically unblemished, boasts an impressive K.O. record. All the time however, Dale jealously protected his amateur status by turning down all pro fight offers. Despite a victory string. Conley did not escape unscathed from the ring wars. Today he bears a noticeable scar over each eye, mute testimony that he stopped as well as dished out punches.

Before sailing for overseas Dale returned to his first love, basketball. At Camp Shelby, Miss., while playing in G.I. shoes another player stepped on a toe and blood poisson resulted. Upon recovering from the mishap, he decided to try his hand at baseball. In a few weeks he had worked his way up to become the ace pitcher of the battalion nine. A blazing fast ball, a good curve, and a clever change of pace chalked up many wins for the 172nd.

Like so many others, Dale's career was cut short when sailing orders came. There was little time for recreation during the next few years. Japs had to be routed from Bondova, New Georgia, Guadalcanal, and the Philippines. Dale was in on all of these campaigns before the previously mentioned disease cut short his army days.

Now after nearly two years Conley is ready to try a comeback. If all goes well he should be "burning them in" for Larry Gardner and the rest of the U. V. M. team this spring. Here's wishing him luck, it couldn't happen to a nicer guy.

W. A. A. Notes

The skiing stories report an increase in participants. Passage and various other improvements. The reason seems to be the best competitive week in the girl's W. A. A. sport slight. The hike to Smuggler's week for some sports has been debated—pros and cons—and the decision is that it is exercising and if one is interested, the scenery is beautiful.

The Vermont Women's Ski team participated in the Middlebury Ski competition with not too satisfactory results. Mary Greene and Louise Jordan skied for the team. From twenty-three contestants, Mary Greene figured eighth in the running, while Louise Jordan was ninth.

At a recent meeting at the Tri-Delt house, the All Sports Club worked on the rules and regulations of the awarding of the participation cup. This cup is awarded to the dorm or house that has the greatest number of girls participating in any W. A. A. sport during the quarter. Previously the cup was given at the end of the year, this year it will be given at the end of every quarter. Mary Thornton, Ann Hoos, Virginia Campbell, Peggy Donnelly, and Mary Greene are the members of this club.

In the fourteen below weather, the Skating Club received instruction from Florence Mueller in the absence of the regular instructor, Gwen Richardson. The furnace room of the gym is being used as a "change up room" also as a "warm up room."

The Basketball Club which is now umpired and refereed by members of the Referee and Coaching Club, is working on team plays using the new basketball regulation of the ball out of bounds instead of the regular "free throw" as a penalty for fouls. Green and Gold teams battled in a near football game—giving the excuse "it is the first game of the season."

The Beginners Badminton Club would like to make an announcement that anyone who is a beginner or near beginner in badminton would be welcome, for there are at this time, Friday 2.30, several courts that are free.

Last Tuesday a meeting of those interested in participating in the annual Lilac Day Dance met and discussed plans for Lilac Day. The dance which during the war had been held indoors will be on Redstone Campus with the traditional lilac bush being planted for the expressed purpose of beautifying Redstone.

Due to a conflict in classes, the Swimming Club time will be changed from 4.30 p.m. to 4.45-5.15, but the Strokes Club will remain from 5.15 to 5.45. For those desiring diving lessons, there is a section of the Strokes Club that is devoted particularly to diving.

Quintet To Take On Grenier Field Friday

Squad To Invade Mass. State Saturday Night

This morning at 9:30 the U. V. M. hoop squad will leave for Burlington for a two night stay in Manchester, N. H. where they will meet the Grenier Field squad tonight and in Amherst, Mass. where they have a tilt scheduled for tomorrow night. These will be the first games of the year which the Cats will play on a foreign court and will give some hint of what their showing will be like for the remainder of the season.

Only Eleven Men

For the first trip of the season only 11 men will be in uniform. The starting five will probably be Pierce and Stafford in the forward spots, French at center and Livingstone and Stein in the guard positions. Collier and Houston will hold down the bench in forward positions while Lesko will be on hand to relieve French. Perrow, Levine and Montgomery will probably be on hand as reserve guards with a possibility of Clairmont replacing Montgomery as the eleventh man.

Besides the 11 players making the trip there will be Coach Fuzzy Evans, Sgt. Landa and Manager Vic Sarrino.

Being the best organized team since the termination of the war, the hoop squad will be the first to enjoy modern transportation facilities like traveling coach trains. Leaving at 9:40 this morning in two eight passenger taxies, the squad arrived at White River Junction at 12:30 for lunch. Leaving there at 1:30, they arrived at Manchester at 4:30. Then a quick lunch and the game with the Birdmen from Grenier Field.

Tomorrow morning they will be taken on a tour of Grenier Field. Then, after lunch, they will leave for Amherst at about 1:00. Arriving at 4:30, they will eat a light lunch at 5:00 just before the Massachusetts State game. After the game starts the long trip back and to keep the boys awake there is a stop planned at Brattleboro about 12:00. After a good feed there the hardwood pounders will settle down for the three or three and a half hour drive back to Burlington.

Joe Palooka Award Goes to U V M Student

Dale Conley, president of the Veterans Club, was the recent U.V.M. candidate in Monogram Pictures contest for Joe Palooka's counterpart in real life. Dale in contest with the entries from most college campuses, didn't win the contest but received a Gruen wrist watch as Vet [illegible] prize.

The purpose of the contest was to find a college man, preferably a veteran who looked somewhat like Joe Palooka to portray him on the screen in the forthcoming movie, "The Champ." Monogram Pictures asked one college in each state to choose a candidate. When they called the News Bureau at U.V.M., it was too late to appoint a committee and go through the usual proceedings, but after considerable informal discussion, Dale Conley was selected, and his picture and write-up were sent to Hollywood.

The entries (20,000) were received through the cooperation of newspapers, radio stations, commentators, theatres, and colleges. The winner of the contest, Joe Kirkwood, Jr., son of the famous golfer, of Daytona Beach, Fla., is now under contract with Warner Brothers to do, "The Champ." Among the other candidates were Merryl Frost, captain of Dartmouth's football squad, Lt. Col. J. I. Golsan of Alabama, middleweight boxing champion of Southern Conference.

Ski Meet Planned

The ski meet in Stowe on the weekend of February 9 to which Dartmouth and Harvard have already accepted invitations, promises to make a big weekend for U. V. M. On Saturday morning at 8.00 buses will be run from the Waterman building to accommodate students who wish to see the downhill and slalom events of the meet. The bus will return to Burlington at 4.30 p.m.

On January 28 and 29 the Outing Club will sell tickets for the Saturday trip to Stowe in the front hall of the Waterman building. Tickets will sell for the following prices:

Ski team members, $1.00.
Outing Club members, $1.50.
All others, $2.00.

Writing Course Grows New Members Admitted

Under the program of Adult Education the course in creative writing at the University of Vermont, will enter upon its second half on Wednesday evening, February 6, in Waterman building. The final meetings of the present unit of the course will be on Monday evenings, January 21 and 28.

Several members of the class have already made sales to well-known publications, while others are well on the way to selling their writings, according to Prof. Leon W. Dean who directs the course. New members will be admitted at the opening of the second half.

Auction and Dance Part of WSSF Drive

"I'll do anything easy that doesn't involve work," volunteered Professor Colburn of the Art Department, as he learned of the faculty auction that is to take place at the WSSF benefit dance this Saturday night. A half a dozen professors, including Professor Hall, Professor Ladd, Professor Bloom, and Professon Colburn, are to perform services such as waiting on tables, and answering phone calls in the dorms, for the highest bidder, or group of bidders. Professor Dean will be the auctioneer.

Cakes made by the eight sororities on campus and by the Home Economics Club are to find their destination to those with "the dough" and appetite.

A trio of three college men, Dick Haigis '49, Jack White '49, and Dave Patch '49, are to appear as singing waiters.

This opportunity to watch the faculty be auctioned off at the block plus the opportunity to dance to the strains of Bernie Kriesel's orchestra is offered all U.V.M. students at 8.30 in the gym. The dance committee is headed by Dick Audette, '47, and the faculty auction has been arranged by Art Gillman '47.

Newman Club

At a meeting of the Newman Club Thursday at 8.00 p.m. in the Student Lounge, the Rev. John Dempsey, National Chaplain of Newman Club, spoke on "Pattern of Peace." Everyone was given an opportunity to meet Father Dempsey at a reception following the meeting. Refreshments were served.

Trades Project For Campus Vets

Engineers of the Federal Public Housing Authority of New England, Lloyd Westbrook and Robert Frost, were in Burlington this week consulting members of the administration at U. V. M. concerning the University's proposed colony of 50 trailers which are intended to ease the housing situation.

Just west of Centennial Field, off East Avenue and opposite the tennis courts is the site chosen for the colony, and it was approved without qualification by the engineers. The trailers are expected to be available this spring.

According to the Federal Public Housing Authority, the University is the first college in New England to have its application approved.

Y.W.C.A. SPONSORS TWILIGHT CHAPELS

Last quarter a group of U. V. M. students, after attending the twilight chapel of the Religion and Life Parley, decided to continue this worship service weekly under student leadership. Two such services were held last quarter.

This quarter, the Christian Faith Committee of the Y.W.C.A. has taken over the direction of the twilight chapel, and each week is [illegible] to lead the service.

The services, open to all who wish to come together to worship is to be held on Friday afternoons at 5:00 in the little chapel which is in the basement of the Ira Allen Chapel.

INDEPENDENT WALKERS NEEDED

Independents Cut Kake Walk Capers

Members of Kake Walking committee are still waiting for Independents to place their candidates. Fifty pairs and one pair of Independents have already paid their entrance fee of "Kake" and the [illegible] Fraternities.

In years previous to the war the number of Independents competing for the Kake equalled the number of competing pairs. It was hoped that with the return of veterans who are mainly non-fraternity men there would be a larger number interested in walking this year.

This is to notify all the Independents that there is still time to enter your contestants and that they will receive a great amount of enthusiastic support.

Independents who are thinking of entering Kake Walkers are urged to do so immediately and report their choice to Jane Brooks, head of Kake Walking committee.

Prof. Long Speaks To I.R.C. Group

The effect of Military Government on international relations was the main theme of the speech delivered by Professor Long of the Political Science Department at a meeting of the I. R. C. Club held Thursday evening in the Student Lounge. Professor Long analyzed the present four-power government of Germany and in greater detail discussed the military government of Japan. With these countries as guides he summarized the lessons to be drawn from them with respect to future relations.

Professor Long is especially well qualified to discuss the question of Military Government since he aided in the establishment of military government on Saipan while a Lieutenant (j.g.) in the Navy. He also has an extensive knowledge of the Orient, the product of ten years in China, from 1918 to 1928.

Results of Poll Show Students to Favor Name Band

Exact Band For Junior Week To Be Determined In Second Balloting

In an overwhelming majority the U. V. M. student body showed its preference for a big name band to play at the Junior Week Prom. The Prom Committee tabulated the votes cast at Convocation on Thursday, January 24, and revealed that 753 students voted for a big name band as opposed to 116 students who voted for a local band. Of the total of 753 votes, 501 were cast by women and 252 by men.

An analysis of the votes cast for a local band showed that upperclassmen were decidedly not in favor of that choice. In the class of '46 two men and 14 women voted for a local band; class of '47, three men and 14 women; class of '48, five men and 25 women; and class of '49, 18 men and 50 women. One man in the class of '50 and two unclassified male students also voted for a local band.

A second poll will be conducted in the near future to determine THE big name band which will provide the music for the Prom.

Dr. Huntley Dupre Appeals for WSSF

"Help, as an investment in a good security." These were the words of Dr. Huntley Dupre who spoke on the needs of foreign students at our convocation on January 25.

Doctor Dupre spoke on the needs of our foreign brother and sister students for educational implements. "There has been a breakdown of reason and law, tormented by war," he stated. "Youth and its millions of students have paid the usual price. Students and faculty both are now trudging the weary road back, once more to resume their education."

He cited examples of the many students who suffered hardships so that they might become educated. Many of our not-so-fortunate students lived in cages, with little lighting, little food, and few books. Many of them become subjected to tuberculosis, malaria, dysentery, and the other dreaded disease that come with the perils of war.

"The war is over now, but the job of rebuilding education once more faces us, more strongly and more firmly than ever. It is not only the task of the foreign countries, but the task of all the civilized people all over the world who are interested in once more rebuilding this into a decent livable world," he said

The drive for the World Student Service Fund on this campus has begun and will continue for the next three months. American students are asked to unite with students from thirteen other countries to assist in the task of rehabilitation of institutions in eighteen countries. This endeavor is conducted on a non-sectarian, non-racial, international, and non-political basis.

We have as our goal on this campus $800. This is only a small amount of the great debt we owe the students of those war torn countries.

NOTICE

The College Store is unable to meet the demand for Foerster and Steadman's Writing and Thinking and wishes to buy second-hand copies, at a dollar each, from students who do not need them.

LABOR IS SUBJECT OF BULL SESSION

"After all, seventy-five cents an hour is hardly a living wage for a man with a family." In answer to the many questions and arguments at the January 23 faculty-student bull session, Mrs. Eva Burdo of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union of the C. I. O., defended Labor's position.

Mrs. Burdo described the labor situation in Burlington and her union's stand nationally, stressing the point that labor was using the "jungle tactics" of striking only as a last resort. "We have been certified by the N. L. R. B. as a bargaining agent and have right by law to bargain," she said, "but management refuses to conciliate. All we want is an equalization of the profits."

At present Labor is fighting to obtain a national sixty-five cents minimum wage to apply to all workers engaged in Interstate Commerce. The minimum wage has previously been forty cents per hour.

Mrs. Burdo believes that a raise in laborers' wages will result in increased production, since with a higher wage the strikers would return to work, and that this will balance the increase of capital in circulation.

Bluestockings Meet

Gathering at the Kappa Sig house Friday evening, January 25, the Bluestockings listened to literature readings on records. They discussed recitations by Sir Johnson Forbes Robinson, John Barrymore, and Paul Robeson of famous scenes of Othello, Macbeth, and Hamlet. Miss Hughes, faculty advisor, also played her recordings by Ethel Evans of "She Walks in Beauty," "Tiger Tiger," "La Belle Dame Sans Merci," and a Shakesperean sonnet. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

Painting of Bridge Wins First Prize For Esther Cook

A U. V. M. student received first prize for the first time in the annual exhibition of painting and sculpturing by students from New England Colleges. A Vermont landscape by Esther Cook was judged best of the exhibition and she received $25.00 at the preview of the show Monday evening, January 28. The exhibition both took place in and was sponsored by the Springfield Museum of Fine Arts in Springfield, Mass.

This is the third year an exhibit of this kind has been held and sponsored by the Springfield Museum. The first year an oil by Mary Thornton '46 was chosen for reproduction to advertise the show. This year U.V.M. is represented not only by Esther Cook but also Elizabeth Dole '46, Ann Bayley '48, and Barbara Anderson '46. The competition was pretty stiff with Amherst, American International, Bennington, Conn., College for Women, Dartmouth, Mass. State, Middlebury, Smith, Goddard, Holyoke, Springfield College, Trinity, Williams, and Wesleyan all entering paintings. The display will stay at Springfield for a month and then it might come here to the Fleming Museum.

Prof. Colburn Gleeful

Professor Colburn was as gleeful as a kid when he heard the news of the decision. Esther was astounded.

"Professor Colburn asked me if I minded if he sent my picture down and I said sure, and forgot all about it," she said. Even then I didn't know it was competition. I though it was just exhibition. When the news came Allen House roof practically blew off."

As for the painting itself, it is a Vermont landscape with a covered bridge as the center attraction, done with a modern touch so that it doesn't "look like a calendar," to quote Professor Colburn.

Four Seasons Pictured

When asked about her painting, Esther said, "I don't know why I did a covered bridge. I come from St. Johnsbury, and

Sororities Hold First Informal Rushing Parties

The Seven Greek Letter Societies on campus held their first rushing parties last Saturday afternoon. This year with restrictions on cost and type of activity on the parties a new trend has been set. The parties were simple and unrehearsed.

Alpha Chi called its party a radio-novelty and using a radio did two short satirical radio plays called "The Fatal Quest" and "The Death of Julius Caesar" with the rushees participating in the plays. Tri Delt had a Scotch party serving oat cakes and their chan skeets. Everyone sang Scotch and U.V.M. songs. "I Dought It," three hankies were played. Refreshments consisted of hot chocolate and butterscotch cookies. Kappa Alpha Theta, holding their party at Mrs. Marcus' home, played games and sang songs. Sigma Gamma had a contest party. Among other things a pie eating contest was held, popcorn was popped and apples were baked in the fireplace. Alpha Epsilon Phi had a baby birthday party at the home of their sponsor, Mrs. Abraham on Overlake Terrace. They played "Pin the Tail on the Donkey" and "Farmer in the Dell." Refreshments were a birthday cake and milk. Tri Delt had an old fashioned taffy pull and each rank was accompanied by old fashioned songs. Pi Phi had a gambling party. Cards and dice were the order of the day while refreshments consisted of pretzels and root beer.

Industrial Relations To Be Topic of Series

University of Vermont students are invited to participate in a conference on Industrial Relations to be held Thursday, January 31 in the Contact Center.

At 2 p.m. there will be a symposium on labor and industry at which [illegible] President Mr. John Lawson of the CIO, Mr. Theodore Kane of the Associated Industries of Vermont, and Mr. Arthur Packard of the Farm Bureau. Also participating will be a leader in the MFL.

This conference is the first of a series on matters of social interest to which U. V. M. students are welcome. On February 28 there will be a forum on racial tensions at which Anna Arnold Hedgeman, the Executive Secretary of the F.E.P.C. will speak. Dr. Melvin De Witman Sullivan, the former secretary to the Interior of the Weimar Republic, will be present at a Conference on International Tensions. Further details will be announced later.

Ev. Bailey, Veteran Ski Ace, Returns to Coach U V M Team

By Cap White

Skiers' rumors have it that in the next man-of-the-hour polls a slender, bronzed skin young man of medium height will be voted to stand first on campus. The gentleman referred to is Everett Bailey, a resident of Stowe, who has returned to the University again as part-time coach of the ski teams and instructor in the Woman's Athletic Association's ski club program.

Ev first found himself upon skies when he was about three years old. He received his first real instruction in the Alberg technique of skiing while he was attending U. V. M., under the guidance of Sepp Ruschp, who was at that time a part time ski coach here. In 1938, as a member of the ski team, Ev participated in the Intercollegiate Championship held at St. Margarite in Canada, which meet the U. V. M. team won. In 1940-41, he coached the team himself.

Outing Club Head

While on campus, he was president of the Outing Club for several years and president of the Intercollegiate Ski Union. This latter organization had charge of centralizing the plans for skiing competition between from 30 to 40 colleges and universities. He also passed the United States Eastern Amateur Ski Association's test for certified instructors while only a sophomore in college.

Upon graduation in 1941 as an electrical engineer, he traveled to Pittsburgh to accept a job. Soon after he joined the 87th Mountain Infantry as a second lieutenant in the reserves. While stationed at Camp Hale, Ev found time to ski in Aspin, Colo. He served in the Aleutians, Italy, and was trained in rock climbing in West Virginia.

Served in Aleutians

Upon discharge Ev returned to Stowe to instruct in Sepp Ruschps ski school. During the off season he sells insurance. Besides his duties on this campus he is part time coach at the Norwich team.

Ev hopes to really develop skiing here at the University. Though ski practice got off to a rather poor start because of snow conditions, he is confident of the purpose ahead of him, to develop at U. V. M. really good ski teams. The W. A. A. ski classes are a start in the furthering of ski interest on campus.

We're indeed fortunate to have such an able organizer and instructor.

ACTION

by Joan R. Levin

January 1, 1946—and World War II is still being fought. Yes, the battlefields have cleared and the smoke has disappeared; the Nazi myth has been exploded, and Japanese aggression has been thoroughly checked. The war at Aachen and Okinawa is at the foxhole and the flamethrower is over. But the war of democracy against fascism goes on.

Fascism has not been crushed. It did not capitulate with the swastika nor did it die with the Kamikazi fanatics. It is alive. It is flourishing. And it is waging a fiercer battle right here in America today. It is fostering race discrimination and minority prejudice. It is fighting the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Fascism has no scruples. It does not accept by rules. It chooses its own weapons and its own theatre of operations. Today its weapon is free speech. And its scene of action is Congress.

Senator Bilbo and his ilk, the opposers of F. E. P. C. hold democracy and democratic procedure in contempt. Freedom and the Constitution are the subjects of their attack. The people—the little people you and I—are the subject of their venom. They cannot crush us individually. And so they are striving to still our voice. By filibustering in the Senate they are depriving our elected representatives of the right to speak. They are employing their own right to free speech as an instrument to propagate their evil. They are making a mockery of justice.

The purpose of the F. E. P. C. is to provide every American, regardless of race, creed, or color, with an equal opportunity for making a living. Its goal is the stoppage of deliberate exploitation of minorities. And the goal of the opposing southern senators is to nourish prejudice.

Pearl Harbor and the years that followed it proved the brotherhood of man. Enemy bullets and bayonets showed no discrimination. Negro soldiers were as valuable as white. Jews died from the same hideous wounds as did Gentiles. Skin pigment and religious convictions did not alter the fact that broken flesh was broken flesh, that blood was blood.

Americans fought in this war as Americans. They fought for the right to live peacefully and happily, to live as free men, to work as free men. They purchased their liberty at a tremendous cost. And now they have come back to claim what is rightfully theirs. The fascist block of senators would rob them of it.

This is the testing ground. This is the issue. F. E. P. C. stands for democracy. If it is defeated, everything we have fought for will have been in vain. If it is passed we will have struck a mortal blow at fascism.

[illegible] is the time to [illegible] action. Our enemy is active and organized. If we do not defend ourselves, we will succumb to its attacks. The time for discussion is past. The time for ACTION is at hand.

Letter to the Editor in the Cynic:

In your note referring to our letter in the last issue you stated that everyone responsible for the entertainment was mentioned in the article covering the Veterans' Dance. You also said that there was no reason to use Dale Conley's name except as a political boost. We think that if you will look into the situation you will find that he was responsible in many ways for the success of the affair. Mr. Conley made arrangements with President Millis for the use of the Waterman Rotunda, he was responsible for the singer who performed during the evening, he made arrangements with the man which sang at the dance, he obtained the P.A. system used for the dance, he made first contacts with the band which played for the dance, and last but not least he sold, unassisted, $76.80 worth of tickets for the dance. Certainly, that amount of effort merits some credit in an article covering the dance and the people responsible for it.

We feel that your somewhat caustic note might have had the facts behind it before it was printed and again we point out that even a few lines like those of the note should be examined a little more carefully for a statement which would slight the people concerned. Next witness please.

CHUCK COSTANTINO.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Twice during the past college year, the I.R.C. has sponsored brilliant and famous men to come here and bring before us some of the pressing problems of the outside world. Twice the small number of students attending these lectures has been disgusting.

I can well understand the absence of those who, at the Religion and Life Conference stated that campus affairs were much more important to them than world affairs. But, there must be others who have a broader outlook, and realize that the various movements on our campus, the removing of discrimination in frats and sororities, the honor system question, etc., are merely the echoes of world movements.

Wednesday night, we have another chance to show that we're a cosmopolitan university, with a deep interest in all world affairs. Let's not let the I.R.C. down again. Well?

Wilbur Library Has Quaint Old Journal

A quaint old journal has recently been acquired by the Wilbur Library in the Fleming Museum at the University, Mrs. Doris J. Harvey, librarian, has announced.

The book is the work of Erastus Root, who was born in Guilford in 1789 and graduated from Vermont in the class of 1814. He began his journal the following year, giving it the formidable title, "A Journal of the Most Remarkable Proceedings, Studies and Observations, Kept by Erastus Root." It gives the reader a vivid picture of a young man of that period, his philosophy, and the conditions of his life.

During part of the period covered by the journal he was teaching school in Grand Isle. Later entries show him to have been in Burlington, beginning the study of medicine under Dr. John Pomeroy.

MUSEUM MURMUR

One of the most outstanding [illegible] of early South America was that [illegible] Pre-Spanish Peruvians—a term [illegible] includes all the early civilizations [illegible] the Andean area. Because they [illegible] had no writing of their own, [illegible] have been obliged to reconstruct [illegible] past from other sources. The most important of these sources is the [illegible] ture of textiles, from which we learn both the historical periods of [illegible] peoples and the evolution of [illegible]

The Fleming Museum is [illegible] owning several specimens of early Peruvian textiles from both the [illegible] highland cultures. The study of [illegible] textiles has recently been [illegible] sufficient importance for the Metropolitan Museum of Art to publish a book dealing in considerable detail the [illegible] and manufacture of the textiles in their own collection.

A large quantity of ancient [illegible] textiles still exists because it was the custom of the people to mummify the dead (who were then buried in sand) [illegible] as they had worn during life. Because the dry air of the coast helps to preserve many textiles in their original form.

The Peruvian craftsmen were very dexterous, not only in weaving but also in spinning the materials used. These were wool, cotton, and a kind of fiber from the leaf of the maguey. The dyes appear to have been entirely of vegetable origin. The predominant colors are red, yellow, and dark blue.

In the designs, both geometric and naturalistic motives occur. The latter, of which the most common are the human figure, the fish, the bird, and the human head, are always strongly conventionalized, sometimes to such an extent as to be hardly recognizable; flower and plant motives are exceptional. It is probable that all of these motives had a religious significance.

These Peruvian fabrics deserve a much wider recognition than they have received, for their artistic interest in weaving and design has seldom been surpassed by any, even the most modern.

New England Colleges Schedule Ski Meet

Sport Slants . . .

By BOB MORRIS

Green and Gold fans, action-hungry after three years of sports inactivity, are being compensated for their patience to quite an extent this week and prospects are just as good during the next few weeks. Over the past week end "Fuzzy" Evans took his title-bound cagers on an extended trip into New Hampshire and Massachusetts to battle with Grenier Field and Mass. State. It was no pleasure trip, however. The boys were fighting mad and determined to avenge the crushing setback handed them by the Grenier Seahawks a few weeks back.

Tomorrow the team returns to Memorial Auditorium for its most crucial test of the season. High flying St. Michael's, loser only to Grenier Field, and that by a close score, will be host for the resumption of the twin city rivalry. The "blue chips" are on the table this time with the winner all but mathematically cinching the 1946 state title.

Rounding out a busy week of basketball, the Evansmen prepare for a Saturday invasion of Burlington by U. V. M.'s bitterest rivals, those "lovable boys" from Middlebury. Ordinarily this should rate as the top game of the year. This season has been a different story to date. The Panthers have their poorest team in years. Cagey Wally Brown may have his charges primed for an upset, so anything can and probably will happen.

Ski fans are having their day, too. Vermont's squad, disappointed but determined after a fifth place finish at Bread Loaf seven days previous, were again disappointed when a trek to West Point to meet the surprising Cadets in their own backyard was cancelled. The valuable experience gained in the initial tilt would have served the newer members of the team in good stead against the Army.

All roads lead to Stowe Saturday and Sunday. The majority of Vermonters will have an opportunity to see the team in action for the first time—and against the stiffest opposition in the East. This is the Catamounts' annual winter show and a gala gathering will be on hand to meet Mallett, Hawley, and Co., as they come thundering down the mountainside.

There's the sport schedule for the present nine-day period. Who was that silly fellow that asked us what we were studying up here? Pass the aspirin, I feel an hour test coming on.

GRENIER FIELD TOPS UVM IN HARD FIGHT

Rallying behind the deadly shooting of Ken Pierce, Vermont's fighting cagers came from behind Saturday evening to beat Mass. State 44-33 and gain an even break in their two-game invasion of New Hampshire and Massachusetts. On the previous night a vastly improved Catamount squad had taken a great moral victory by outplaying Grenier Field most of the way before bowing 43-36.

Pierce with 36 points for the trip was by far the offensive gun of the team. Big Bob French's excellent play on backboard rebounds and fine floor games by Capt. Howie Stein, "Hammy" Livingston, and Bob Stafford also featured U. V. M.'s first out-of-town games.

Mass. State Bows To Vermont Team

Gathering momentum after a shaky start, the Vermont steamroller rolled on to its fourth win in six starts with an easy triumph over an outplayed Mass. State Aggie aggregation. Ken Pierce was the big gun for the visitors as he dropped in 20 well assorted points.

Mass. State started out as if it meant business when Moore dropped in two fast field goals and Stanne collected another while French and Kneeland were connecting from the charity stripe to give the Aggies a big 7-1 lead. Two quick shots by Pierce and a two-pointer by Stein tied it up. French came back with his second free toss of the game and Vermont went into a lead they never relinquished. The Cats continued to pile it on to jump ahead 22-13 at half time.

During the final 20 minutes play seesawed back and forth with both sides matching basket for basket. During the final minutes Coach Evans substituted freely—with every player seeing action. At the final gun Vermont was still in command with the count reading 44-33.

Vermont to Clash With Rival, St. Mike's, in Contest

Coach Phil "Pinky" Ryan's powerful St. Michael's Purple Knights rated a slight favorite to down an improving Vermont squad before an expected capacity throng in Memorial Auditorium tomorrow night as both teams completed last minute practice sessions. The intercity rivals undefeated in state competition are expected to settle the Vermont collegiate series race with the winner going on to capture the state crown, last won by U V M in 1942.

Both sides are in top shape for the contest—St. Mike's fresh from a close win over Norwich and the Green and Gold heartened by a win over Massachusetts State after dropping a close decision to Grenier Field.

Ryan's Strong Reserve

On the surface, the dope seems to have the starting Catamount and Purple lineup on a par, with a thin edge going to the strong reserve strength rounded up by Ryan. Vermont, while strong in scrap and manpower, lacks the experience of the Mikemen.

In announcing transfer of the tilt, originally scheduled for Winooski Park to the Auditorium, athletic officials emphasized the fact that St. Michael's would remain the host team. Consequently student activity tickets will be void for this contest.

Coach Fuzzy Evans, still shifting his lineup to find a good scoring punch will probably stick to the combination which dropped Massachusetts State, 44-33.

Ken Pierce, who has suddenly developed into a top offensive threat, will be paired at a forward post with playmaker, Bob Stafford.

French in Center

The center spot seems to have been won, at least temporarily, by Bob French. In addition to contributing some very timely baskets against the Massachusetts Aggies, French constantly used his height to good advantage as he took rebound after rebound from the backboards.

Capt. Howie Stein with his steady back court play and the sensational "Ham" Livingston will hold the guard berths. Both have been tight defensively all season and have held opposition scoring to a minimum.

The Mikemen, boasting a team good enough to beat a highly rated Providence College in the Boston Garden and with a starting five powerful enough to relegate Co-Captain Stoypra to a second string berth, will send Ron Russcull and Co-Capt. Dan O'Rourke to the forward posts.

Warren Bolin's "eye," which accounted for 21 points against Norwich will be back to haunt Green and Gold followers from the center spot.

At guard, Coach Ryan will depend upon Jack O'Rourke and Ed Welch. Ryan's strong list of reserves included Co-Capt. Ted Stoypra, Bob Hackett, Vince Filpi, and Tom Fitzgerald.

The college ladies again will get to listen to the band's "Coke and cakes" Ah [illegible] will take place at the annual, WAA Pop's Night to be held at the men's gym after the Middlebury game on Saturday, February 2. Lois Lynn has been chosen head of the committees at the WAA Council meeting, held on Wednesday, January 23, at Southwick, and announces the new sign up privileges for admission: a dime from everybody and a deck of cards for bridge fiends, gin rummers, and slap jackers. Professor Long has been requested to be master of ceremonies for the evening and perhaps (pa hidden talent of U V M might be discovered). Besides all this the band will "spice" up the evening with rollicking marches and perhaps a chorus of "Cotton Babes."

A plight of great enormity has arisen in the Modern Dance Club. The only cure comes in a request from Miss Hoffman for a pianist—a paid position—to accompany the girls in various routines. Anyone interested should contact Miss Hoffman at Southwick in the very immediate future.

Because of variable Vermont weather, the skating club attendance has been changed from six Saturday lessons to six one-hour visits to the rink at any time providing they are reported to Coco Richardson or Florence Mueller. The ice is now at its best, and for further appeal, there are three enormous spotlights for safe night skating.

The 2:30 p.m. Fencing Club will now be held at 2:00 and the simultaneously [illegible] Modern Dance Workshop will now be held at 2:45 p.m. For the advanced fencers, there are newly scheduled meetings and anyone interested should contact Lois Lynn.

On Sunday the scene shifts to Stowe for the [illegible] and cross-country events and a final tabulation of team and individual scores.

Top Men Entered

Dartmouth brings a squad [illegible] an impressive triumph in the Middlebury Winter Carnival and led by their great captain, Mal MacLane, Kryvo Green Canadian ace, and top man at the meet a week ago, is the man to stop. Other colleges are to make a showing.

With these thoughts already implanted in his mind, Coach "Ev" Bailey put his charges through a stiff workout at Mansfield over the weekend. Coach Bailey noted several flaws in the individual styles and spent long hours polishing the rough edges.

Bright spot in the Vermont picture during the past few days has been Bob Hawley who captured sixth place at Middlebury. Hawley has already acquired the distance necessary to rank with the best jumpers in the East. He is now trying to get the proper balance with his jumps.

Ski Team Improves

Another top finisher at Middlebury, Heath Bourdon, will attempt to add to his laurels in the jump. Bourdon should be good for a place in the top ten of the [illegible] present form.

Jim Worthen displayed [illegible] unsuspected jumping form at Bread Loaf and has been a pleasant surprise to Coach Bailey, while Johnny Goodsell looms as a

Vets Present New Plan At Meeting on Jan. 23

The Veterans Club held an important meeting on Wednesday, January 23, in the Waterman Building.

A final statement was read by the finance committee on the dance, and assets of approximately $8.00 were recorded. The nominating committee for the officers who are coming in in March was appointed and a new setup on the governing of the Veterans Club was installed. The new plan is to have besides the president and executive secretary, a five-man governing council and a faculty liaison member. Other business taken up was the appointment of a committee to find out about the housing situation.

Irwin Tracy then discussed the Greek Letter Reform movement, and what it has done in the sororities and fraternities. Following this talk was a talk by Dr. Huntley Dupre on the dire necessity for complete support of W.S.S.F. Fifteen men were appointed as "volunteers" to serve as canvassers for this project.

Although she has drawn all her life, Esther never had really gone into art seriously until she came to U.V.M. and took it under Professor Colburn. She likes music equally well, for she is taking Music Education and plays the violin.

potential threat at the cross-country pull.

Larry Fagan, aided by his fine knee-action developed on the difficult trails of Pico, and Capt. Pete Mallett round out the starting lineup. With a bit more polish Fagan should hold his own in any company in the downhill and slalom. The case of Captain Mallett is different. Right now he is floundering like a ship without a rudder. His skis were stolen from in front of Waterman a week ago.

Reserves Bob Lanou and Chuck Plumley will accompany the starting team to Stowe and may possibly see action before the meet ends. Chuck, handicapped by injuries, is gradually rounding into top form. Lanou is also pushing the six regulars for a starting berth and may make it in the not too distant future.

Vermont To Face 7 Top Eastern Ski Teams

Slalom and Downhill Scheduled Saturday

Dartmouth, Middlebury Harvard, McGill, N. H., West Point Compete

Mighty Dartmouth, winner of the Middlebury Carnival, heads a formidable team lineup which will invade Mt. Mansfield and Stowe tomorrow and Sunday in an attempt to annex the annual U.V.M. Winter Carnival. The Big Green will be accompanied by most of the leading teams in the East, including McGill, Army, Massachusetts State, Norwich, Middlebury, Harvard and New Hampshire.

The Vermont women's team will play host to Mount Holyoke, Middlebury, and McGill giving the femmes a four team card.

Biggest Meet in Recent Years

With all signs pointing to the greatest meet at Stowe in recent years, and hundreds of spectators expected to be in on the proceedings, even the weatherman co-operated to make skiing conditions ideal. The heavy mid-week snow sustained by all of northern Vermont put the course in top shape.

Coach "Ev" Bailey, balked by the ineligibility of A.S.T.P. student, Ed Crane, will bank upon Capt. John Goodell, Pete Mallett, Larry Fagan, "Doug" Bourdon, Bob Hawley and Bill Worthen to put Vermont back on the victory trail. In its lone appearance to date the Green and Gold finished a strong fifth. With improvement in one or two events they could walk off with the crown.

Eastern Stars to Attend

Reporters from the Burlington Free Press and Daily News will be joined by scribes of the New York Times and Tribune as well as the big Boston dailies to get an accurate account of the relative merits of Dartmouth's Mal McLane and McGill's Krrye Olsen.

McLane, brother of all-time Dartmouth great Charlie McLane, was a Nazi prisoner-of-war and has only lately regained pre-Pearl Harbor form. Olsen, top scorer at the Middlebury meet, served in the Canadian Navy.

New Hampshire's big threat is Norwegian Erling Finne. The European student displays one of the longest strides in skiing. Ironically, this proved a big handicap on the short Breadloaf course. He should be able to flash top form on the longer nose dive trails.

HIGHLIGHTING THE TEAM

The ski team, with last year's laurels to back them, this week will compete with the strongest New England college teams. The squad is composed mostly of veterans with Peter Mallett and Heath Bourdon, of last year's team, back for the present season. Dick Audette, manager of the ski team, is the official scorer and director of the meet.

JOHN GOODELL—Captain

John W. Goodell, 22 year old ex-G.I. from Wells River, Vt., will captain Vermont's ski team during the annual U. V. M. winter carnival and for the remainder of the '46 season. Goodell, a four event man, was chosen by his teammates earlier this week to succeed acting captain Pete Mallett.

Johnny served three years in the armed forces as a bombardier in the United States Army Air Forces with a rank of second lieutenant. During that time he had no opportunity to do skiing of any kind.

Upon discharge, Goodell slowly regained pre-war form until he attained his present position as an ace in all four team events—downhill, slalom, cross country and jumping.

DICK AUDETTE—Manager

Richard R. Audette '47, manager of the ski team, director of the ski meet, and official scorer has had three years of flying with the Army Air Corps and the RCAF, particularly in the Douglas A-20, a light attack bomber, and has been active in the Veterans Club during his three years at U. V. M. Although hailing from St. Albans, Vt., Dick was graduated from Bellows Free Academy of Fairfax, Vt. and came here to study Mechanical Engineering.

Dick has done some skiing in high school but he is now somewhat limited on what he can do on skiis because of a bad ankle received while in service.

LARRY FAGAN

Was born and has lived all his life in Rutland, Vt., in the heart of the Green Mountains. Most of his first winters were spent on an old pair of pine skis on a little slope in his own back yard.

When Larry reached high school age, he attended Mount Saint Joseph Academy. Since they had no ski team, he became an active member of the Otter Ski Patrol and worked for several years at Pico, near Rutland.

In June 1943, Larry enlisted in the U. S. Navy and was called to active duty shortly after graduation from high school. After serving more than two years in the air corps, he was discharged and entered the University of Vermont in the fall of 1945. Here attracted by the call of the hickory slats he tried out for the ski team and had his first taste of skiing competition at the recent Middlebury Carnival.

PETE MALLETT

Hailing from Garden City, N. Y., Pete Mallett began his skiing at 15 on the "steep" hills of Long Island, N. Y. (ave. of 320 ft.) As a member of the Amateur Ski Club of New York he entered competitive skiing, placed and later won the Junior races in the Club. In recent years he finished among the first three of the Men's races.

CATAMOUNTS SWAMP ST. MIKE'S, 54-26

Coach Fuzzy Evans' hardwood quintet downed a favored St. Mike's aggregation last Wednesday night, 54-26, to turn in their best performance of the season. Using a zone defense which was practically air-tight and a fast break that had the Mike's men guessing, the U.V.M. five led all the way.

In the opening minutes of the game with the score tied at three all, Vermont tossed in four from the charity line and then a field goal. The nearest their opponents could come was to toss in one foul and two from the floor to bring the score up to 9-8. Then with Stein, Livingston and Pierce setting the pace, Vermont started clicking and as the gun sounded for the half the score stood at 24-13.

Controlled the Backboards

Vermont controlled both of the backboards during the entire contest with French, Livingston, and Pierce getting up into the air for most of the free balls. Stein and Stafford looked good on the defense with Stein throwing in a whale of a floor game besides.

Ken Pierce kept the cords hot by tossing in five from the foul line and six from the field for a total of 17 for the high scoring honors of the evening. Liv-

Selwyn James to Speak on Russia Tuesday, Feb. 5

James Is Lecturer, Foreign News Expert, Author, and Editor

Selwyn James, former Foreign News Editor of PM, author, radio commentator for WINS, New York City, and lecturer, who will speak here at the University of Vermont February 5, on "Russia in Post-War World," has covered an amazing portion of this troubled, war-weary globe for a young man not yet 40.

Born in England 29 years ago Mr. James came to this country in May 1939 has stayed ever since and is now an American citizen.

Educated at Brighton College and the London School of Economics, he became a reporter for the London Daily Mail in 1935 and later, to begin his travels, transferred to the Paris financial staff of the same paper.

In 1936 when he was 19 he went to Spain for the Manchester Guardian to cover the Spanish Civil War and later was appointed that paper's special correspondent in Moscow and other parts of the U.S.S.R. He became assistant financial editor, editorial writer and columnist for the Rand Daily Mail in Johannesburg, South Africa, in 1938, and during the year he spent there, also was political analyst for the South African Broadcasting Company.

When he came to this country in 1939, he joined the staff of Time Magazine and in June, 1940, when the newspaper PM began publication, he was appointed its foreign news writer. Later, as foreign news editor, he contributed his informative and brilliant articles on the war and world politics. Today he devotes himself to lecturing on the platform and before the microphone and to writing books and magazine pieces.

Ralph Ingersoll, who was editor of PM until he went into the armed forces, says of Mr. James:

"Some experts on foreign news are valuable because they know a lot. The appeal of some is that their hearts are in the right place—and that they have the courage to speak what they feel. Selwyn James knows a lot and his heart is in the right place and he speaks from it—also, rare in a writer, he is a brilliant talker."

Mr. James is the author of "South of the Congo," published by Random House in 1943. Early in 1946, Simon Schuster will publish his new book, a novel set in France.

Team Places Class C in Time Trials

Dartmouth, Army and U. V. M. made last minute trial runs on Mt. Mansfield's famed Nose Dive Sunday with West Point coach Vic Constant covering the difficult downhill grind in the very good time of 1:01.

No Vermont racer equaled Constant's dazzling pace but five men did qualify for the Class C rating classification. They were:

Pete Mallett 1 17 1
Heath Bourdon 1 19 1
Ed Crane 1 29 3
Larry Fagan 1 34 2
Johnny Goodell 1 42 0

Also running but failing to qualify were Bob Hawley who placed sixth in the downhill at Middlebury, Bob Lanou, Bill Worthen, Ed Kaitz and Chuck Plumley.

Walter Prager Dartmouth ski coach led the Indian team down the Nose Dive in preparation for tomorrow's invitation meet at Mansfield and Stowe. The BIG GREEN squad victors at the Middlebury Carnival, had ten or twelve men working out on the trails.

Hard luck continues to plague team members. Sunday, Kaitz and Lanou returned down the mountain with broken skis while Mallett is still searching for his pair which were taken from Waterman the week before. However, Coach "Ev" Bailey is picking out some good skis for the men from the stock at Stowe and they will be heard from before Sunday evening is over.

Bridge Dance Planned For Saturday Night

The scheduled Saturday night Pops Night has been postponed to a later date and a Bridge Dance to be held in the Student Lounge after the Middlebury game has been substituted. Latest jive records will entertain the dancers, while bridge players will have the use of the card tournament. The entertainment part of the evening will include cake and cake served by the handsome waitresses the WAA Council members. The evening's festivities will probably be visited by the skiers from the Vermont ski meet. West Point'ers! Harvardites! Middleburyites! The price of admission? 25 cents.

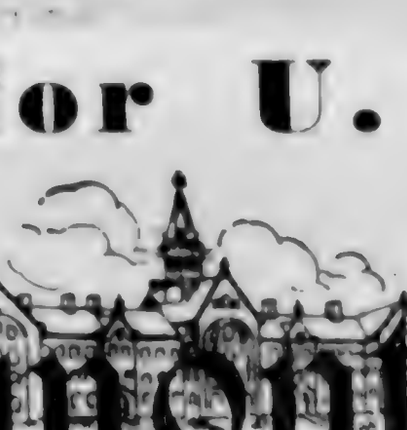
Columbia and U.V.M. to Battle About Labor Unions; Hackett, Rosenberg Represent Vermont

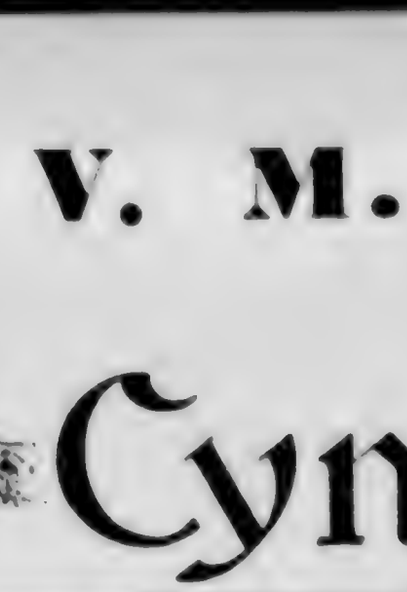
Debate Scheduled For Saturday Night, Feb. 9

Picket lines, strikes, more than a half million unemployed due to management-labor strife, fact-finding, wage increases, price increases, inflation! These controversial issues which beset our country in one of its most trying periods of history, which have stumped the President, Congress, and the whole country will be "hashed out" between the debating teams of Columbia University and the University of Vermont on Saturday evening, February 9, in the Waterman Building.

The question to test the skills of any experienced debaters will be, "Resolved: That labor unions are justified in demanding wage increases based on ability to pay and not on price increases." Taking the affirmative will be Columbia, while the University of Vermont, represented by Dave Hackett and Bob Rosenberg, Jr., will pit their wits against this team, upholding the negative.



The issues at stake are of such vital importance that the whole economy of the United States and maybe the world is concerned. The automobile industry, the steel industry and many others have demanded that wage increases be raised with a concommitant increase in prices. The O.P.A. says "No." President Truman says, "No." Reconversion director, Fred Snyder, says emphatically, "No!" Yet, the management of these various industries claim that they will be run out of business if they can't raise prices when giving wage increases.



Caught between this barrage of controversy is the government, which will have to make the most important decisions in its career, and must maintain the support of the American people. The issue certainly will not be settled at the Columbia-U.V.M. debate, but the main factors concerning it will be brought out and will be made clearer to the public.

Also on the agenda for the debating club is the forthcoming Lawrence Prize-Speaking Debate with Middlebury. This debate will be on the atom bomb control issue, and tryouts for it will begin on February 14. The Lawrence Debate is the biggest debate of the year with the traditional rivals, Middlebury and the University of Vermont matching forensic skills again. Watch for further news about this debate.

Vermont Places Second in Meet As Dartmouth's McLane Stars

Mallett Leads Vt. Men In Close Race for Honors

Dartmouth's speedy team led by Mal McLane and Fred Sprenger Miller walked away with the top honors in the Vermont ski meet held last Saturday and Sunday at Stowe by amassing a total of 882.82 points in the six events. Next in line came the Vermont team with a total of 824.66 points, New Hampshire with 803.41, Harvard with 405.36 and Norwich with 348.60.

Dartmouth Places First in Five Events

The downhill race, a mile and seven tenths run down the Nose Dive trail, was run Saturday morning under fair conditions and the times were fairly fast. A few bumps and the fact that vision was hampered somewhat by snowstorm and a high wind accounted for some of the slower runs. Fred Sprenger Miller took first place in the downhill race with 198.4 seconds for the run. S. King of Harvard turned in the next best time with a 215.1. Vermont took third as Pete Mallett clipped off the run in 222.6. J. Bailey crossed the line in 223.8 to give Dartmouth a close fourth and Vermont took the fifth and sixth spots when Fagan and Bourdon ran the trail off in 225.9 and 241.7 respectively.

Mal McLane copped the first place spot for Dartmouth in the slalom run with a time of 94.3 seconds for the course which extended from station 15 to station 25 on the Nose Dive trail. J. Stubble of Dartmouth placed second with 96.7 while Eastin of Harvard turned in a 102.6 for the only Harvard time under the two minute mark. L. LaJoie and S. Varney, two New Hampshire men, placed fourth and sixth to give the N. H. team the second place berth in the slalom run as far as points are concerned. Heath Bourdon of Vermont crossed the line in 107.8 seconds to give Vermont fifth place in the individual standings while Pete Mallett and Bob Hawley came in tenth and eleventh to give the hosts enough points for third place in the slalom race.

Vermont Runs Close Second

At the end of the first three events, downhill, slalom and combined downhill and slalom, Dartmouth held the first spot of the meet with a total of 299.92 points with Vermont running a close second with 274.[illegible] points. Next in line came Harvard, New Hampshire and Norwich with 255.81, 240.24 and [illegible].

Mal McLane turned in a fast time of 72 minutes 40 seconds on the eight mile cross country run which started at the Nose Dive practice slope, ran across various trails, down the Toll Road and up the hill again behind the Toll House and the Lodge to the starting point. Ramsey of Dartmouth came in second with a commendable [illegible] while

Daddy Long Leads Sing Tonight in Student Lounge

For the first time since his return to the faculty of the University of Vermont, Prof. R. E. Long will lead the University students and faculty in a Campus Sing on Wednesday, February 6, at 7.30 p.m. in the front of the Waterman Building.

Professor Long feels that there should be some sort of organization which is not tied in to the formal study of music by the especially talented body. He believes that the group should include the whole student body, and the songs which they sing should consist of traditional Vermont songs, revivals of old popular and folk songs, and the traditional glee songs which are sung on campuses all over the country.

Professor Long said that he hopes to introduce one or more new songs to our campus which will include a Russian love song. The song will be sung for us by Pat Tatro.

The Campus Sing had culminated from

Council Gives Quarter Program

The University Council has made certain definite decisions concerning the course of instruction which will be offered during the summer quarters of 1946, 1947 and 1948, to enable veterans now enrolled at the University, or to be admitted in the next two quarters, to accelerate their college courses and meet the requirements for graduation in less than the normal four years. This program has been worked out for students who entered in the summer and fall quarters of 1945, for those who entered in the winter quarter of 1946, and for those who will enter in the spring and summer quarters of 1946. It provides instructional facilities for the following standard programs:

1. Veterans who entered in the summer of 1945 and who wish to meet the graduation requirements in June 1948, will be expected to attend the summer quarters of 1946 and 1947 and the academic years 1945-46, 1946-47, and 1947-48.

2. Veterans who entered in the fall quarter of 1945 will be expected to attend during the academic years 1945-46, 1946-47, 1947-48, and 1948-49.

3. Veterans who entered at the beginning of the winter quarter of 1946 will be expected to attend the summer quarter of 1946 and the three academic years 1946-47, 1947-48, and 1948-49.

4. Veterans who will enter at the beginning of the spring quarter of 1946 will be expected to attend the summer quarters of 1946 and 1947, and the academic years 1946-47, 1947-48, and 1948-49.

Reconversion For Vermont

Maybe it's around a crowded table in the soda fountain—maybe it's a couple in back at Converse en route to fourth floor—maybe it's one of those long arguments which follow "lights out" . . . There are thousands of words expressed daily at U. V. M.; words which are aimed at some form or other of reform.

"If I were in that office I'd . . ." "I can't stand . . ." "The trouble with this school is . . ." so the reform movement usually begins. True, it is a healthy sign for people to be alert to the needs of their surroundings. New ideas and new material have the same effect on a routine-dead organization. Theoretically, that is, physiologists have for winter-weary nerves.

Our informal bull sessions are a valuable part of college life. They serve as verbal pronouncements which sharpen passive attitudes into thinking about college conditions which directly concern everyone. The sad part of bull sessions is that they frequently degenerate into dismal little gripe-festivals where everyone airs his favorite gripe and then goes to bed, leaving the air [illegible] with unresolved grievances.

During the past few weeks some of the expressed dissatisfaction with Vermont has reached a new high. The bases for the chief criticisms which have put us at every corner have been concerned with the ideas that Vermont traditions are run by a small group of leaders, the majority of which are veterans, and that the spirit of good fellowship and friendliness on campus is eluding the Champlain wood pit top honors in frigidity.

There is no such thing as passive friendliness. Activity, interest and effort are required to bring about the feeling of "belonging" which can transform dissatisfaction into security. When a student is heard branding the Vermont campus as unfriendly and aloof, we wonder just how much that critic has done to be friendly . . . to find his place in the pattern of college life.

Throughout this quarter the veterans have taken an increasingly active part in college affairs. The interest which they have shown in the basketball and ski teams, and such organizations as the dramatics club and Student Government is a highly commendable one. Younger students respect the mature judgment and broadened experience which these "world travelers" are bringing to campus. Clearly, their position is becoming one of influence concerning campus policies and issues.

During the last years, when we called U. V. M. a "select school for girls," the question arose of how effectively activities could be maintained by the women. Rather than allow Kake Walk, the ROTC Band and other Vermont traditions to become war casualties, the girls took over and were, for the most part, successful in keeping the identity of the college intact—the presence of the Army Air Corps and V-12 units nonwithstanding.

Now as the rest of the world puts the pieces back together, we have our own reconversion to accomplish. To do this, those of us who fought the "battle of Vermont" will have to grow up to meet the level of intellectual maturity which the vets are bringing back from service. And at the same time G.I. Joe will be fitted to a new suit—the special 1946 model—to match the new Vermont.

Letters to the Editor . . .

In considering the slate for the coming Student Government elections I would like to make special mention of Pete Mallon.

Pete has served for the last year on the Executive Council of Student Government and is consequently well acquainted with its workings. He has been probably the most active and interested member of that group.

In addition, he was the President of three organizations: Outing Club, International Relations Club, and V.C.A. He has debated and is now a regular member of the Ski Team. His contacts are varied, and his ability recognized.

Pete is not afraid to say what he thinks. As a result some have been antagonized by his stand on several issues. To those people I commend the request to examine the interests of the interventions and the courage with which he backs them. It is the sort of [illegible] because of issues that the Student Government needs so badly.

Pete is the logical choice for Vice-President.

Sincerely,
David Hackett

[illegible]

He spent three years in the Army and never had even a sock appropriated. In January he enrolled at the University of Vermont for the Second Quarter. He and his wife decided he really needed one of those sheepskin lined coats with the fur collar because of the long walk he had to college daily in these winter months. It took some figuring and shifting of the budget because $90.00 a month and a very small reserve don't go far, especially with a child to provide for.

He wore the coat three weeks and then, on February 1, hung it, as was his custom, on the coat room opposite the book store in Waterman. At noon he went to get the coat, but it was missing—yes, with the new leather gloves and tan ski hat Christmas gifts.

It could have been an intruder who walked in and took the coat. Or did some student take it?

It would restore a lot of faith in the ethics of Vermont students if the person has a change of heart and the coat were returned, with the hat and gloves, to the coat room. As ex-G.I. and his family would be very happy.

ACTION

by Joan R. Levin

There is one—and only one—road that leads to freedom today. That road is truth. And for those who would travel it there is only one essential requirement. That requirement is perfect vision: the ability to see objects in their proper proportions, to see clearly and without benefit of tinted glasses. One must, in order to progress, perceive his surroundings with accuracy, objectivity, and realism.

Such perception is not acquired innocently. Its achievement depends solely upon the control and discipline exercised by the individual. It is not easy to face the facts. It is oftentimes far simpler and certainly far more pleasant to ignore or deny the existence of reality. There are many of us who are already adept at this.

There are many who will look reality straight in the face and say that it is not real, that it does not exist, that it is an illusion. They are the foolish optimistic idealists who attempt to cloak themselves in false comfort by denying the existence of the worst.

There are those, too, who will agree that reality and its evils exist, but will choose not to notice or be disturbed by it. They turn away from what they do not like and concentrate upon the pleasantries. They want things to be smooth and easy. They do not want to become involved in conflicts and difficulties. They do not want to think! They are the ostriches who ridiculously bury their heads in the sand.

There is yet a third group of persons who minimize reality by playing down whatever is unfortunate, disappointing or disastrous. They do not deny that certain things exist or have happened. They do not close their eyes to facts. But if these facts are bad they deny their importance. "Don't take things too seriously," they say. "Everything works out for the best." These are the residents of a comfortable but precarious fool's paradise.

Now—how to train ourselves? By not denying the existence of reality and the evils present in it. By not ignoring it. By not minimizing it. By not, in other words deceiving ourselves! For self deception exposes us to ultimate disaster.

To gain entrance to the road to freedom then we must see things as they are. Once we achieve this we have taken the initial step. Our goal is the abolishment of evil and the realization of genuine freedom. Once we recognize wrong and name it, we can move quickly to cope with it. We can make reality what we want it to be.

W.S.S.F.

As the WSSF drive progresses on this campus with its goal of $3,000 from personal pledges, University of Vermont students after the last World War contributed $3,500 to World Student Relief, with a student enrollment of about 700.

You're all invited to join the "500 Club" which meets at the "500 Table" every Monday noon. Requirements for entrance are to eat a sacrificial meal consisting of 500 calories—the average number for an European student—subtract the price from the price you'd regularly pay for lunch, and give the difference to WSSF. 500 calories, incidentally, includes soup, dry bread, and water!!

Personal canvassing has been extended until February 9. Some people have been wondering how much to give. Of course that's measured by concern and ability to pay, but we quote from Andre de Blonay, secretary of World Student Relief at Geneva, who has seen the suffering of European students: "... no sacrifice is too great. $5 should be the minimum goal for every student. $10 is generous, and $15 is sacrificial." ("Sacrificial" meaning perhaps giving up a new dress or suit or hat. A tubercular student may stay for a week at the University Tuberculosis Sanatorium in Leysin, Switzerland—forty Chinese students may have food for a month for a kerosene pressure lamp.

For WSSF some campus cooks separated and cracked eggs—beat—a path to the Federal. Furious bidding, accented by [illegible] auctioneer's gavel, brought the price of the Home Heckers cake [illegible] to $5.00. The lucky winners were the boys from the P[illegible]. They've been needing a door stop for a long time.

Since the campus trend seems to be toward platforms we [illegible] our soap box and present the Ya-ta-ta planks (of well-[illegible] board):

1. Not again the dreary gym for dances but back to the [illegible] soft lights of the Rotunda. Pity the shivering chaperones—[illegible] mented decoration committee—after all what can you [illegible] ropes after using the Tarzan theme?
2. Install dispensers for nabs in all Waterman corridors. [illegible] after breakfast slump.
3. Abolish Ya-ta-ta.

Blue and pink department, congratulations to Prof. and Mrs. [illegible] whose son, Joseph, was born last week. Laura and Ernie St. [illegible] have a very new bundle from Heaven.

Simple solution to a vital campus problem. At enrollment [illegible] simple gold band to every vet who has marched to Mendelssohn. [illegible] more time this way.

With the thermometer hovering around zero and our teeth chattering to the tune of "let it snow, let it snow, let it snow," it's probably a poor time to be thanking with flowers, but this department has a few orchids it wants to pass out.

First of all one should go to "Fuzzy" Evans for turning in one of the outstanding coaching jobs this section has seen in years. He has had to start practically from scratch and build not one but TWO basketball teams this season.

Last November he took an inexperienced squad and wove a winner around A.S.T.P. student Bob Jake. With all signs pointing to a successful season an army ruling made Jake ineligible and the entire team structure came tumbling down.

Undaunted "Fuzzy" began a new rebuilding campaign. His team took a bad beating at the hands of Grenier Field but refused to quit. Instead they came back two weeks later to outplay Grenier before bowing in the closing minutes.

Then using ex-G.I.'s as a backbone, Evans brought the team to a peak last Wednesday evening with a smashing 54-26 rout of St. Michael's. This was a St. Michael's called as one of the "best in Purple history."

Another orchid goes to Capt. Marion "Skip" Lewis of the women's ski team. Forced to forego the recent Middlebury meet because of illness, "Skip" staged a brilliant comeback to set the pace for female skiers in Saturday's very successful meet.

The men's team deserve a palm also for bringing U. V. M. back into the Eastern ski picture. After a fifth place finish at Bread Loaf the boys came back to lead everyone but Dartmouth at Stowe. Prospects are bright for Vermont's bringing home the bacon in some of the remaining meets on tap.

Last but far from least, a big orchid to those responsible for getting the campus skating rink in shape. Now we have our chance to put the slogan "If you can't take part in a sport, be one anyhow," into practice. See you at the rink.

W. A. A. Notes

A real sports-weekend was held this past Saturday and Sunday up on "the hill." Starting with the ski meet at Stowe, then the Middlebury-Vermont basketball game, Saturday was climaxed by a "vic" dance held in the men's gym sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association.

Those weary of too much foot-work sat in foursomes playing bridge at tables around the dance floor. Cake 'n coke were served.

Lois Linn was chairman of the dance and the following were committee heads: Margaret Watts, tickets; Jo Stevens, refreshments; Marge Cutler, clean-up; Crystal Malone, entertainment; and Miggs Burggraf, publicity.

Prof. and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter were chaperons.

CORRECTION

Art Gillman '47 and Mick Boylan '49 served as co-chairmen of the W.S.S.F. faculty auction. It was erroneously reported that only Gillman worked on the committee.

VERMONT IS SECOND IN SKI MEET

John Goodell placed third in the individual standings with 86.52. Worthen Mallett and Fagan placed eighth, eleventh and thirteenth in this event to give Vermont second place in the cross-country run with 88.15 points, beating New Hampshire by a mere ten-hundredths of a point.

S. Varney of N. H. took the only first place spot not captured by Dartmouth when he took 132 points in the jumping event to edge out Dartmouth's J. Chivers by three and a half points. J. Goodell merited 122 points for his jump to take sixth place while Mallett, Hawley, Bourdon and Worthen placed eighth, tenth, twelfth and fourteenth to give Vermont 81.9 points for third place in the jump. Dartmouth and New Hampshire placed first and second with 98.5 and 96.62 points respectively.

Coach Walter Prager's boys took first and second places in the combined cross-country and jumping event when McLane and Ramsey took 315.5 and 288.5 points for Dartmouth in this event. Johnny Goodell, Worthen and Mallett took third, seventh and ninth places to give Vermont a close third with 77.43 points behind Dartmouth and New Hampshire with 99.3 and 78.5.

U. V. M. Students Help in Meet

Dick Audette was in charge of the scoring of the meet and did a swell job of getting the scores and other figures concerning the meet ready for the bulletin boards and the newspapers. Assisting him was Charlie Barnes assistant scorer and in general the right-hand man of the meet. Charlie also acted as official starter in the downhill, slalom and cross-country events. Up on top of the mountain on the other end of the starting telephone was Chuck Plumley who gave the go-ahead to the contestants at the starting line. Official timer for the meet was Chuck Costantino who was assisted by Don Clark of Norwich and Bob Lanou of U.V.M. Credit is also due the checkers on the slalom. They also faced the wind and cold of the upper Nose Dive to see that all the gates were passed through on the slalom run. Twenty four of the Vermont men and coeds who were listed in the last issue helped in this thankless but necessary task.

Visiting coaches and newspaper men as well as spectators joined in in universal praise of the meet as well as in the praise of the individual participants and the people upon whom the task of setting and officiating the meet fell. Vermont's first post war ski meet has proven a success and has paved the way for bigger and better ski meets to come when Vermont runs its own meet in its own way on the proposed slopes at Underhill.

Slants on Slats

By EVERETT C. BAILEY

In the course of giving recreational instruction at the University of Vermont I have encountered a number of would be skiers who were backward purely solely because their ski equipment was either grossly inferior or unsuited to the individual's stature and ability. The following suggestions are made with the idea of helping unequipped skiers to equip themselves properly, and poorly equipped skiers to make corrections. Good equipment (not necessarily the most expensive) is essential for a skier to get the maximum benefit from instruction and the maximum enjoyment from skiing.

1. Skis range in length from 5' to 7' 6". If you are a beginner yours should be 6', 6' 3", or 6' 6" depending on your weight and stature. They should have steel edges if you want to do skiing other than just sliding down a hill. Both tips and tails should be flexible and, as noted skis, to the same degree. Don't worry too much about grain, as you probably couldn't tell good from bad anyhow, but you can sight the grooves to see if the ski is warped. A twist is perhaps the most common fault in skis. Your skis are twisted if in sighting down the ski you do not see the tail surface and the tip surface in the same plane.

2. Bindings are of little use unless they hold the foot from twisting on the ski. A binding on which the heel strap fastens to the toe irons is satisfactory for beginners, but if a skier expects to develop any degree of proficiency in advance of snowplow skiing a system of holding the ski close to the heel of the boot must be used. The most effective binding yet developed for downhill skiing is the cable binding and the extra two or three dollars to purchase a cable binding will not be wasted even by a beginner.

3. The adjustment of boots to binding is frequently very bad. Don't try to ski until you have adjusted the binding to the particular boots you are wearing. The boot should be centered longitudinally on the ski and the toe iron should fit snugly along the sides of the boot allowing not over one-fourth inch of the sole of the boot to protrude ahead of the iron. The cable should be adjusted tight enough to hold the boot heel down on the ski with some tension. A good ski fitter such as you will find at Dartmouth or Woodstock is the best way to get a binding adjusted.

5. Boots are difficult to get today, but even a cheap boot will do the trick if well fitted to the foot and ski. If your old boots have flabby and soft uppers or soles that buckle when you tighten your cables it is time for a change. Don't try to ski in anything but ski boots.

5. Ski poles turned up side-down on the floor with your hand gripping the shaft underneath the ring should be only long enough to make your forearm horizontal.

In these notes I have tried to cover the important points only. If you have any equipment problems please feel free to call on me at any time. I am usually on the campus each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Jayvees Take Midd In Preliminary

Coaching by Eric Lundsten '47, paced the Vermont Junior Varsity team to victory in the final preliminary game of the season by defeating Middlebury's jayvees 49-29. The win was the second of the season for the Lundstenmen. Tonight a final game is being played at Middlebury.

Lester Nagler, Dave Pickerell and Lutz provided clever footwork with the Kittens but were outstanding floor guards and ball handlers.

Vermont swung the fast break and short passing tactics of their older mates on the varsity against only a 14-13 lead at the quarter mark in the fast moving affair. Lundsten

In the second frame the Kittens attack tallied and with Colvin and Congreve leading the range Vermont clipped 20 the floor with a possession ball and the ball at vantage.

In the final frame the big Panthers connected for Lundsten and the jayvees failed to reach the twenty mark as Vermont Lundsten substituted freely in the closing minutes of the tilt.

RUSHING CONTINUES ON INFORMAL BASIS

Sorority houses on the hill opened their doors Friday evening to welcome freshmen guests to the second set of informal rushing parties. From 8:00 to 10:00 p.m. the girls served as partners at stag-talking, singing and eating.

Sigma Gamma present participated in an old-fashioned barbecue with Merle Heywood calling the dances. An old-fashioned sing-along was added to the event. At the Delta Phi Upsilon party, girls sat around a campfire roasting hot dogs and singing. Short movies were shown by the freshmen at Alpha Epsilon Phi. Alpha Chi and Delta Zeta held ghost stories around the fire. The Theta party was held at Oakledge. At the Pi Beta Phi house popcorn was popped over the fire, singing, dancing and other games filled the evening for the girls at Delta Delta Delta.

Combining the ball control that has marked their play in recent weeks, Vermont's powerful court quintet romped to their third consecutive victory Mountain Conference victory as they trounced a weak Middlebury five 67-30 before 1,000 fans in Memorial Auditorium Saturday evening. Ken Pierce, the Green and Gold's scoring ace, paced the Vermonters with 17 points, while Bob Stafford and Bob French followed with 15 and Capt. Howie Dorr contributed 8 counters.

Great Offensive Show

In winning its sixth decision in eight starts U. V. M. put on its greatest offensive show of the season. During the first seven minutes of the last half Catamount backcourters racked up an almost unbelievable total of 21 points, a place which proved Dave Gutteil an eyewitness total of 139 but it been maintained Coach Peggy Evans however mercifully sprinkled the lineup with substitutes during the final half and let the entire first string quintet sit safely shower twelve minutes before the game's end.

Vermont's power very gave a good account of themselves as they outscored Middlebury among the contenders of the Green Mountain Conference. Middlebury's Panthers it was the eighth straight loss in a season which to date has yet to produce a single

The Blue Panthers did come up with a good showing in Saturday's tilt as Coach Warren Hunt paced the Panthers with 18 points while Capt. Howie Dole also stood out in defense and the entire Middlebury squad did a commendable job from the foul stripe with 19 conversions on 38 attempts. From the floor the Middlebury quintet did to connect but 10 times on 62 tosses.

The Vermont Cynic

VOL. 63 BURLINGTON, VERMONT, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1946 NUMBER 41

Student Body Elects Dale Conley President

Dorothy Frazer Named Editor-in-Chief of '46-'47 Cynic

Goldberg, Business Mgr.; Nelson, McGarry, Co-Managing Editors

Dorothy Frazer

Dorothy Frazer '46, was announced the new editor-in-chief of the CYNIC last Monday night as the '45-'46 staff retired from office at the annual banquet. Julius Goldberg is the new business manager.

Once a year the CYNIC Senior Staff forgets about news copy and headlines, washes the printer's ink off its hands, and comes out of hiding in the "inner sanctum" of the CYNIC office. The occasion is the CYNIC Banquet at which the new staff is announced.

After the actual banquet Monday night, Mary Thornton, retiring editor, announced the new staff. "Duck" Frazer's only comment on hearing that she had been elected editor-in-chief was "You don't know what you're doing." Marge Nelson and Rita McGarry were equally surprised to find that they were co-managing editors. And so it went with Deena Pord, campus editor; Doris Lindecrantz, feature editor; "Gig" Donaldson, rewrite editor, and Mary Mitiguy, personnel editor.

Heading the new business staff is Julius Goldberg as business manager; Laura Byington is the new advertising manager; Mary Bresnehan, circulation manager, and Phil Wright, office manager. Retiring from these positions are Bob Rosenberg, Harriet Cohen, Carl Thompson, and Wanda Hopkinson. Bob Rosenberg introduced Professor Briggs, CYNIC financial advisor, and then briefly spoke to the business staff.

Professor Dean, faculty advisor for the CYNIC, warned the incoming staff to be on the alert against the two problems which constantly beset an amateur publication. The first problem is a tendency toward inaccuracy. The second is the use of sound judgment in the printing of stories which will arise controversy on campus. He complimented the retiring staff on the job they had done in making the CYNIC a first class publication.

SIGMA XI PRESENTS DR. CARL SPEIDEL

"Living Cells in Action as Revealed by Fast-Motion Cine-Photomicrography" will be the subject of a National Sigma Xi lecture by Dr. Carl C. Speidel, professor of anatomy at the University of Virginia, on Monday evening, Feb. 18, at the University of Vermont. The lecture, to which the public is invited, will be at 8:15 in the Fleming Museum.

Dr. Speidel, who is presenting, by means of micro-motion pictures, the results of his important investigations before a large number of colleges and universities, is considered one of the 1,000 students of natural and exact sciences in the United States whose work is most important.

Fraser, Derrick, Bresnehan Hold Remaining Offices

An eventful student Government campaign culminated at 4:30 p.m. Monday with the election of Dale Conley president of U.V.M. Student. Paul Fraser vice-president, Marilyn Derrick, secretary, Mary Bresnehan treasurer and Margaret Larrabee, sub-treasurer.

Dale Conley has been active in U.V.M. organizations ever since his return to civilian life. He is an aggie, President of the Veterans Club and a member of Lambda Iota fraternity.

At the onset of the campaign three names were presented on the slate for presidency. Richard Harper the third candidate withdrew his name at convocation on Thursday. Rich Harper who is a veteran member of the Dramatic Club and also on his address to the student body based the reason for his withdrawal on the fact that he felt that he was representative of a minority group on campus. As president of Student Government he felt that he should represent a greater majority of the students.

Paul Fraser who hails from Montpelier Vt. and was a former member of the class of '45 is co-chairman of the Junior Week Decorations committee, member of the Newman Club and Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Marilyn Derrick is another of those West Hartford gals who moved in last year. She is a Pi Phi on the YW Cabinet, member of the Modern Dance Workshop and a Sophomore Aide.

Mary Bresnehan from Proctor is the energetic treasurer of the the Cynic a member of the staff and Cardial Newman Club and the Band staff. She is an Aggie, Ch.

Margaret Larrabee is an Alpha Chi member of Sophomore Aides and also of the Cynic.

Novel Dance to Climax Sophs Red Letter Day

And now the weekend mystery comes out! Saturday, Feb. 16, has been declared by the two very sophisticated sophomores and terrible men on the local hall stairs in Converse. Moreover sophomore's may have permission to stay out Saturday from any one of the girls dormitories.

Dressing through Saturday a pair of red cardiac hearts will be placed in the back room. Each sophomore girl is asked to guess the number of hearts in the jar and put her guess on a piece of paper provided for that purpose.

The girl coming nearest to the correct amount will have a date with her dream man with a corsage and dinner expenses for the couple to be taken care of by the sophomore aides.

The couple will be admitted free of charge to the Coed-Ask Boy Valentine dance to be held after the game Saturday night 9-12 p.m.

Professor and Mrs. Kreyah will chaperone the dance which will be held in the Student Lounge. The vic will furnish music, the sophomores will furnish coke and cookies and each student is asked to furnish 25c except for sophomores who will be admitted for 20c each.

Fraternities Pledge 38 Men in Second Quarter Rushing

Banquets, Open Houses In Waterman Precede Thursday's Bidding

Reconversion is fast on its way back to the "hill," as was seen by the glimpse of fraternity rushing held on campus last week. Open houses were again held at Waterman with the promise that next year rushing can again be held in full swing in the individual fraternity house.

Cuss, banners, scrapbooks, and ultra-salesmanship pervaded the open houses. Tuesday and Wednesday nights banquets were held in halls downtown, which enabled the new men to discover something of what fraternities have to offer in the way of good fellowship.

Forty-eight men pledged fraternity Feb. 7.

FACULTY EVALUATION AT U.V.M.

Student Government Prepares Questionnaire

What do you think of your professors? Serious consideration of this question has become one of the problems entered upon by a student government committee headed by Peter Mallett. The medium by which students can give their opinions is a faculty evaluation list now being prepared.

The idea of faculty evaluation by students isn't new by any means, and there has circulated around the colleges of the country a standard list of questions upon which the professor is evaluated by the students. Questions such as "preparation for class," "general personality," "personal peculiarities," "amount of class discussion" and "clarity of presentation" with equivalent grades of superior, average and inferior make up these lists. Student government is also preparing a list of questions not mentioned in the standard lists and it hopes to combine or compare the two for final use.

Student government will revise both lists and will probably pass them. Then they will be submitted to a faculty-student conference for further additions or revisions. If this committee passes on them, they will be brought before the faculty as a whole and discussed. If the faculty decides the lists are worthwhile each professor may or may not as he wishes give them to his class to be filled out.

Dr. J. J. Lindsay has used these standard lists for the past few years as a matter of his own personal interest and has found that they do have some advantageous implications provided that the students take them seriously and do not make the whole thing a farce. No one has to put his name on them, so that there is no fear of prejudice if you wish to express any comment anonymous.

It is hoped that these evaluations will bring about better teaching methods and will be valuable both to students and professors. They will make professors more alert and help to gain rapport between themselves and their students.

Out of the Turmoil . . .

A retiring editor, Joseph Pulitzer, wrote concerning the St. Louis Post Dispatch ". . . . the paper's cardinal principles—it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing the news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty."

Our CYNIC policy, although never clearly defined, has been as idealistic. We have maintained a freedom for student contributions; attempting to print the sometimes "awful" truth without stepping on anyone's innocent toes. That our frequently carping criticism has brought about needed reform on the U. V. M. campus we are convinced, for we have tried to accompany criticism with suggestion and largely through the aid of Wendell Earle, Student Government has made the necessary changes.

The CYNIC platform has been subject to criticism. We believe, however, that the Honor System is needed at U. V. M., that social legislation is desirable, that the several rules we have attacked are useless and, in fact, harmful.

The student body, whose suggestions, ideas, and spirit we have tried to put in print has both supported and destroyed the above platform. As a result they have made us optimistic about their ability and our own. We believe the controversy over the above subjects is conducive to more thinking and planning by the students. We are optimistic because U. V. M. students are debating and because of the following facts:

The veterans defeated the Honor System this quarter, but not its ideal. In their sweeping criticism of the system they have analyzed the features of legislation which actually could prove harmful. Their opinions have been independent and formed from the truth of their own experience. Yet a great many of them are among the foremost supporters of the ideal of honor in the classroom and in life. They would perhaps agree that honor is made not born. Yet they insist that it not be shackled to a lot of regulations which they feel are contradictory. We can draw the conclusion that their denial of H. S. has been worthwhile, that their criticism will be replaced by an honest analysis and revival of H. S., participated in by the Student Body. The interest is there.

Social legislation at U. V. M. has taken an amazing turn. Many students have been led to believe that a group of radicals are bludgeoning fraternities with accusations of discrimination, dirty politics and false standards. This is quite true. But any legislation carried through to abolish discrimination against people of different races or religion has been possible by the unanimous vote of the fraternity concerned. Every sorority on the hill has voted 100 percent to do away with quotas. Such action has involved only a few meetings with representatives and the emotional display at the Religion and Life Parley. No one is forcing fraternities to drop their "natural law of choosing their own friends." The legislation comes from within the group and the goal is a changed campus attitude.

To add to our hope that the attitude at U. V. M. will change regarding fraternities, rushing this year has fostered acquaintance between Jewish and Gentile girls in sorority life. The problem of discrimination grows with segregation. We believe the freedom in rushing this year has furthered "democracy and friendliness on our campus." This leads us to believe the public repudiation of "social legislation" was based on lack of understanding the progress on this campus.

We laud the action of the fraternity critics who, instead of constantly demanding that the fraternity system be abolished, have handed in their pins, stuck to their ideals and have been more tolerant of the views of others.

The drinking rule, we have every reason to believe, will be rewritten to follow the state law and become enforceable. We have always held that to forbid students to drink at all is not only an insult to the intelligence of the student but an insult to our existing rules and regulations which are purposeful and enforceable.

We have seen a change in the classrooms at U. V. M. and in extra-curricular activities. The instruction here has been heightened by the return of veterans, by the shift in the school enrollment and the continued help and friendship of profs, old and new. We hope that the wealth of ideas, the controversies, the differences of the many age, racial, and religious groups will be absorbed in and out of the classroom to make the process of education more active and demanding for every student. The rumors and gossip, the anti-Semitic posters and the closed order of organizations ought to be lost in the shuffle.

In closing we wish to thank the administration for its regard for the freedom of the student press, for its time granted to the demanding objectors of several administration policies, and for its efficient handling of a university through the difficulties of a war and reconversion.

We ask that the students give the same freedom to the CYNIC and its policies.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

There has been a lot of talk about W. S. S. F. in the past few weeks. Now we all realize how important this drive is; W. S. S. F. is a fine thing. But our activity in this field is apt to make us forget another drive which is going on at this time — THE MARCH OF DIMES. The infantile paralysis fund is also a matter of humanity to fellow human beings. It seems strange that there has been made no provision for collection of money in the school for this worthy project.

Russian Enigma Explained by James

Russia's present diplomacy, as interpreted in the light of the past and of analogies in British and American policies today by Mr. Selwyn James, correspondent and lecturer to about 100 students and townspeople Tuesday evening, Feb. 5, in the Student Lounge, is perfectly understandable.

Mr. James opened his address with a brief review of some of the charges made against Russia in the United States, imperialism, bolshevism, atheism. Then he went back to the Russian revolution of 1917. He pointed out that Russia was then the only socialist country in the world, and that in view of the hostility of capitalism, she felt the need of allies. Trotsky and Lenin started Communist groups in foregin countries with the expressed purpose of setting up eventually, perhaps by revolution, governments more sympathetic to Russia. However, after the split which brought Stalin to power, this theory was dropped, and Russia decided to try to get along with the rest of the world as it was.

Russia, according to Mr. James, still feels alone. She is now struggling for a sphere of influence such as the U. S. has in this hemisphere and England has in Western Europe. If the U.N.O. works of course, it won't be necessary, but America is not pinning her hopes solely upon that, witness Mr. Truman's late restatement of the Monroe Doctrine, so why should Russia. Russia's methods, to be sure, have not always been exemplary. Neither have Britain's nor the United States'.

Mr. James closed with a plea for honest and intelligent thinking in the interests of world peace whether the "enigma" be Russia, or any other country. There were many interested questions from the audience before Peter Mallett '47, President of International Relations Club, and chairman, closed the meeting.

Exchange Excerpts

Items From Other Colleges

Don McRell

We prowled through lots of publications and were a little deflated and yet worried about old U. V. M. However much we may think we're having trouble there are other campuses with the same aches and pains. Popping up all over country are the familiar problems of school spirit, strong Student Government ligious and racial intolerance, Veterans housing and griping letters to the editor we were really surprised at this one from the Detroit Institute of Technology seems they are trying to boost enrollment! They're sending out faculty and st representatives to drum up business for the old alma mére.

In the Boston University News we saw this one:

"Then there was the girl who resigned from her sorority because so ties are too snobbish. Every girl she blackballed was pledged."

Note for Frosh—

Seen in the Co-Editing Column of the Massachusetts Collegian, "O the profs said he had gained all his knowledge at his mother's knee other joints."

Headlines:

In the Middlebury Campus of you know where.
"Sophs, Junior Entertain Dean With 2 Coffees" . . . Hangover, I
The Wayne University Detroit Collegian.
"Students Get Free Tickets For Messiah" . . . Aw, he gets a breaks!

At the University of Chicago, The Chicago Maroon reported the Vets pr for their housing problem. They intend to canvass the neighborhood by door-t methods for rooms; organize a housing bureau, a sort of clearing house a change; encourage a University building program; get after the City Cou grant temporary shelters in the form of old prefabricated houses; and urge s to write their Congressmen to vote for the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housin Sounds like a realistic and positive action.

The lost and found column of the Green Mountaineer from Green Mountain College carried this one: "Lost: String of pearls between Ames and Moses If found return to Moses 251." . . . Anyone look in the bullrushes?

Not so far from home . . .

We saw in the Vermont Alumni News an item that deserves at and what's more, a little response. An old alumnus . . . class of '40, J. Whalen is recovering from head wounds which left him unconsci two months! Stuck in the St. Albans Naval Hospital he wants from the old gang, and we will bet our last pearl handled fingernail that he'd like letters from the new folks 'round the campus too. Wi white walls to stare at all day, and lots of old memories he would be pleased to know we still remember him. Got time to write a few He had time to go to Saipan. P.S. girls, he's a handsome guy!

Note on the likker problem.

This is legally plagiarized from the Jaywalking column of The Plainsm down theah in 'Bama Polytech Institute.

"Probably to begin with someone will rush up and say, "Freddie, get the 'agonna spike the punch' . . . But seriously alcohol is a habit-forming drug an in such habits as drunken driving, calling Dorm III at 4 in the morning, kissin and selling text books to get likker money. Physically too, drinking gets you you become so weak that you can do little more than pull change from you to buy chasers."

Our problem is a little different, eh?

Chow time . . . but before we go, just one little teensy bit of corn?
From The Western Carolinian, St. Peter: "How did you get here?"
New Arrival: "Flu."
Bursten couldn't resist and flung at us: "You mean he opened the wi influenza?"
Bye-bye.

Prof. Pappoutsakis Appointed to National Music Organizations

The Music Department here at the University of Vermont has twice within the last few weeks been brought into national prominence through the appointment of Prof. Ippocates Pappoutsakis to two national musical organizations. The first of these is the Committee on Contemporary Music in the United States, which includes in its membership such nationally-known household words in music as Morton Gould, Howard Hanson, Roy Harris, Douglas Moore, and William Schuman. The other is an appointment as National Consultant by the Executive Committee of the Music Educators' National Conference. The duties are those of an advisor, and include undertaking certain studies, experiments and investigations, and participating in a series of specialists' deliberations in Cleveland.

Specialist In Two Fields

Mr. Pappoutsakis came to U.V.M. from the New England Conservatory of Music, where he was a member of the faculty, and acting director of the Division of School Music for the summer sessions. His musical background is unique in that it includes, both by training and experience, fitness for the field of school music and for technical, professional music, whereas most music educators are specialists only in one of the two subjects. In his training at the New England Conservatory of Music, Mr. Pappoutsakis completed the requirements for both fields, being awarded special honors in school music on the one hand, and being elected to Pi Kappa Lambda, the national honorary society for professionals, on the other. Hence, at U.V.M., he teaches such technical courses as Conducting, Instrumentation, and Theory, as well as Ear-Training, School Music Methods, and School Music Subject Matter.

Artist Plus Musician

Born in Cairo, Egypt, Mr. Pappoutsakis was for many years interested in art, as well as music, and has combined the two talents by assistance in school Dramatic departments on projects involving both musical and artistic skill. He has also studied Fencing under French and Austrian masters. It is interesting to note that he does not scorn contemporary or popular music, but appreciates it for what it is and what it intends to be.

Prominent Conductor

Conductor of the University Orchestra, Mr. Pappoutsakis has had as a background a study of the technique of eminent contemporary conductors, the teach-

Retiring Senior Staff

MARY THORNTON

Executive ability and a willingness to see a task through to the bitter end are qualities which made Spike the logical successor to Fran Donahue and subsequently the editor of the 1945-46 CYNIC which was for the first time in its history judged a first-class publication by the A. C. P.

Spike moved with her family to Burlington the fall of her Sophomore year and has been outstanding in campus activities. Prominent among these are Student Government, WAA Council and sport clubs, Business Manager of the Ariel, editor of the Freshman Handbook, and an organizer of Spanish Club, and the editor of the CYNIC. She is enrolled in the Liberal Arts curriculum and is an English major.

As recognition for her unceasing effort and unselfish participation in campus affairs Spike has earned membership in the following organizations: Sigma Gamma Sorority, All Sports Club, Staff and Sandal, and Mortar Board.

PEG DONNELLY

Known as "Button Nose" Peg Donnelly is the retiring managing editor of the CYNIC. Peg has been associated with many activities on campus throughout her college career including Student Government, Student Union, WAA, Re-evaluation Committee but the CYNIC has always had a special place in Peg's heart. Working up from scrub to reporter, then to news editor and finally managing editor Peg missed nothing. She has also taken an active part in many department clubs, and after that "famous trip to Mexico" Peg, Ginny, and Spike were instrumental in forming a Spanish club here at U. V. M.

Peg elected to Sophomore Aides and Staff and Sandal and at present is a member of All Sports Club. While participating in all these varied and time consuming activities Peg has always found time to meet the CYNIC deadline. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

IRENE FAHEY

Pride of the Irish is Irene Fahey from Bridgeport, Conn. Fahey started working on the CYNIC her sophomore year and moved up with rapidity. She is famous for writing succinct, expressive head lines. Last fall Fahey was elected to the position of Personnel Editor to take the place left vacant by Connie Brownell. To the scrubs, particularly those who were scheduled to go to the Free Press at 8 A. M., Fahey has been the source of all evil. Also during the last summer session Fahey helped keep the CYNIC going to press regularly by assuming the responsibilities of the managing editor.

Fahey has been active in many WAA sport clubs including fencing, basketball, badminton, tennis; and now wears the coveted jacket of The All Sports Club.

BOB MORRIS

That snappy sports column that you've been reading on Page 3 of the CYNIC for the past six months is the work of Bob Morris, outgoing Sports Editor. Besides writing "Sports Slants," Bob had charge of the coverage of all campus sports activities.

Beside keeping up on campus sports, both actively and as an observer while he has been in college, Bob, a Business student from Vergennes, has been a regular member of Newman Club, and has made Dean's List.

BOB ROSENBERG

The position of Business Manager (synonym, headache) of the CYNIC has been effectively handled this past year by Bob Rosenberg. Bob is a Burlingtonian, a member of Phi Sigma Delta, and is enrolled in the Business curriculum, as a preparation for law school. As Business Manager, Bob's job was to pay all CYNIC bills, collect money, and be general supervisor of finances. Bob believes that publicity should be given to the business side (the silent staff) of a newspaper, and that more of the students on the campus should be active workers on the CYNIC.

Bob's other positions in college have included the Religious Life Committee, Kake Walk program chairman, and membership in the Debating and Dramatic Clubs.

VIRGINIA CAMPBELL

"Any ideas for a feature story?" You know Ginny Campbell is always around scouting for good feature material as one of her many jobs. Ginny comes from Lyndonville, Vermont, and started working on the CYNIC her freshman year. She climbed up the scale progressively and became the Feature Editor last spring. However, the CYNIC is not the only campus organization with which Ginny has been associated. Her many activities include: Student Government, Student Court Planning Committee, Student Union Council, Health Council, WAA Sports Clubs, an organizer of the Spanish Club, and a member of the co-ed band.

Ginny was elected to both Sophomore Aides and Staff and Sandal. She is also a member of the All Sports Club and of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

JANICE COMMANDAY

The Campus Editor of the CYNIC has the important job of keeping track of all news worthy campus events, and, as such, is responsible for much of the CYNIC policy. For the past year this position has been held by Jan Commanday. Jan, who has worked on the paper since Freshman scrub days, is a Psych major and hails from New York. After graduation, she hopes to go to a school of social work.

BARBARA MORGAN

Joining the CYNIC senior staff early this fall Barbie Morgan took over the Rewrite department left vacant by the graduation of Marge Alexander in September. Barbie hails from Bennington, Vermont, and is one of the many students who took advantage of the accelerated program at the university.

During her college life Barbie has taken part in many campus activities including: Student Union, YWCA, The co-ed band and the Modern Dance Workshop. Also a literary-lite she was elected to Blue Stockings her sophomore year and since that time has continued her literary pursuits.

Working on the CYNIC Barb followed the orthodox pattern with the customary promotions until she became rewrite editor. She is a Mortar Board member and belongs to Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

MARY GREENE

That all-around gal, Mary Greene, has included in her many campus doings the co-editorship of photography, and as such, was responsible for many of those informal shots of U. V. M. life decorating the pages of the CYNIC. A Mortar Board girl and All Sports Member, and President of W. A. A., Mary is a Chem major, and despite her assertion that her ambition is to be "a super glorified dishwasher in a chem laboratory," plans to do graduate work. Greenie had fun working on the CYNIC and thinks the biggest improvement that could be made is a file for used cuts. Ask her why sometime!

Profiles of New Cynic Personalities

DOROTHY FRAZER

Dorothy Frazer, the new editor-in-chief of the CYNIC, has worked on the CYNIC since her freshman year. "Duck," as everyone knows her, began as a scrub, and then successively held the positions of reporter, feature writer, and news editor.

Duck is a Staff and Sandal, Sophomore Aides, and Kappa Alpha Theta. She has been active in W.A.A. Sports Clubs, the Home Economics Club, and was an organizer of the Faculty-Student Bull Sessions.

MARJORY NELSON

Marge Nelson, co-managing editor, comes from Woodstock, Vt., and CYNIC staff members are a tradition in her family. Marge has been active on Student Union, having served on the judiciary committee and in the capacity of second vice-president and in Student Government as an executive committee member.

Known as "Teddy" to her Alpha Chi sisters, Marge has received the additional title of the CYNIC's most efficient reporter and news editor in rapid succession. W.A.A. Council can testify to her ability as well as Sophomore Aides and Staff and Sandal.

RITA McGARRY

Rita McGarry worked up to co-managing editor the hard way via the scrub route to the Free Press, thence to the demanding duties of a news editor. A Proctor product, Rita is well known on campus for her talent and interest in activities. She has served on both Sophomore Aides and Staff and Sandal. Student Government, Student Union, and is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and Newman Club. As make-up artist of the CYNIC Rita will succeed Peggy Donnelly.

DEENA PORD

Deena Pord, a history major from Malden, Mass., is the CYNIC's new Campus Editor. Deena has worked efficiently on the paper since her freshman year. A cum laude student, she hopes to teach after graduation from U.V.M. This year she is serving as secretary of Delta Phi Epsilon and is a member of Hillel and Y.W.C.A.

DORIS LINDECRANTZ

"Lindy" is another veteran of long and conscientious service to the CYNIC. Her training in the successive capacities of scrub, reporter and finally news editor will give her an excellent foundation for her present position on the Senior Staff as Feature Editor.

"Lindy" is a tall, strawberry blonde coming to U. V. M. from Worcester, Mass. She is an active member of the Alpha Chi sorority having shared the fate of all sorority home eccers in serving on food committees, and is now the junior representative to Pan Hellenic for Alpha Chi. She is a member of the Home Ec club and of the recently-organized Student Court.

MARY MITIGUY

The CYNIC's new personnel editor is a tall, dark, and serious junior from Burlington. Mary has proven her worth on the CYNIC through her earnest and wholehearted work as a scrub, reporter, news editor and campus editor of the past summer issues.

Newman Club has been the focal point for much of Mary's activity and concern throughout her three years at U. V. M. She was elected to Staff and Sandal, the junior honorary society, last year and is the president of that organization.

VIRGINIA DONALDSON

From the nation's capital comes Virginia Donaldson, the newly elected rewrite editor of the CYNIC's senior staff. A pre-medic with a major in zoology, Gig spends much of her time in labs, struggling with the whys and wherefores of a guinea pig's super-structure.

Joining the CYNIC staff in her freshman year, Jij has worked up through the ranks of scrub, reporter and news editor to her new position on senior staff. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and is this year house president at her sorority house.

CHARLES COSTANTINO

Charles Costantino '49, was elected to fill the position held by Bob Morris.

Chuck, an accelerated pre-medic, is well versed in the duties of a sports editor. Coming to U.V.M. in the summer of 1945, he has been active in basketball, bowling league, and student government elections. A member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, Chuck has been active on the CYNIC since he entered college last summer, and has served as Bob Morris's assistant in the sports department since October.

Fort Devens Team Defeats Vermont To Tune of 57-31

Pierce, French and Stein Are High Scorers Of Vermont Quintet

Vermont went down for the third time this year at the hands of a service team last Saturday night when the Fort Devens quintet downed the Evansmen, 57-31. Elmer Leslie, a six foot six inch forward, started the ball rolling early in the game with one of his specialty shots from the corner. After a couple more of his one-hand flips the Vermont five switched from its zone defense which had been airtight until then to a man-to-man defense. At this point the service squad was on the long end of a 12-2 score and as the defense changed the Cats broke up a few plays and brought the score up to 12-8. Leslie then shook loose for another one and from then on the Vermont five was at the mercy of the high-scoring Devens forwards, Leslie and MacArthur.

For the losers Ken Pierce came up with nine markers, four from the floor and one from the charity line while French and Stein tossed in six and five respectively. Hammy Livingston and Stafford turned in some all-around floor play for the losing cause.

Coming back on the floor after intermission on the long end of a 30-12 score, the Fort Devens quintet took a breather and merely walked up and down the court. Taking advantage of this situation the locals dumped in a few quick ones. Then Leslie Inc. took over again and the lanky G. I. proceeded to rack up his total of thirty markers.

Orville Dahl to Organize New Student Personnel Department

Orville Dahl, director of the new Department of Student Personnel, arrived last Monday morning at U.V.M. as the new member of the administration staff. He is now at work on plans for organization of a department which will include the veterans' office, the admissions office, records office, housing for men, the testing bureau, vocational guidance, extension work, and placement bureau. The latter, the placement bureau, will assist and cooperate with the Deans of the different colleges in placing student and graduates in positions, centralizing and coordinating this work.

Up to 1941 Mr. Dahl was Assistant Dean of Men, alumni secretary and field representative for St. Olaf College at Northfield, Minn.

From 1941 to 1943 he was associated with the American City Bureau of Chicago and New York in that company's division of college and university fund counseling and fund raising; a position which brought him into contact with business and personnel problems in colleges and universities throughout the United States.

From 1943 to January 1, 1946, he was a lieutenant senior grade in the Navy V-12 program serving as executive officer at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; at Alma College at Alma, Mich., and as commanding officer at the University of Dubuque, Dubuque, Iowa.

The Dramatics Club is presenting a series of four programs on the lives of the composers, Chopin, Wagner, Schumann, and Stephen Foster over WCAX. The first program will be broadcast Saturday afternoon, February 23 from 4.30 to 5.00.

Thanks to Professor Long and his instigation the "Sing" was revived for everyone, good and bad voices to bellow forth sweet music. Morris Hall and his— (they're still minus a name including Bob Perry and Luke Hall gave out with "The Bells of St. Mary's" and "If I Were the Only Boy," Mason assisting and Jane Smith at the piano.
